Services held for noted educator and Fire and Police Commissioner Robert Harris

Funeral services were held Monday at All Saints Catholic Church for Robert Harris, Jr., the first African American high school basketball referee in Wisconsin and the second African American to serve on the Milwaukee Fire and Police Commission, where he played a key and vocal role at a pivotal time in the Commission's history.

He was 90. Harris dedicated his life to education and improving the lives of Milwaukeeans.

He was remembered as an advocate, mentor, leader, and model of commitment to community. He was also known for his generosity.

Because of his mother's illness and father's work responsibilities, Harris was raised in the Milwaukee County Children's Home and then in foster care.

A Korean War veteran, Harris was a Golden Gloves boxer and Army Olympic Welterweight Champion of the Pacific.

After initially being denied entrance to the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee School of Education because he was Black, Harris eventually became the School of Education's first African American student.

Robert (Bob) Harris, Jr.

Harris received both bachelor's and master's degrees at UWM, and completed a Ford Fellowship doctoral program at UW-Madison.

He was later appointed to the UWM Board of Visitors, where he remained an emeritus member.

His wife, Mary Ann, and daughters Patrice and Roberta recalled stories of Harris' impact as an educator and coach, recounting the countless times men approached and thanked him for playing a pivotal role in changing the course of their lives.

Harris's professional and personal contributions to the community are reflected in the roles he served: Board chair and director of the Milwaukee Police Athletic League, principal of St. Thomas Aquinas School, principal at Milwaukee Urban Day School, associate director of the Herb Kohl Milwaukee Youth Foundation, assistant professor at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, supervisor of Milwaukee Public Schools Recreation and Community Education Division, assistant principal at West Division High School, teacher with Milwaukee Public Schools, football coach at North Division High School, a member of the board of directors for Messmer High School and the Central City Catholic Schools.

Harris was also co-chair of arts, recreation and culture task force for Milwaukee Goals 2000.

Among the many honors Harris received were: 2002 FBI Director's Community Leadership Award, 2002 UWM Alumni Citizenship Award, 2004 Fellowship Open Award for outstanding community service, 2004 YMCA's Men's Club award for contributions to the community and Wisconsin's youth, the 2009 Greater Milwaukee Foundation's William C. Frye Award for making Milwaukee a better place, and the 2014 induction into the North/Lincoln Hall of Fame.

Harris is survived by his wife, daughters, and foster daughter Andrea Dean, grandson Troney Shumpert, three great-grandchildren and a host of loving relatives and friends.

Health Commissioner Bevan Baker resigns amidst revelations of mismanagement in lead prevention program

Compiled by
MCJ Editorial Staff

Milwaukee Health Department Commissioner Bevan Baker, the highest ranking appointed African American city official, resigned last week after mismanagement was revealed in the department's Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention (CLPP) program.

The resignation was announced Friday by Mayor Tom Barrett during a city hall news conference.

The CLPP program is responsible for handling approximately 3,000 annual cases submitted to the city by health care providers that show elevated lead levels in Milwaukee children.

Bevan Baker

However, the mayor said there are no health department records to show it sent out letters to approximately 8,000 families of children with elevated lead levels dating back to 2015.

He added the children who tested positive should have also received results from the testing clinic.

The mayor said he or the city can't say with certainty to residents that all of the families of the tested children received those letters.

As a precaution—it is unclear whether or not the mismanagement occurred consistently—Barrett said the city will send approximately 8,000 letters to the affected families, even those who received test results.

Barrett hinted there might have been a break-down in the computer program that generates the letters, though he did not elaborate. The mayor said he learned of the problem last week Thursday from a health department staff member.

Though the mismanagement does not rise to the level of criminal activity, the mayor said there will be disciplinary action. However, he declined to discuss personnel matters beyond Baker's resignation.

Former health commissioner Paul Nannis will serve as interim head of the department while the city conducts a national search for a new commissioner.

Baker served as commissioner of health since 2004. Before his appointment, he served as the department's chief operating officer from 2001 to 2004.

In a joint statement, the Common Council said it intends to investigate the matter and that they hold the mayor accountable for what happened.

"This is an egregious public health failure that was in direct noncompliance with procedures put forth by Common Council resolution," the statement notes.

"We will move forward to hold the executive branch accountable for this very serious failure and we will investigate in depth to determine what processes, procedures, or other matters, if any, have been ignored, not complied with, or have been mishandled by the Health Department. The protection of our children must remain our highest priority.

