QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"We asked four community residents how did they spend their MEMORIAL DAY?"

"I spent my Memorial Day at Froedtert Hospital. While everybody else was having ribs and brats. I was having 'delicious' hospital foods and an IV cocktail."

DARRIN REASBY

"I spent my Memorial Day at Grateful Girls group home with youth ages 12 to 18. We played games and had a group discussion about the holiday, and watched movies."

JAZMINE BASKIN

"I spent my Memorial Day at Alices Garden preparing my plot for planting. My parents and friends came out to help. We had an amazing day."

ANGELA MALLET

"I spent my Memorial Day preparing a special meal for my family. I prepared special vegetables for my parents who have been married for 47 years. I wanted them to have a day of spiritual and proper nourishment when dining. Families that eat together, love together, stay together."

KAWHI LEONARD AND A STIFLING RAPTORS DEFENSE FORCE MILWAUKEE BUCKS TO BOW-OUT OF CHAMPIONSHIP CHASE AFTER SIX GAMES OF EASTERN CONFERENCE FINALS!

A disappointed fan following loss!

TORONTO—The Milwaukee Bucks blew a 15-point lead with 2:18 left in the third quarter and lost to the Toronto Raptors 100-94 in Toronto, in a game that saw Raptors' star Kawhi Leonard shut down Bucks star Giannis Antetokounmpo, which seemed to take some of the steam out of his teammates who couldn't pick-up the slack for the star and catalyst of the team.

The win allowed the Raptors to advance to the NBA Finals for the first time in the franchise's history. Toronto will square-off against the Golden State Warriors, hoping to knock off the two-time defending champions. Toronto won the regular season matchup with the Warriors 2-0, and will have the home court advantage.

The Bucks needed to defeat the Raptors to force a game seven at Fiserv Forum in the best-of-seven matchup. Milwaukee hasn't been to the NBA Finals since 1973-74, when the team lost to the Boston Celtics. The Bucks won their only championship

Wisconsin B-ball coach and his son released from hospital after fatal car crash that killed wife and daughter

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

University of Wisconsin assistant men's basketball coach Howard Moore and his son Jerrell Moore are on the mend and have been released from the intensive care unit at the University of Michigan Hospital following a recent tragic head-on crash in that state which took the life of his wife, Jennifer Moore and daughter Jaidyn.

Moore

"Please continue to keep the entire family in your thoughts and prayers," read a statement from the university.

According to Michigan State Police, the driver of the vehicle that hit the Moore family was going the wrong way at 2 a.m. near Ann Arbor. According to Milwaukee news reports, Moore suffered third-degree burns to his entire left side.

Moore's daughter, who was six-years-old, reportedly died at the scene while his wife, age 46, was transported to the university hospital, but was taken off life support later the same day of the accident. The family's dog was also killed in the crash.

"I lost two—a daughter and a granddaughter," Jennifer's mother Vera Barnes told The Detroit News. "But I'm blessed to still have my grandson and my son-in-law."

According to authorities, 23-year-old Ann Arbor native Samantha Winchester, was driving the vehicle that struck the Moore's family car on highway M-14. She was also killed. A toxicology report is pending.

Open House Celebrates Campus Completion!

See northside aquatic center, band shell and more at St. Ann Center St. Ann Center for Intergenerational Care invites the public to the Completion Celebration and Open House for its Bucyrus Campus, 2450 W. North Ave., from 1-3 p.m., Friday, June 7. Guests can explore newly constructed additions to the center, which provides child and adult day care and health and educational services to the community.

The new spaces include an indoor Aquatic Center, state-of-the-art Dementia Care Wing, Overnight Respite Care Unit, Art Studio, Beauty Salon and Childcare Classrooms. An outdoor entertainment venue, the Indaba Band Shell, will also open, launching a series of family-friendly performances. In traditional African culture, Indaba refers to a gathering to discuss issues affecting the village.

