Stay Fit as You Mature

How can I stay fit and healthy as I mature?

Article courtesy of Medlineplus.gov

Did you know people tend to gain weight as they get older?

Many women notice they put on weight in the years leading to menopause—or when menstrual periods end—and that losing the extra weight is not that easy.

Overweight and obesity are major health problems for black women in particular. More than 80 percent of U.S. black adult women are overweight or have obesity.¹ This web content is part of materials and a program called Sisters Together: Move More, Eat Better.

The program encourages black women to improve their health by being more active and eating healthier foods.

You may use the content to help you and other black women get healthy. It's never too early or too late to start making small changes to improve your health.

Why should I move more and eat better? Being physically active and making healthy food choices may help lower your risk for a number of chronic health problems as you mature.

If you're overweight, have obesity, or are inactive, you may have a greater chance of developing:

type 2 diabetes, or high blood sugar
high blood pressure kidney disease
heart disease stroke
certain kinds of cancer
Besides improving your physical health, you also may reduce stress and become a role model for family members and friends.
Your family and friends can be a great source of support as you work to adopt a healthier lifestyle.
Being healthy is important for them, too. Ask them to join your efforts. By making healthy choices together, you may find it's easier to move more and eat healthier!

City of Milwaukee Health Department Reminds Residents to Take Precautions as Temperatures Drop

Cold temperatures and wind chills predicted, residents reminded to take seasonal precautions

The City of Milwaukee Health Department (MHD) is reminding all residents to take precautions as single-digit temperatures and below zero wind chills move into the area.

“Wisconsin winter has arrived,” said Commissioner of Health Jeanette Kowalik.

“I strongly urge residents to exercise caution when outdoors, even if it is for a very short period of time. Additionally, be mindful of those with limited resources who lack access to adequate heating and shelter.

Please call 2-1-1 if you or anyone you know needs assistance.”

Temperatures are estimated to reach the single digits or teens, with below zero wind chills. It is important to be prepared as temperatures begin to fall.

The City of Milwaukee Health Department encourages community members to take extra precaution when traveling, limit outdoor activity whenever possible, and keep the following tips in mind to stay safe:

- When heading outdoors, let someone know where you are going and when you expect to return.

- Prepare a cold weather emergency kit to keep in your car and include: blankets, extra clothing, high energy foods, and first aid.

- Always wear appropriate clothing and ensure that exposed skin is covered, including fingers, nose, and ears.

- If idling cars, only do so in well-ventilated, open garages.

- Heat your home with devices approved for indoor use. Outdoor devices such as wood-burning or coal-burning grills, camp stoves, or other devices should not be used.

Never use a stovetop or oven to heat your home.

- If you have pets, bring them inside and ensure trips outside are brief.

During cold weather, it is also very important to check on family members and neighbors who may be at risk for cold-weather illness or injuries, especially young children, the elderly, and those with chronic illness.

More information on cold-weather safety can be found online at milwaukee.gov/ColdWeather-Safety.

Dial 2-1-1 for information about places to stay warm, including warming shelter options available.

How can I add more movement to my daily routine?

Adding longer, brisk walks to your daily routine is one way most people can safely increase their physical activity level. However, if you have heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, or obesity—or symptoms of a health problem, like dizziness or chest pain—speak with a health care professional before starting a more intense physical activity program.

Aim to move for 30 minutes a day

Try to do at least 30 minutes of moderate physical activity on most or all days of the week. Moderate activities are ones that you can talk, but not sing, while doing, such as brisk walking or dancing. These activities speed up your heart rate and breathing.

The U.S. Physical Activity Guidelines for Americans recommend getting 150 total minutes of activity spread throughout the week. But any amount of moderate activity is better than none at all.

Start with 10

Fitting in physical activity is possible with some planning.

However, if you don't have the time or energy to do the whole 30 minutes at once, start with a 10-minute session three times a day—then move to 15 minutes twice a day.

You can work physical activity into your daily routine by taking a walk at lunch—if your job allows—or before and after work; parking farther from where you're going and walking the rest of the way; and taking the stairs instead of the elevator or escalator.

Strengthen your muscles

Also, try to do activities to strengthen your muscles at least twice a week. You can use hand weights or a rubber exercise band—or even two full cans of food or bottles of water.

Muscle-strengthening activities are especially important for older women—who tend to lose muscle and bone every year.

Activities to strengthen your muscles may help prevent or reduce this loss.

Battle your barriers