"This marks a new day in the Common Council's dealings with this administration with regard to policy, in general, and with appointments, in particular," the statement warned. "We will exercise a new level of scrutiny and we will demand a new level of accountability.

"Dr. King, one of the most influential leaders to make an impact on America, left a legacy that will never be forgotten. Dr. King's words of wisdom and everlasting hope has left future generations with hope. His legacy means a lot, not only to myself, but the other advocates and leaders that make America what it is today. America wouldn't be America without him."

"With all of the changes today, both good and bad, Martin Luther King, Jr. Day means that there is still hope to improve tomorrow. It means that optimism exists and that there is always a light at the end of a dark road. Martin Luther King, Jr. Day means that all change can be positive."

Destiny Scott-Dyson

"As I reflect on MLK Day, I am grateful for all of the things he's done to better the Black community, and how he paved the way for other leaders and activists to have a voice. The issues that are happening in 2018 shows us how far we have come, but also how far we have to go to reach his dream."

Public Notice for an Emergency Research Study of Cardiac Arrest In Southeast Wisconsin

Researchers at the Medical College of Wisconsin are studying the best way to care for adults who have been successfully treated from out-of-hospital cardiac arrest.

This message is a public notice of a research study of adults successfully treated from out-of-hospital cardiac arrest, which is when a person's heart stops beating. The study will compare two standard hospital treatments for a person after successful treatment from out-of-hospital ventricular fibrillation cardiac arrest. (an irregular heart rhythm that does not pump blood). The goal of this research is to help more people live and reduce brain damage after cardiac arrest. The study will begin February, 2018 in Milwaukee County, Wisconsin.

What happens during cardiac arrest?

Cardiac arrest means that a person's heart stops beating. When this happens, blood does not reach important organs like the brain, lungs, or kidneys. This can injure these organs. Typically, emergency services start cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) until the heartbeat is normal again. When the heartbeat is normal again, people are then taken to the hospital for further treatment. In the hospital, a person will either first go for a heart procedure or first go to the intensive care unit (ICU).

Why do we need to do this research?

Right now, researchers are not sure whether a person would be helped by a heart procedure (cardiac catheterization) or not. Adults with a known blockage in the artery of their heart quickly have a heart procedure (cardiac catheterization) to remove the blockage and restore blood flow to their heart. There is no good test in adults successfully treated from out-of-hospital ventricular fibrillation cardiac arrest and a normal ECG (heart wave test) to decide who is having a blockage and who is not. About half of people do have a blockage and about half do not. Right now, people with a normal ECG may or may not have the heart procedure. It is unknown which standard of care is better. This research study is comparing whether having the heart procedure or not is better for people with a normal ECG. People in this study will be randomly chosen to have one of these two standards of care. All people will receive one of these two standards of care for cardiac arrest. The researchers will find out if more people live or have less brain damage if they first receive the heart procedure or first go to the ICU.

Are there risks to this research?

All research contains potential risks. Anyone who has cardiac arrest and needs CPR has risks if they are in this study or not. The risks from cardiac arrest include damage to the brain, heart, or multiple organs, infections, seizures, another cardiac arrest, and death. Potential risks of the heart procedure (cardiac catheterization), include heart attack, stroke, injury to the artery used in the procedure, tear in the heart or heart artery, fluid or blood around the heart, bleeding requiring blood transfusion, kidney damage, and death. Less than 1 in 100 people having the heart procedure have one of these risks. There is a risk that a person having the heart procedure may not have a blockage in the heart arteries. There is also a risk if a person does not first go to have the heart procedure and they needed it. All people in both groups will receive one of these two standards of care. Every precaution will be taken to assure safety.

All information obtained from this study will remain private and confidential. The findings from this study will be presented at meetings and published in scientific journals to be useful to others. Information that could identify a person will not be used.

What is the benefit of this research?

This study may help people in the study and other people in the future. There is potential that one of the standard treatments will increase a person's chance of living or reduce brain damage, but that benefit is not guaranteed. There are other benefits to both groups in the study. The potential benefits from a person first getting the heart procedure is potentially less heart damage or knowing that there is no blockage of the heart arteries. The potential benefits from not getting the procedure and first going to the ICU include stabilizing a person's breathing, blood pressure, and body temperature before having the heart procedure, if needed, at a later time.