The Bucyrus Campus opened in September 2015 with several spaces left unfinished. A successful capital campaign and a $5 million grant from Wisconsin's capital budget, received in 2017, allowed St. Ann Center to complete the $28 million, two-story, 80,000-square-foot facility. ### New data shows White women made up 40% of slaveowners

Data uncovered by a Black female University of California-Berkeley professor reveals southern White women played a heavier role in slavery than previously thought. Using census data from 1850 and 1860, UC-Berkeley associate professor, Stephanie E. Jones-Rogers, found White women made up around 40% of slaveowners. The findings are part of a book by Jones-Rogers titled: "They Were Her Property: White Women as Slave Owners in the American South." In the book, Jones-Rogers notes owning enslaved Africans served as White women's primary source of wealth, and made the women better marriage material. The women also kept sole ownership after marriage. —AtlantaBlackStar

Study: Southern Whites still have racial bias against Blacks

A new study reveals southern Whites are more likely to harbor unconscious racial bias against Blacks that stem from times of the region's dependence on slavery well over a century ago.

The environment of someone could foster their racism and prejudice, the study purports, according to Pacific Standard magazine. Based on the report, White people do hold a higher rate of bias against Blacks; counties and states that had the highest number of slaves before the Civil War display greater pro-White implicit bias today, according to a research team led by University of North Carolina psychologist B. Keith Payne wrote in the "Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences." —Source: thegrio.com

Angry White woman points gun at Black couple enjoying Mississippi lake

An unidentified White female campground manager in Mississippi (pictured below) has been fired for pulling a pistol on a Black couple who were eating and relaxing by a lake. The incident took place recently at the Kampgrounds of America in Starkville, north-east of Jacksonville, according to the Daily Mail. One of the couple, Jessica Richardson, pulled out her cell phone to record the woman approaching her and her husband with a gun in hand and chastising them for having a picnic in the park. The woman demanded the couple leave the premises because they didn't have a reservation—something Richardson said she didn't know she needed. Richardson reportedly took to Facebook to post about the ordeal saying "racism is alive and well." —Source: thegrio.com

Recent UWM graduate seized education to forge a better life

By Sarah Vickery

Josephine Hayes-Birchler just graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in May with her bachelor's degree. In the fall, she'll attend dental school. And in April, she officially became an American citizen. It's all a little unbelievable.

"Five years ago, if you had asked me if I would be where I am right now, if I would have gotten into dental school, if I would have had the grades that I have, if I would have the confidence that I have, I would have laughed in your face and told you no," she said.

Five years ago, Hayes-Birchler had just immigrated to the United States from Uganda with son Preston and her now-ex-husband, who is an American citizen. They lived in Madison, where she worked as a certified nursing assistant. In 2015, marital difficulties forced her to file for divorce, but before she could find a place to go, her ex-husband kicked her out of their home. Hayes-Birchler bounced among living in her car, a homeless shelter and on friends' couches. "While I was staying at the shelter, I started thinking about going back to school," Hayes-Birchler said. "It was crazy. That shouldn't have been my No. 1 focus – but I was thinking about going to school. So I applied to UWM." She saw education as the way out of poverty for her and her son. Hayes-Birchler talked with College of Letters & Science student advisor Jennifer Hack, who helped her apply to the university and chart out her classes on the pre-dental track with a cell and molecular biology major. "I remember the day I moved. My son was napping. Nothing was unpacked. I sat in the middle of the room and I broke down and cried," Hayes-Birchler recalled. "I was like, this is crazy. I didn't have a job in Milwaukee. I didn't have child support from my ex-husband. I didn't have help with babysitting. I didn't have anything; I didn't know anyone." But she did have motivation – the son she says is her greatest accomplishment in life. Now 6 years old, Preston loves to explore, go to the park and ride his bike. He's also the reason Hayes-Birchler got out of bed each morning to go to class. "There are times I don't feel like studying, but I say no, I need to do this," Hayes-Birchler said. "I want him to have a good life – not just a good life, but a life where we don't have to struggle."

To put herself through school, she worked at a nursing home and later with an in-home care agency. Along the way, she forged a support system: her dear friends from Madison, Jim and Edith Davison, as well as friends in Milwaukee; her UWM advisor, Hack; and her professors, who understood if she occasionally had to bring Preston to class. Also important: the crew at UWM's Life Impact program, which assists disadvantaged parents in attaining an education. In April, about a month before her UWM graduation, she took her U.S. oath of citizenship, with UWM supporters, friends and Pre-

THE GREAT TRANSITION: From Tween to Teen

I remember being in my homeroom class at Valdosta Middle School waiting for the day to begin. It took a little longer because this particular day, we had extended homeroom. There were counselors going from classroom to classroom to help students pick out their classes for next year. It would be our first year in high school.

