Senator calls governor's decision to close Lincoln Hills a "day late and a dollar short!"

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

Democratic State Sen. Lena Taylor called Gov. Scott Walker's announcement he may close the troubled Lincoln Hills facility in 2019 a "day late and a dollar short on helping Wisconsin's most vulnerable populations.

"After years of neglect, and ignoring the many legislative proposals that I introduced to bring relief to juveniles and correctional officers, Governor Walker is just now getting to do his job right in time for another election bid," said Taylor in a recent

Garden Homes residents opposed to placement of planned juvenile rehabilitation center neighborhood

By Jonitha Brown

Residents in one Milwaukee community are calling for officials to halt plans to impose a juvenile rehabilitation center in their neighborhood. However, they fear their concerns could be falling upon conflicted and politically deaf

Hundreds of residents and business owners of the Garden Homes community are flooding lawmakers with emails, telephone calls and petitions demanding Milwaukee County officials stop the implementation of a program that would allow for the housing of juvenile offenders at the Bishop Creek Property located in the north side neighborhood beginning May 2018.

The facility being touted as a "rehabilitation center" and not a "juvenile prison" will house 24 offenders ages 14 to 17, who have committed serious crimes that could include robbery, auto theft, assault, battery and other un-

The center would be an alternative to the state Department of Corrections facilities at Lincoln Hills, Cooper Lake, or the Milwaukee County Youth Detention Facility. According to Milwaukee County Judge Joe Donald, "This facility is a shorter term for those kids who are not as needy as the most serious or dangerous" and that he needs "other options."

While many residents agree there should be improvements in Wisconsin's juvenile justice system; they feel it should not be done at their expense.

"I believe our politicians and Judge Donald are idealistic... but they don't live in this neighborhood," said Reverend Roger Boesch. The 82-year old resident who has resided in the community with his wife Kathleen for more than 50-years went further, "I want to be protected for the few years I have left and I don't think this institution will support that."

best-selling book, "Eyes On The Prize."—Yvonne Kemp

Boesch and his wife were just two of the dozens who echoed this sentiment during a community listening session involving the plan. Held at the proposed site and moderated by Milwaukee County Supervisor Michael Mayo, frustrated citizens passionately spoke out against the measure.

"Safety is their number one concern," according to Mayo. Once an adamant supporter of the proposed plan, Mayo now says, "I don't know where I lie on this matter. I don't know how I feel."

Mayo says originally there was major support for the proposal. Now it appears many people are beginning to waiver on the matter; particularly those who reside in the area. While addressing residents at the listening session, Mayo made it clear the measure was not final and that resident concerns would be addressed before the measure goes before a County Board Committee on January 24.

Though much of the safety concerns stem from the fact the facility will be unlocked; there will be half-a-million dollars' worth of security cameras and special doors installed.

This security investment failed to quell concerns after officials could give no guarantees that the potential youth offenders would not attempt to escape or run. According to Milwaukee County DHHS Delinquency Green Bay Packer defensive-back Ha Ha Clinton-Dix arrives at Benjamin Franklin Elementary School to the cheers of the school's cheerleaders.

GREEN BAY PACKER HA HA CLINTON-DIX LAUNCHES HA HA'S HERO HEADQUARTERS PROGRAM

Students at Benjamin Franklin Elementary School in Milwaukee now have a fun, new place to read and learn thanks to Green Bay Packers safety Ha Ha Clinton-Dix. On Tuesday morning, Clinton-Dix celebrated with students at the opening of HERO Headquarters, a community outreach program of the Ha Ha's HERO Foundation.

Sponsored by Quarles & Brady, Ha Ha's HERO Headquarters transformed

Milwaukee Y to Host 21st Annual Celebration Breakfast in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

The YMCA of Metropolitan Milwaukee will host its 21st annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebration Breakfast on Monday, January 15, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. at the Italian Community Center, located at 631 East Chicago Street in Milwaukee. The breakfast program will celebrate the life and legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and recognize local organizations dedicated to serving others, just as Dr. King did. This sold out event will also include attendees such as Wisconsin Lt. Governor Rebecca Kleefisch and Mayor Tom Barrett.