Adults treated at Froedtert Hospital may be in this study.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency and the hospital staff have to act quickly to treat a person. Researchers will attempt to get informed consent when possible. However, there may be situations where there is no time to get permission. People with cardiac arrest are usually unconscious and cannot agree to join. In studies like this, a person's consent may not be possible. This is called an exception from informed consent under emergency circumstances. That means, if you do not want to be in this study, you must request that you not be included. You will be given a bracelet or necklace to wear that tells the hospital staff that you are not part of the study. You will still get standard treatment. The Office for Human Research Protections within the Department of Health and Human Services requires that researchers notify communities in cases when consent is not possible due to an emergency (Title 45, Section 46). Researchers will also let you know when the study is done.

Please contact us if you have questions about the risks and benefits of this study, exception from informed consent under emergency circumstances, or to get opt-out jewelry if you do not want to be in this study.

If you have questions or concerns about this study or you do not want to be in the study, contact Dr. Tom P. Aufderheide, either by phone (414-805-6493), mail (Department of Emergency Medicine, 9200 W. Wisconsin Ave., Froedtert Hospital East, PV1, Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53226, email RRC@mcw.edu), or visit the website at www.mcw.edu/access. If you do not want to participate, you will receive jewelry (such as a bracelet or necklace) to wear for the hospital staff to know. If you have concerns, your feedback may be used to change the study.

All Ages Celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr.

“We love putting smiles on people’s faces...“It’s our way of keeping Dr. King’s dream alive.” —Artistic Director Jo’Niece Monk

Even in the back row, the audience at St. Ann Center for Intergenerational Care-Bucyrus Campus was feeling the vibe of the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Day celebration.

From the stirring rendition of “Lift Every Voice and Sing,” performed by the staff, clients and children at the all-ages day care, to a heartfelt reading of the “I Have a Dream” speech, the program honored the life and legacy of the civil rights leader on his 89th birthday.

“When I was a child in Mississippi, Black people had to sit in the back of the bus,” an adult client told a wide-eyed group of four-year-olds from the center’s childcare program.

“Now we can sit anywhere we want to, and we can take that bus just as far as we want to go. Martin Luther King, Jr. made it so.”

Inspired by King’s words, several of the clients shared dreams they had for themselves and Milwaukee. One dreamed of being able to walk again.

Another dreamed of being independent and getting her own apartment. Winning the Powerball was on more than one list.

A highlight of the program was an energetic performance by Our Nation for Youth Arts & Healing (ONFYAH).

Ranging in age from four to 19, the talented dance and drumming academy thrilled the audience with the traditional African Dundunba dance, demonstrating strength and courage.

“We love putting smiles on people’s faces,” said the group’s Artistic Director Jo’Niece Monk. “It’s our way of keeping Dr. King’s dream alive.”

The 7 Biggest Mistakes Pastors Make When Turning Sermon Series into Books

CHARLOTTE, N.C., /Christian Newswire/ -- After producing and publishing more than 200 Christian books, Neil Eskelin, president of LifeBridge Books, offers his advice to ministers who have a sermon series they want to see published as a book.

Here are the five most common mistakes:

1. Their writing lacks “you” power. Since the goal is to help readers, try to use the word “you” ten times as often as “I.”
2. They forget they have a personality. To develop a relationship with the reader, sprinkle your manuscript with personal stories—at least one or two per chapter.

3. They fail to grab the writer’s attention. After writing a chapter, pull out the best illustration and move it to the beginning. Start strong.

4. They need to use a thesaurus. If you are writing on faith, vision, or any particular theme, don’t use the same word over and over in successive sentences or paragraphs. Find synonyms to get your point across. Also, if you use an unusual word, once or twice in a book is enough.

5. They need to give the reader a break. We see far too many long passages. Readers are easily bored, so keep sentences and paragraphs short. Also, we like to use a subheading on at least every other page.

6. Their title lacks life. The book we produced for author Benny Hinn was originally to be titled, “The Person of the Holy Spirit.” We changed it to “Good Morning, Holy Spirit,” and it sold several million copies. The new title had imagination and life!

7. They design their own book cover. Get a pro to pro-

PERSPECTIVES

Trump the newest member of the racist presidents club!

No, Isaac Newton (Farris), there's no uncertainty. No misunderstanding. And no misquoting. Donald Trump is a racist.