I'd just turned 13 and I barely knew what I wanted to wear to school that morning, let alone know what classes to pick for next year.

Now that I look back, I realize that the transition from being a tween was a little more sacred and serious than I had ever imagined.

Teens fall in the category of ages 13-17. This is right before

MLK All-A-Thon helps support scholarships for high schoolers

The 28th Annual Martin Luther King All-a-thon, sponsored by CHURCH, Inc., was Saturday, May 28th. from Hephatha Lutheran Church, 1720 West Locust Street. Participants received a commemorative 2011 T-shirt for participating. Participants in the MLK All-a-thon could walk, jog, skate or bike the five-mile route, which starts and end at Hephatha with two rest stops provided. Refreshments were provided at the end of the walk for all participants. The All-a-thon is seen as a vehicle that encourages all high school students to pursue their education beyond high school. Each participant in the MLK All-a-thon is asked to secure sponsor to contribute toward MLK Scholarships that will be rewarded at the MLK Celebration held in January. To date, the MLK scholarship fund has awarded thousands of dollars to close to 500 deserving students.—Photo by Yvonne Kemp a child is considered a legal adult at the age of 18. While the age can be categorized differently, on a case by case status, leaving 12 years old and diving into the teen status is a glorious yet intimidating milestone.

I was officially a teenager and here I was with this green paper in front of me. On it sat tons of classes I've never even heard of before. To say the least I chose my classes and prayed that I had set myself up for a good first year in high school.

Transitioning can be scary and parents may not always know how to talk with their growing child about what really goes on in their world.

From friends, fashion and dating to cliques, extracurricular activities and fitting in, we've all been there before and it is not the easiest thing to deal with.

There are so many things happening around your young ones and it's happening all while you are trying to help them figure out who they are, what they believe and what their goals and aspirations really are.

I speak to those who are leaving their tween years. What I have learned at a teenage status and what I use every day as a young adult go hand in hand.

It's not necessary to have your whole life planned out at 13, however, this is a great time to start putting some puzzle pieces together. At the age of 13, I was in my last year right before high school started.

Picking out those classes the year before showed me how important preparation is.

Having the high school academic counselors walk me through each prerequisite portion and elective portion of the handouts, allowed me to see that even though the ultimate choice was mine to make for the classes I selected, guidance was still a key role in me basically planning out the rest of my academic future.

For the next few weeks, I will be talking about these transitions. Some will originate from personal experiences and others will be general studies regarding the cycle of life.

National Fresh Fruits & Vegetables Month

June is National Fresh Fruits & Vegetables Month!

There are many programs to encourage incorporating more fruit and vegetables into one's daily diet and educating the public as to the healthy and affordable option of growing what you eat and eating what you grow. Neighborhood gardens is a perfect example.

A neighborhood/community garden brings beauty to a neighborhood, it brings neighbors together and provides access to healthy food in metropolitan areas.

Neighborhood/community gardens also help people to appreciate nature and the earth.

A project inspired by Mayor Tom Barrett's Home Gr/own Initiative with the City Environmental Collaboration Office promotes revitalizing urban green spaces. Their mission includes ways to:

- Make it easier to grow and access local food and re-purpose city-owned vacant lots. The collaboration works within City government to streamline processes, permitting, and ordinances, making it easier to grow and distribute healthy food, start new food-based businesses and improve vacant lots into parks, orchards and healthy green spaces, increasing Milwaukee quality of life.

- Work within Milwaukee's community food system to link local growers to local markets, increase urban food infrastructure (water, access, compost), support new urban farms and increase the number of healthy food retailers and wholesalers.

For information on community gardens in the Milwaukee area or how to start your own community garden, see information below:

UW-Extension Milwaukee County Garden Rental

Milwaukee County Cooperative Extension rents garden plots in many parts of the county.

They also provide technical assistance to neighborhood groups that run their own community gardens.

Visit them at: <https://milwaukee.extension.wisc.edu/agriculture/garden-rental/>

The City of Milwaukee

The City of Milwaukee, along with its partner, the Milwaukee Urban Gardens, offers seasonal garden permits for residents who would like to garden on a vacant lot next to their house or work with their neighbors to create a community green-space.