"Today we celebrate those who have demonstrated a longstanding commitment to making our community a better place for all. Now more than ever the spirit of community service can help heal our differences through a common cause—giving back and strengthening the places where we live, work and play is something we all can agree on," said Shaneé Jenkins vice president, social responsibility & strategic partnerships for the YMCA of Metropolitan Milwaukee. "Today, as we pay tribute to Dr. King and his enduring message of community service, we encourage everyone to use a space at Benjamin Franklin Elementary School into a reading oasis. The space, designed with a Green Bay Packers theme, includes 600 age-appropriate books and has walls decorated with images of Clinton-Dix playing football.

It is a comfortable space to read, filled with beanbags, carpets and chairs, with hope that it will inspire students. Providing students with a safe and comfortable place to find books removes some of the burden from the families. At Tuesday's event, Quarles & Brady gifted every student with a nylon drawstring backpack stuffed with books.

Benjamin Franklin Elementary is a pre-kindergarten through 8th grade school with approximately 350 students. Many students at the elementary school struggle with reading, and many families from the school don't have the resources to provide their children with books at home.

Rooted in his personal mission and the mission of his foundation to be a hero to kids through education, Clinton-Dix is a living witness to the impor-

this day as a call to action to get involved—in large or small ways—to make our communities better."

The event will also honor two local organizations who demonstrate a longstanding commitment to making this city a better place for all, by supporting health, wellness, diversity and inclusion. Hunger Task Force will receive the Harley-Davidson Healthy Citizenship Award, which was created to honor an organization or individual who is working to improve the health and wellness of Milwaukee's underserved. Hunger Task Force will receive the award for their commitment to working to prevent hunger and malnutrition by providing food to people in need today and by promoting social policies to achiever a hunger free community tomorrow.

Employ Milwaukee will receive The Potawatomi Hotel & Casino Diversity and Inclusion Award which recognizes an individual or group, committed to supporting and enhancing diversity and inclusion in Milwaukee. Employ Milwaukee will receive the award for their commitment to developing workforce solutions for job seekers by establishing a skilled and sustainable workforce to attract, retain, and grow diverse businesses in the city of Milwaukee and surrounding communities.

The breakfast program will also recognize the winners of this year's Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Spoken Word Contest, sponsored by Northwestern Mutual Foundation. Three finalists in each age category (5-9 years, 10-13 years and 14-18 years) were selected after writing an original spoken word piece based on the theme, "We must learn to live together as brothers or perish together as fools." "It was a great day as my HERO Foundation launched its first Ha Ha's HERO Headquarters," said Clinton-Dix. "The importance of education is something that I am passionate about, so I hope students at Benjamin Franklin Elementary can utilize the HERO Headquarters so they can grow in their reading, learning and education."

The launch of HERO Headquarters marks the first community outreach program of Ha Ha's HERO Foundation. Clinton-Dix celebrated the official launch of his foundation in October of 2017 when he raised more than $130,000 during a kickoff event at Blue Harbor Resort & Conference Center in Sheboygan, Wis.

former Corrections Secretary, off his back."

Taylor's statement came the same day the Wisconsin Department of Corrections announced it will be closing the Lincoln Hills and Copper Lake state-run youth correctional facilities in Irma.

The closing of the facilities will not be immediate, according to the Department of Corrections. The plan is to move youth to several facilities closer to most of their homes in Southeast Wisconsin.

The decision comes following an injunction secured by the ACLU of Wisconsin and Juvenile Law Center (with pro-bono assistance from Quarles & Brady) through a class action civil rights lawsuit in federal court centered on the use of solitary confinement, pepper spray, shackling, and strip searches of children. The suit was filed on behalf of youth confined in the Lincoln Hills School for Boys and the Copper Lake School for Girls. The facilities had previously been under federal investigation for a range of abuses and violations of constitutional treatment of the youth.