You may be Martin Luther King, Jr.'s nephew, and maybe you're named after a genius, but your comments about Trump being misunderstood and ignorant ("not a racist in the traditional sense," whatever that means), proves that blood lines don't always carry positive DNA traits, and merely naming a child after someone of superior intellect doesn't make them smart.

In fact, sir, 45IQ is not only a racist, he's a bigot, and as such holds membership in the most powerful political fraternity in the world.

In other words, President 45IQ is in good company.

The fraternity of racist presidents includes early American "heroes" like Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, and even Abe Lincoln.

In fact, chances are most members of the POTUS fraternities of the 18th and 19th centuries were racists. As were several elected after the invention of the telephone, including Woodrow Wilson, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

That stain on the American fairy tale is not readily known, readily acknowledged in the His-story books or on Fox News, the Disney Channel or BET. But in truth, there was a time when being a racist was part of the litmus test for the presidency. And that belief overshadowed a public pronouncement against slavery.

That might sound like a contradiction, but the truth is you can be both "liberal" and racist.

In other words, you can morally object to the institution of slavery, yet philosophically believe the enslaved are inferior beings.

Still need to clean off your lenses to see the truth? Read on...

By most estimations, America is defined by the eloquent words of Thomas Jefferson.

Jefferson is considered the architect of democracy, one of the pillars of our Republic and an icon for independence, equality and justice.

Jefferson publicly opposed slavery, but he was in fact a slave owner, a dichotomy that can't be discounted or wished away, but a fact that validates my point.

In fact, by today's social paradigm, Jefferson would have been considered a rapist as well as a racist.

During his era, however, it was not against the law to rape a Black slave--male or female-- because they were not considered "fully human", or as most Americans at the time were propagated to believe, we were of an inferior race, along with Native Americans, Asians and Latinos. (Not to mention polar bears, elephants and buffalo (soldiers).

As Jefferson wrote in his White Supremacist handbook, 'Notes on the State of Virginia':

"I advanced it, therefore, as a suspicion only, that the Blacks, whether originally a distinct race, or made distinct by time or circumstance, are inferior to the Whites in the endowments of both body and mind."

In case you don't understand colonial English, Jefferson's remarks made him racist.

In the same book, he took Trump's racist comments about shi..holes' to the next level by referring to African nations as "barbaric."

There are those who for political and cultural reasons want to project the founding fathers as unblemished heroes of the highest moral integrity. They want only for you to know Jefferson opposed slavery and envisioned a country where all men are created equal.

He did. But Africans were excluded in Jefferson's template because we were inhuman--we were chattel, animals.

Thus, Jefferson's opposition to slavery in general, and to the Slave Trade Act of 1807 was consistent with that philosophy and contradiction.

As, truth be told, while he fought the slave trade, he supported a domestic slave enhancement policy as an alternative that enriched slaveholders through breeding. Maybe that explains why he forcibly impregnated Sally Hemming's so often. Slave babies were worth big bucks. Even if they were your own.

As TJ noted in 1820, "I consider a woman who brings children every two years as more profitable than the best man on the farm."

Since most early American presidents were slave owners, it goes without saying—but I will anyway—they were bigots.

James Madison, James Monroe and, of course, George Washington, were among the presidents who built empires literally off the raw backs of African captives.

And I assume it's no coincidence that Trump's favorite and most admired president was Andrew Jackson, a slaveholder whose place in history is defined by the Battle for New Orleans and the Indian Removal Act.

During his tenure, Jackson not only espoused racial superiority over Africans, but enacted policies of genocide against Native Americans.

Jackson was also, at one time, the head of the U.S. Army, and it was in that capacity that he led troops to massacre run-away slaves and Seminole Indians at the battle of Fort Negro.

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

Never heard of it? You know what they say about hiding the truth from African Americans in books...If you read enough, you'll find it. But had Jackson had his way, you wouldn't be able to ignore today the greatest gift a government can provide---free education.

But Jackson's Hitler endorsed policies paled in comparison to the acts of Lincoln's vice president, Andrew Johnson.

As president, Johnson set back civil rights 1,000 years, and for African Americans, he was the worst POTUS in American history.

He not only rescinded crucial aspects of Reconstruction, but also propagated policies that led to a Nazi-like paradigm against people of color.

He essentially created a state of neo-slavery and oppression in the south as part of a deal to reunite (make America great again) the nation after the Civil War. He did so fully cognizant of how history would portray him. And he smiled at that thought.