"You have been born anew, not from perishable but from imperishable seed, through the living and abiding word of God." —1 Peter 1:23

To apply for a garden permit, contact Groundwork/Milwaukee Urban Gardens 414-763-9947.

Beloved, according to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, approximately 15% of the world's food is now grown in urban areas.

When it comes to neighborhood gardens, according to the Milwaukee County initiative, quality of life flourishes for yourself and your neighbors when you:

- Improve your diet by growing fruits and vegetables;
- Socialize and build bonds with neighbors while enjoying nature;

- Create a community asset that improves the safety and security of your surroundings; and

- Save money on your grocery bills.

Celebrate National Fresh Fruits & Vegetables Month by bumping up the fruits and vegetables on your plate.

Eat your fruits and vegetables as a snack, on a salad, during meals, or in a delicious smoothie, not just during the month of June, but you are encouraged to incorporate more fruits and vegetables as a part of your daily diet.

PERSPECTIVES

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

“Never forget that intelligence rules the world and ignorance carries the burden. Therefore, remove yourself as far as possible from ignorance and seek as far as possible to be intelligent.” — Marcus Garvey

What's in a name?

I'm giving serious thought to changing my name... Again.

The first time I legally changed my name was to cement my transformation from a Black/Negro/Colored American to an “African American.”

In other words, I chose to conclude many months of lessons taught in a West African “rites of passage,” by incorporating the name “awarded” me at the conclusion of the process by my African priest and priestess: “Kwaku Osei.”

Children in many tribes are given the name of the week in which they were born until the village provides another surname based on the child's characteristics. “Kwaku” means, “born on Wednesday.” “Osei” interprets to “Noble” and “maker of the great.” The latter is apropos given my profession, vocation and life purpose.

Even still, I chose to keep my family name (some call it “slave moniker”) out of respect for my (fore)parents and the legacy they generated.

The prospect of me legally changing my name during this chapter of my life, however, is rooted not in a cultural bond, but to ensure longevity in my marital relationship.

As most brothers who have married an older, independent Sista can attest, as soon as she gets comfortable and gains a sense of control, she'll feel free to use your name out of context, or as a prelude to a verbal pasting when and if she believes the need presents itself.

Some blame that phenomenon on the battle of the sexes, or maybe ever-changing societal norms.

Or, as I've hypothesized, she falls prey to what I call the “mother/mate syndrome” — a scenario in which a Black woman who has been pressed into a leadership role (head of household), refuses to relinquish that characteristic even after marriage.

Whatever theory you follow, some sistas take it to the extreme as they rewrite or amend the Bible or Koran.

And brothers will know when they are confronted with that reality because that's when she'll start calling you outta your name, or adds an exclamation point behind it. Or two or three.

White men call it “nagging,” but brothers know it for what it is.

When her voice goes up two octaves, and she adds the multiple exclamation points... Lord help you.

Brothers, you can substitute your name for mine: “Mikel!!! why didn't you...” or “Mikel!!! when are you going to...”

Or my favorite, “Mikel, why can't you read my mind.”

(My common retort for that latter diatribe is, “I subscribe to ESPN, not ESP.”)

Of course, after a quarter-century of marriage, I should be used to hearing my name called as a prelude to an argument or chastisement. Or from the tone or placement in the sentence whether it is leading to a request or demand.

For example, when my sons reach out to me, and “Pops” or “Father” is sandwiched between terms of affection, I know there's a question or request — generally for money — at the end of the sentence.

As children, they called me “Daddy,” but for boys, that noun is supposed to morph into Pops or Dad after puberty.

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

Even gay males don't use that noun (sometimes verb) after they reach maturity. But girls and women are allowed to call you that until death do you part.

Daddy, in my lexicon, is a special adjective because it means you've been there and done what a father should do.

Sadly, today an ever-growing number of children refer to their biological progenitor by his first name because the deadbeat “man” has never fulfilled his God required responsibility, and thus has not earned the title of “father.”

In fact, I heard one sister refer to her father as “Sperm Donor,” which is an appropriate title because that's all “that dude contributed to my life and welfare,” she explained.

Conversely, in my dictionary, “Pops” and “Dad,” carry a different connotation; titles that are earned, not given.

There are other titles frequently used by Black men and women that get under my skin as well, not all of which are related to tribal relationships.