Over the years, Taylor has advocated for juvenile corrections reform, accountability, and expanded access for the family and community members of juveniles held at Lincoln Hills. Taylor began organizing community-based

These visits included bus visits for family and community members, programming for youth at the facility, and education opportunities including the Black History Legacy Tour in February 2016. The senator has also advocated for repeated legislative reforms including: a juvenile solitary confinement ban, transfer of juvenile corrections to the Department of Children and Families, authority for Milwaukee County to have their own juvenile hybrid facility, and proper distribution of medication to juveniles - which was approved during the 2017 biannual state budget – and many other proposals that focus on regionalized corrections models, best practices, and trauma-informed care.

In response to the administration's failure to address the ongoing crisis and to avoid harm to juveniles and correctional officers, Taylor called for two special sessions to address Lincoln Hills and Copper Lake. After failing to receive a response, she and Representative Chris Taylor (D - Madison) later introduced a bill to close Lincoln Hills and Cooper Lake within one year after the bill is Clarence Johnson, Executive Director for Wisconsin Community Services (WCS), the organization set to implement the treatment portion of the proposed facility, went further to say if one of the offenders did attempt to run, "a staff member would follow the youth through the community until police could be notified" and the offender could be again apprehended.

While safety topped the list of concerns; other factors for residents opposed to the facility included the negative stigma attached to a facility in a neighborhood and the possibility of falling property values.

Additionally, some fear this proposed plan would prompt the manufacturers operating in the area to take flight. One of the companies in the area, DRS, is in opposition of the facility being in the neighborhood.

Speaking of the corporation that hires hundreds of local workers, Vince Toney, a community block watch captain is now going door-to-door informing residents of the proposed plan and getting petition signatures.

identified by a recent U.S. Department of Justice draft report, called the Collaborative Reform Report.

The report revealed a number of deficiencies during Flynn's tenure: failure to implement community policing, failure to create a police department that reflects the diversity of the community they serve, failing to provide sufficient training, and not revising policies that led to disproportionate surveillance and stops of minority residents.

Said Taylor in a statement: "Moving forward, I hope the community and elected officials of the Common Council will have a say in the selection of our police chief and that the process is fair, transparent, and reflective of the reforms needed. Chief Flynn, your service has been appreciated, but it's time to move on."

Saying he was going to celebrate Flynn's retirement, community organizer Tory Lowe said the chief was a "huge part of the problem. God answers prayer."

WHY DO WE PRETEND JESUS WASN'T BLACK?

THE IMAGE OF JESUS NEEDS TO REVISED TO REFLECT THE TRUTH

By Corey Barnett, courtesy of worldreligionnews.com

Who was Jesus? Not the debate over whether he was a religious or historical figure, but what did Jesus really look like? Based on his most popular images Jesus is portrayed as a white man in exceptional shape.

You would think he grew up in Hollywood and works out five times a day with visits to the plastic surgeon in between. While we can joke about it, there is power in images.

The way we define our icons creates a group identity. The more we can visually connect to our religious figures the more we gain power from that connection.

Conversely, the more a group is removed from a religion the easier it becomes for dehumanization and otherization. So maybe that is the reason we rarely see Jesus as a black man.

There is clear evidence, both historically and in the Bible. "His clothing was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool."

He is described as having skin "of burnished bronze" or having an "appearance like bronze." Bible scholar James Charlesworth has stated Jesus was "most likely dark brown and suntanned." Living in Nazareth and being a descendant of the Jews, he could have an olive or light-brown complexion.

The modern image of Jesus began in the 6th century with white skin, a beard, and long hair. This was then carried over to America by European colonists.