Said Johnson prior to the Civil War: "If you liberate the Negro, what will be the next step? Blood, rape, and rapine will be our portion. You can't get rid of the negro except by holding him in slavery."

MILLENNIAL VOICES

My Millennial Resolutions

As the New Year approaches rapidly, now is the time for a lot of Millennials to begin their annual reflecting about the changes they would like to make. New Year's resolutions for a lot of people are a way to motivate themselves to accomplish more than the year before, a promise to themselves of sorts. For me, this year I have compiled a list of not only resolutions for myself but also for the world in general as we approach 2018.

World Peace

I hope to see a world that's willing to change, not just spiritually but also with the way that we treat one another as individuals. I hope to see a world that accepts each other for who we are, and not just for what we look like. We are all human, we all deserve respect and love as human beings. NO MORE BULLYING PLEASE.

Taking Mental Illness Seriously

I hope that in 2018 we take mental illness more seriously. It seems that it's usually disregarded, unless it's someone from our own family that's suffering. Mental illness, especially in our community, is something to be taken very seriously and to be treated with the respect it deserves. If you know someone who suffers

Inclusive Unity in 2018 for the Black Community

The Black community is often seen as one that is in need of unification. Many describe this lack of unification as the key issue that is holding the community back from truly succeeding.

When we consider what this success looks like, we contribute certain factors such as buying from more black owned businesses and lifting one another to that definition.

For 2018, adding inclusivity to that definition of unity would benefit the Black community. We should uplift all Black people, and do away with excluding those who don't fit a more conservative and religious mold.

To thrive as a community, one must realize that their community is made up of a broad range of individuals. Unity without inclusivity is just exclusivity.

We should uplift our single mothers without shaming them for their single status. We should do away with homophobic tendencies as black folks exist in all forms, and not just as heterosexuals.

Let's embrace those who don't attend church or have religious beliefs. Those who choose to embrace their sexuality without slut shaming them.

The Black community has come a long way and has survived the Jim Crow era and slavery. Let's continue to build on our community's foundation by adding those who may be living on the outskirts of what's considered to be an acceptable lifestyle.

When we hear the word, "Woke", it's often the black community that is at the forefront of this movement. Our 'wokenes' stems from our first hand understanding of police brutality and the residual effects of systematic racism.

If we are to continue to remain as a united force against these and other issues that plague our community, we are going to need everyone, and not just those who most closely match our own ideals. —Sarah Thomas

Johnson temporarily changed his tune to become Lincoln's vice president, but after Abe's assassination, he said,

"As for the negro I am for setting him free but at the same time I assert that this is a white man's government...If whites and blacks can't get along together arrangements must be made to colonize the blacks (that is, send them to Africa)."

Speaking of "Not So Honest Abe," he represents the greatest contradiction and misrepresented president in American His-story.

Prior to his election to the nation's highest office, Abe proclaimed, "Negro equality! Fudge! How long, in the government of a God, great enough to make and maintain this Universe, shall there continue knaves to vend, and fools to gulp, so low a piece of demagogism as this."

If that quote was not enough to alter your assumptions about the "great emancipator," consider this: "I will say then that I am not, nor ever have been in favor of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races, that I am not nor ever have been in favor of making voters or jurors of Negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with white people; and I will say in addition to this that there is a physical difference between the white and black races which I believe will forever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality."

"And inasmuch as they cannot so live, while they do remain together there must be the position of superior and inferior, and I as much as any other man am in favor of having the superior position assigned to the white race."

Now you could infer from that quote that Lincoln was merely being political, saying any and everything to everybody to get elected, as most candidates do. But the reality is, you can speak with forked tongue as the Natives used to say—and be assumed to be liberal one minute, and racist the next.

Lincoln, Jefferson and other "founders" of this great country did so. Easily.

from a mental illness, be the hand and ear that they need, not the one that avoids them.

Taking care of the Physical body and Spirit

I personally hope to take better care of my body whether mentally, physically, or spiritually. Drinking more water, working out, praying, practicing the art of meditation and relaxing in order to soothe the soul, are all essential tips to getting it done.

Success in All Endeavors

I wish nothing but success and prosperity to everyone in the world. To all that are graduating soon, or maybe have a new business venture upcoming, you have my undying support. I also pray for everyone, I hope that you all have a great New Year and you all remain safe throughout it. —Quardeay Julien

Your Growth Matters in 2018!

At last, 2018 has arrived. We've made it through another year and it's time to celebrate. This is the time of year where everyone craves for a fresh start. Why? Simply because we have been given a new beginning.