“MF” may be an apt insult to somebody's pedigree, but not mine. And Nyame helps the fool who calls me a SOB or bastard because I'm of that dying breed whose parents were married, and my mother was truly a saint.

No friend, much less, an offspring or spouse dares call me “nigger” (n-word), both because they know I detest that noun or pronoun or however it is used, but also because I think the word is a link on the unbroken chain of slavery.

In fact, I lost “some” respect for Barack Obama when he acknowledged a Black journalist's reference to him as “His nigger” (n-word). I would not have voted for anyone who would consider themselves to be the HNIC; that's both inflammatory, demeaning and an insult to the office he was elected to.

Actually, I thought about maybe putting a “Brother” or “Baba” before my name, not just to disarm my wife, but because it's a title I've worked hard to achieve.

Along those same lines, I wouldn't have a problem preceding my given first name with Abba or Baba, which means father, although I don't want to be confused with deity, although Mikel means “after Him/Her.” Then again, I could rename myself “mzee,” which is Swahili for “elder,” or “mjumbe wa serikali,” which means “elder statesman.”

I can speak from some authority because I took two years of Swahili in college as my mandatory foreign language.

But, Swahili is an East African trade language and while I could converse a few sentences with the newspaper's late administrative assistant who was from Kenya, I should have studied Wolof or one of the Bantu dialects since I've learned through African Ancestry that my forefathers/mothers were from the Ivory Coast, and I'm Mende and Fulani.

Speaking of my tribe, I now call my granddaughter my “Fulani Princess” and grandson my “Mende Warrior.” And I love that both of them came outta the womb looking for “Poppa”!

For the record, I started writing this column on day one of our three-day holiday weekend, which means I also forgot my original thought process until day three when a conversation with my number two grandson was drowned out by the soprano utterance of my name. This time I simply ignored it because I knew I was being falsely accused of burning a $15 steak on the grill.

By the way, grand number 2 is the only child of my children who calls me “Grandfather.”

Actually, it's kinda refreshing and I take it with a grain of salt knowing he attended a preppy high school after attending the since closed Leadership Academy.

I used to assume he would grow up to be a nerd, but that was before I “Africanized” him. Now I tell everybody he's a member of the Talented Tenth.

In any event, he had an opportunity to foresee his future — what to expect — when he ultimately gets married. And I took the occasion to explain to him why I might change my name, even if I can't erase the exclamation points that follow it.

Or maybe not. As they (women) tell us, “Happy wife means happy life,” or something like that. Which means brothers have to either be perfect or accept of the criticism because few of us are willing to change after a long investment.

Plus, since I'm not going anywhere, and my insurance doesn't cover chills pills I would sneak in her water, I'm stuck with the defensive strategy of passive resistance, or the lesson learned during the rites of passage session that supposedly will help neutralize her outburst or the use of absolutes.

The question posed by the priest was: “Which organ of the body did Nyame (God) give exclusively to men that ensure relational longevity?”

Unable to grasp the correct answer, he gave me a clue and told me to respond the next day — “you'll figure it out when you're shaving.”

Which I did.

The answer is the Adam's apple, and the lesson was, “your wife says something that upsets you; instead of saying something that will most certainly fuel the argument, think of your Adam's apple — and swallow.”

Of course, that doesn't always work, particularly if your significant other, girlfriend, wife or “wanna-be-mother” is African American. I learned a long time ago that for Black women, venting is not only empowering but also instructional.

So just hang on, bite your lip, count to 10 and swallow. The rant and rage — whether justified or not — generally only lasts a few minutes, particularly if you figure out why Nyame gave Black men big lips.

It's because we have more butt to kiss later if we respond the wrong way.

Hotep.

Ben Carson is out here embarrassing Black folks again

This latest dust-up is about Oreos. The joke is too easy, man. By Dustin Seibert, courtesy of thegrio.com

Ben Carson has sorely disappointed his fair share of Black folks, but he's invited a special degree of heartbreak from us native Detroiters of a certain age.

Carson was born and raised in the Detroit of the 1950s and 1960s. His 1990 autobiographical novel, Gifted Hands: The Ben Carson Story was damn near required reading in every Detroit Public School.

You couldn't walk in any library or classroom without seeing a dog-eared copy laying around somewhere.

Gifted Hands is the story of a Black boy from a broken and troubled family who surmounted all odds and grew up to become an accomplished neurosurgeon.