The association of Jesus with white people, instead of black, made the practice of slavery easier.

It probably wouldn't be easy to explain why a Christian was enslaving millions of people who looked like Jesus.

This continued under Jim Crow laws, racial segregation, and continued systemic policies that both explicitly and implicitly denies black people in America the rights and opportunities they deserve. We need to create a diversity in images of Jesus. First, because it represents the diversity of Christianity.

With multiple denominations and a diverse range of worshippers, there needs to be a representation of Jesus representing that. Second, it can be used as a tool for social justice.

It can create a cognitive dissonance to have Christians who preach hate but also profess they love Jesus.

Third, it is a historical discrepancy that should be changed. What is there to be lost if we include a more diverse range of images?

It could actually increase faith and there is no religious doctrine that states that one particular image of Jesus should be used. If images have power, why not share it?

Time to Focus on School Choice in Milwaukee and Across America

Later this month, schools, homeschool groups, organizations, and individuals in Wisconsin and across America will work together to raise awareness about the importance of opportunity in K-12 educa-

National School Choice Week begins on January 21 and celebrates all types of schools and education environments for children.

Nationwide, 32,240 different events and activities – such as open houses, school fairs, and information sessions – are being planned, with an estimated attendance of 6.7 million people. In fact, 563 of those events and activities will be held in Wisconsin, and 124 are in

National School Choice Week has been celebrated every year since 2011. And even with increased awareness, many families still have questions about school choice and how it can benefit them and their

The first thing to know is that school choice isn't partisan or political. It isn't about a specific set of policy goals either. Rather, it's about parents making personal decisions for their children.

School choice means empowering individual parents with the opportunity to search for, and find, the best education environments for their individual children – regardless of where they live or how much money they make.

Finding the right school is important, because every child has unique talents, challenges, and needs. School choice isn't about finding fault with any of the schooling options available. Instead, it recognizes that while one student might thrive at a neighborhood school, another student might do better somewhere else.

Research shows that when parents actively choose schools and education environments for their children, students are more likely to succeed in school.

They are also more likely to graduate from high school, get good jobs, and participate in their communities.

School choice isn't just theoretical. Right now, more parents in Wisconsin and across America are actively choosing the education environments for their children than at any other time in history.

National School Choice Week provides parents with an opportunity to evaluate the education options available for their children. If parents are interested in switching their child to a different school, or considering homeschooling, it helps to start looking into these options in the Families in Wisconsin can choose from traditional public schools, public charter schools, public magnet schools, private schools, online academies, and homeschooling.

Because the state offers a private school choice program, parents who choose private schools for their children may also be eligible for state-supported scholarships or tuition assistance for their children.

Searching for a new school, or considering an alternative education environment, doesn't have to be daunting. Parents can start by talking to their children and other parents, researching schools online, and visiting schools in person.

A good place to start is the National School Choice Week website: www.schoolchoiceweek. com, where we provide more information about specific school choice options in the Badger State as well as listings of the tens of thousands of local and regional events happening

National School Choice Week is a time when the country comes together around the idea that every child can succeed when they find the right school fit.

This January, parents have more options and opportunities than ever before to find that right fit. For individual communities and for our country, that is a good thing.

A nationally recognized advocate for children and families, Andrew R. Campanella serves as president of National School Choice Week, the world's largest-annual celebration of opportunity in education. He lives in Northwest Florida.

That really explains why the team tanked this year.

Why are Black people still marching, and "our" organizations still rebuking

I've given up on that impossible task. Having finally come to the conclusion that we can't eliminate it. We, meaning Black people—whether preacher, teacher or politician, have not been able to take much air out of that balloon.

You surely can't legislate it away as many of us foolishly thought our politicians could. And apparently, even our prayers have fallen on deaf ears. Maybe that's because God wants the sick to heal themselves.