Last year, we experienced many difficulties, highs and lows. There were days that we were overwhelmed with the things that didn't go quite as planned. There were days when we just wanted to give up; days that felt like things couldn't be any worse.

But the great part about all of the chaos of 2017, is the fact that we made it through. It's over. It's done with. What's more important is focusing on right now. What's important, is the fact that now is the time to give yourself another chance.

I believe one of the biggest hurdles of going into a new year with new goals is our unwillingness to give up the things that held us back the previous year. Setting goals is tremendously important when it comes to prepping for a new year, but the problem typically lies in our unwillingness to sacrifice.

If we truly want to see a new year with a new and better outcome than before, we have to be willing to give up something that held significance to us. This could be a person, friend, activity, habit, or even environment. Either way, the sacrifice has to come from a place of value.

As cliché as it sounds, if you want to see different results, you have to be willing to do something different. So, I ask you, in 2018, what are you willing to give up? What were the things that held you back in 2017? What kept you going in 2017? What will keep you going in 2018? Did you make your list of goals a reality last year and if not, why not?

Dig deep into your current lifestyle to find the activities that need to change. In 2017, who did you give your time to, knowing they didn't deserve it? What did you give your energy to that wasn't so beneficial? Who did you keep around you, that pushed you to complete your goals?

Begin to think about these questions so that you can set the bar strong this week. Self-reflection is imperative for execution. So, don't be afraid to take an honesty moment for yourself.

Your personal growth matters!

And, not surprisingly, the American cancerous DNA was passed down to their successors in the 20th century.

For "political" reasons, most didn't hang their white sheets on public hooks. But that didn't mean they were "hiding" their agendas.

Take President Woodrow Wilson for example.

He invited bigoted friends to the White House in 1915 for a screening of "Birth of a Nation" (originally called the "Clansman," as in Ku Klux). That film was considered to be the preeminent propaganda message for White Supremacy at the time.

Calvin Coolidge signed an immigration bill that would have made Trump proud. He said afterwards that "America must be left to Americans." I don't think he was referring to Native Americans.

Incidentally, the bill was authored by a reported Klansman who happened to be a Democrat.

FDR is considered a champion of the left for his advocacy of the New Deal, minimum wage, social security and unions. But he did everything in his power to exclude Black Americans from those programs.

And of course, Roosevelt's executive order interning Japanese "Americans" in prison is considered by many as one of the most flagrant acts of bigotry by an American president.

Roosevelt did not believe Black

Americans were intelligent enough to fly planes in WWII. It was his wife, Eleanor, who forced him to launch the Tuskegee Airman.

FDR's policy in WWII kept most Black army troops segregated and in the supportive roles out of fear the "nigras" would run from battle.

Nonetheless, FDR's leadership stopped German from becoming the official language of the United States.

Dwight D. Eisenhower once told Chief Justice Earl Warren that he could appreciate why racist southerners who opposed school desegregation didn't want to have their "sweet little girls sit in school alongside some "big black buck". (A five-year-old big buck? Sign him up, I say.)

Many would be shocked by my revelations and accusations. But I'm not sorry for bursting your "His-torical" bubble, particularly as we approach Black History Month.

But it should be taught in February (January, July and September as well) that most early American presidents were slave owners, which is the penultimate example of White Supremacy.

Slavery built this country. Bigots oversaw that construction.

It was necessary, at least to some so-called Christians, to justify the enslavement and cruel and inhuman treatment of African captives by asserting that they were inferior creatures. Thus, by any definition, those who held slaves were White Supremacists, and those who turned their backs, including clerics, were accessories before, during and after the fact.

Uncle Isaac would have you believe those who say Trump's declarations that poor African nations were "sh..holes" isn't by itself racist. But his belief that Whites from Norway would be a better fit for citizenship is.

Isaac also tried to explain away 45's statement by suggesting he's an elitist who looks down on everyone, and his positions are not about race, but class.

I agree, he is an elitist and a chauvinist and a narcissist, and can't relate to the conditions of the poor, women, minorities, the elderly, veterans, college students, middle class, homosexuals, activists, rappers, dogs and cats.

But he's also a racist, and as president is in a prime position to follow in the footsteps of Johnson by setting back civil rights another 1,000 years and creating an atmosphere of hate and animosity. He could very well, as many fear, start a second Civil War.

I have lived among racists my entire life; it's hard to navigate without bumping into them. Some look like me.

Racism, as defined in the Holt Dictionary, is the belief that your race is superior to another, or that theirs is inferior by virtue of intellect, or status. Bigotry is the exploitation of a racist agenda.

In other words, you're a racist if you look down on the ants and a bigot if you step on them.

I don't confuse racism with prejudice. The guy who fears his property values will go down if a Black person moves next door is prejudice. That same person who believes we are pathologically predisposed to crime, lazy, or intellectually inferior as reflected in the academic achievement gap is a racist. And if he tries to physically stop a Black person from dating his daughter, or fights for a law to ban interracial marriage, he's a bigot.

Trump, 45IQ, has the power to do that. Or believes so.

Health Commissioner Baker resigns amidst revelations of mismanagement in lead prevention program

The city's website notes as of 2015, 11.5 percent of Milwaukee children tested were reported to have blood lead levels at the reporting threshold of five micrograms per deciliter.

The city reports that since 2003, the number of children testing positive at the five micrograms per deciliter level has declined by 70 percent.

The major cause of elevated lead levels in Wisconsin and other cities is caused by lead paint and Milwaukee, going back to the administration of former Mayor John Norquist, has made great strides combatting that problem. The more recent problem cities have discovered — in the wake of the Flint crisis — has been elevated lead levels due to lead pipes used in older neighborhoods and homes, though experts are still debating over how serious the problem is.

In June of 2017, Gov. Scott Walker announced that 35 municipalities received a total of $13.8 million to remove lead service lines. Of those municipalities, Milwaukee received the largest award at $2.6 million.

Later that same year, the Common Council beefed-up the city's existing recommendations with a resolution related to lead exposure and safety. The strengthened resolution clarifies who is at risk for lead exposure and how early and often children should be tested. It also clarifies the most effective means to protect people from lead in water.

Prior to the resolution's passage, the Health Department (MHD) considered children under six and pregnant or breastfeeding women to be at risk from lead exposure; the resolution added women of childbearing age (15-45) to that pool.

Previously, MHD followed guidance from the Wisconsin Department of Health Services regarding how often young children should be tested for lead exposure. DHS recommends children be tested three times before the age of three and children under six be tested if they have had no prior tests, or have a history of lead exposure or high risk of exposure.

The resolution directs health providers to test "infants and children up to the age of six" at least once a year. It also recommended a NSF/ANSI Standard 53 certified filter, which removes 99 percent of lead, as "the most thorough means of lead-water safety."

And even if he's not a racist, or bigot in the "normal sense," as King's nephew is trying to convince people as he seeks to become the Token White 'House Negro,' 45IQ is dangerous by virtue of his elitism, ignorance and immaturity.

How he will be portrayed in "History" is unknown. We will put his picture above the definition of racist in ours, because he epitomizes that noun (which I hope doesn't soon become a verb).

And had your uncle survived the supreme act of racist bigotry, his assassination, he would have told you so Isaac.

Shem Hotep.

In Re: The marriage of Petitioner: JONATHAN COLBY and Respondent: STEPHANIE COLBY
THE STATE OF WISCONSIN, TO THE PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS RESPONDENT:
You are notified that the petitioner named above has filed a Petition for divorce or legal separation against you.

You must respond with a written demand for a copy of the Petition within 40 days from the day after the first date of publication.

The demand must be sent or delivered to the court at:

Clerk of Court, Waukesha County Courthouse, 515 W. Moreland Blvd., Waukesha WI 53188 and to JOHNATHAN COLBY c/o Attorney Eugene Bykhovsky, 4465 N Oakland Ave, Suite 110 Shorewood, WI 53211.

It is recommended, but not required, that you have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 40 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition, and you may lose your right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

If you are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of §948.31, Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment:

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under §49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under §767.511(1m), Wis. Stats., are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.
You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in §767.105, Wis. Stats.

§767.105, Information from Circuit Court Commissioner.

(2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order under sec. 767.59 or 767.451:

- (a) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall, with or without charge, provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:
- 1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.
- 2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.
- 3. Community resources and family court counseling services available to assist the parties.
- 4. The procedure for setting, modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.
- (b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase, with a copy of the statutory provisions in this chapter generally pertinent to the action.

If you require reasonable accommodations due to a disability to participate in the court process, please call at least 10 working days prior to the scheduled court date. Please note that the court does not provide transportation.