In a column last year, I posited that we should officially turn over the keys to the Freedom Train to Whites—so-called liberals, progressives and Christians. Let them find a cure for the cancer of racism, and its illegitimate stepchildren—discrimination, segregation and intolerance.

It's their problem, their relatives and their race (although there actually isn't a "white race" per se, but that's the false concept they relate to).

White supremacists are made, not born. They are the result of a daily die of prejudice, racism and cultural nuances. It's time for the chef to change the menu, instead of thinking the waiter has control.

Why are Millennials so trusting as to put all of their business on Facebook and other social media? Don't they realize the consequences—couples break ing up because one of the parties announces their cheating on FB; law enforcement gathering evidence from these fools lying in a bed of cash, or smiling next to a rock or needle; holding an AK-47. Or maybe we should be glad the fools don't know any better.

One of the most responded to FB linkages asks the question "why Milwaukee doesn't have a Black mayor?"

My response last week was no one has stepped forward (with the exception of Joe Davis who ran a horrible campaign). Black Milwaukeeans are generally politically impotent, and culturally deficient.

The question posed does not bring to the forefront the issue of whether we need, or would do better under a Black mayor, but given the fact that Black Milwaukeeans lead the nation in seven negative social indicators, the consensus is that we need to do what the Green Bay Packers are doing after another failing season. Oh, yeah, let us not forget that a Black quarterback didn't change their fortunes, did it?

Is there a movie coming out in 2018 that doesn't co-star Samuel L. Jack-

Are you as tired as I am of seeing commercials with biracial couples? I know it's the "latest fad" and has provided income for 50 million biracial children who now get residuals for trying to look like they belong to the Black and White television family, but damn, give me a break. If there were that many mixed couples in America, racism wouldn't be a problem.

What would America look like today had president Andrew Johnson beer removed from office in 1868? Don't know your history?

Johnson assumed office after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln and quickly reversed every civil rights law and program intended to "integrate" the former African slaves into American society.

From an African American perspective, Johnson did more to alter our history, to send us down the road of hatred, segregation and bigotry than any president in history did.

A self-described bigot, Johnson was impeached for firing the secretary of war without congressional approval. Since there was no vice president at the time, Schuyler Colfax, the speaker of the house would have assumed office Colfax was the polar opposite of Johnson; he was a strong advocate for equality and would have used the power of his office to combat bigotry and discrimination, but would have given us our 40 acres and a mule as part of our

The impeachment of Johnson, to end Reconstruction, failed by one vote. Why isn't that scenario taught in school? In fact, why isn't the truth taught

Riding a new wave: From 2017 to 2018

Two Thousand-seventeen was the year I learned how to be strong. It was the year I grew from a young lady to a woman. I learned so much about relationships and how important it is to keep people around who have your best interest at heart. 2017 was the year I realized many things about life, people and the world in which we live.

Typically, I don't make New Year resolutions. Sometimes I find that expectations lead to disappointments. I did, however, create a list of a few things that I would like to execute in the new year. These are things I believe can be used this year, and the years to come.

#1. Treat others the way I want to be treated.

I am a firm believer in karma. What goes around, comes around. I've learned that everyone will not like you and there will be some who may not treat you exactly how you want to be treated. That is ok. The issue is not with you. It is with them. This past year, I learned that there is no shame in treating people with the same dignity, respect and love that you wish to receive. There is strength in being able to do the right thing, when there are other tempting options around.

#2. Cherish Genuine relationships

You don't know what you have until it's gone. This past year, many people have lost their lives and relationships were tarnished. In the new year, I want to make sure that I cherish the people in my life. I want to continue to build strong and meaningful relationships, making sure that the people I'm building with know that I appreciate them.

#3. Live for Self

There have been times where it has been so hard for me to say "no". I was scared that I would disappoint people or let them down. If I have learned anything in 2017, it is to live for self.

When I say that, I don't mean selfishly. Living for self means to do things that make you happy. Live in a way that won't make a negative impact on your life. Sometimes we tend to cater to people who aren't as considerate as we are and it ends up putting us in the deep end. This new year, I plan to be strong enough to make decisions that will ultimately benefit my life, health and spirit in the long run.

#4. Be a leader

One of the most important things that I want to take into this new year, is being a leader. 2017 brought me many leadership positions, assignments and projects. I've had the opportunity to inspire, guide and lead many individuals Although I enjoyed every moment, realized that there were some things I can improve, such as, taking my time and putting in good quality work. Quality is always better than quantity.

I could also get in the habit of managing my time better and being in tune with the bigger picture. This year I plan on strengthening my leadership skills raising the bar, and doing everything that has my name on it to the best of my ability.

#5. Don't take life too seriously

At first glance, this last point may make you think that life, itself, is not serious. Life is very serious, but sometimes, the way we look at life can be too serious to the point where we miss the lovely smell of the roses. In my world everything always has to be picture perfect. This often leaves me in a place where I am hard on myself. There have been many times where I miss the smell of the coffee and the roses. This year, I want to continuously remind myself that it is ok to sit back and relax. I want to make sure that I am not so hard on myself when things don't go as planned.

#6. Give Back

Every time I open up my mouth to complain or be ungrateful about something, I think about people who are in worst situations than that of my own Being in tune with the constant struggle for other individuals, has placed an undying passion in my heart to give back to my community.

Whether it be the black community, or a mixed community, there is no color on unity. The world has gone too deep into being for self and not building with those who are around. This year, if I have it and someone is in need, I plan to support those in my community, regardless of their sexual preference religion, skin color or beliefs.

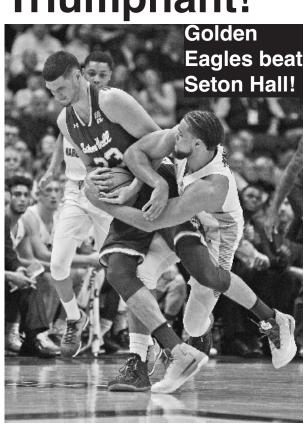

As the years go by, I continue to live and learn. I continue to implement values and positive strategies to handle everyday tasks. Last year has prepared me for this year and this year will prepare me for the next, and so on and so forth. I wish each and everyone one of you a long and healthy life in this year to come. —Paishance welch, Millennial Magic!

versus a sanitized, generic version of "HIS-Story"?

There is a direct corralation between Black America's cultural impotence and the socialization process.

Our children are socialized to believe that bigots were American heroes that God ordained, approved genocide and the worse form of slavery known to mankind, and the permanent entrenchment of White Supremacy.

Schools don't teach our children their true history, of the importance of Africa to the sciences, that they are the descendants of the creators of math, science, and medicine. History might mention the who, but not the "why" and "how." As a result, we reject who we really are and adopt European standards and culture, including hatred of ourselves.

How many of you feel as strongly as I do about reestablishing our link to the Motherland? For me it's not a fad, it's an imperative, and unquenched hunger that can only be filled through the nutrients from the fruit of Mother Africa

I was blessed to visit the continent years ago, and felt a special kinsmanship while there that can't be fully explained. It was home. Not just a place, but a womb.

The next step on the journey is to find out where my people came from and now live. I want to figure out who my relatives are.

That's why for Kwanzaa this year I purchased DNA kits for my wife and I.

African Americans are the only people on this planet whose history, language and religion was severed like a cultural umbilical cord.

We have been forced to identify (at least those of us who haven't permanently abandoned our culture) with a continent versus a country, if not a tribe, because that important fact—linkage—was stolen from us.

There was a reason life originated in Africa, why we were the first people—His/Her chosen. Why our ancestors were selected to be the curators of math, science and medicine. Our culture is rooted in monotheism, communalism and what today is described as the principles of African Americans will never be whole until we reconnect. And we will not be empowered until we learn who we are...and empower ourselves!