Carson was a beacon of determination and an example of the benefits of hard work and education for young and impressionable Black Detroiters of the Bush 41/Clinton era.

But in 2013, he fixed his pie hole (a.k.a. his mouth) to tell people that Obamacare was “worse than slavery.”

And that was just the beginning of

and replaced with a demented dopelgänger perpetually drugged with codeine and unable to keep his eyes open while talking.

Carson said he wouldn't vote for a Muslim president because they can't exercise democracy and their faith at the same time.

He defended the Second Amendment with the wild suggestion that the Holocaust would have been “greatly diminished” if only the Jews had guns to defend themselves. Those are only a couple of his greatest hits.

As we all know, Carson's presidential campaign was an atomic failure and he saw little recourse but to climb in bed with President Gomer Pyle (Trump), who appointed him Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Secretary.

Which is the equivalent of my writerly behind being hired to run a retirement home.

Carson's been quiet for a while, but like a small child in the other room who suddenly stops making noise, you know some mess is afoot.

He's currently in the news regarding his cataclysmic testimony before Rep. (and Auntie) Maxine Waters' Financial Services Committee Tuesday, during which he demonstrated exactly why a bleeping neurosurgeon is in no way qualified to manage urban housing.

When Rep. Katie Porter asked him about REO (Real-estate owned) foreclosed properties, Carson responded, “Oreos?” Because, of course, Porter would spend time asking Carson about sandwich cookies in committee.

I could get into the delicious irony of Carson's sellout butt talking about Oreos, but I'll digress.

The rest of the testimony was just as much of a (bleep) show: Carson defended a Trump budget proposal

URBAN MY DIALOGUE

By Torre “ToeJoe” Johnson

When Legal Turns to Inhumane

Is not on my block legal? Can the community stand up against a recovery house being placed in their neighborhoods?

Doesn't everyone have a right to shelter and to be able to live where ever they choose? Does The Fair Housing Act amended in 1988 protect these individuals from being discriminated against?

Can the city or county use prejudice to base their decisions to support or not to support individuals because their disabilities are drug addiction related?

that will knock 16.4 percent from HUD's budget — which would obviously negatively impact people who need housing protection the most — as well as a plan to cut undocumented immigrants off from public housing aid. Rep. Ayanna Pressley had her little dance with Carson, who dodged her questions about the ethical implications of cutting the budget like I imagine he would any invitation to speak in Detroit in 2019.

Carson is different from the likes of Candace Owens and Alan Keyes, who introduced themselves to the world as golliwog dolls hell-bent on making the ancestors frown upon them while doing the Arthur fist meme.

For many Black folks, Carson was once the Chosen One. Now, he's Anakin Skywalker going down the path to the Dark Side and becoming Darth Vader.

He's the equivalent of the last two seasons of Game of Thrones: started off with so much promise only to let you the (bleep) down.

He's now simply a cautionary tale; a reminder to drag your expectations so abysmally low that you can never be disappointed. Treat Carson — and the rest of the Trump administration — like you do online dating and maybe you'll be able to sleep at night. Maybe.

Dustin J. Seibert is a native Detroit living in Chicago. Miraculously, people have paid him to be aggressively light-skinned via a computer keyboard for nearly two decades. He loves his own mama slightly more than he loves music and exercises every day only so his French fry intake doesn't catch up to him. Find him at his own site, waffle-colored.com.

Just because you were once hooked on drugs do you lose your rights to privacy?

I have been drug free now coming up on twenty nine years and know many people who have kept the drug curse in check with help. How do we stand up against those fighting for their lives?

Our brothers, mothers, fathers and sisters, someone please explain this. It has got to stop!

after defeating the Baltimore Bullets 4-0, following the 1970-71 season. They are still the only expansion team to accomplish this feat in the NBA.

Toronto's stifling defense in the last four Eastern Conference games and the performance of Raptors' star Kawhi Leonard catapulted the team to a series win.

Leonard was so unstoppable that he soared above the rim and slammed dunked a facial over Giannis Antetokounmpo.

The Raptors outscored the Bucks 29-18 in the final quarter to seal the victory. Milwaukee got close towards the end of the game, but the Raptors' hustle and grit proved too much for the Bucks to overcome.

Leonard finished with 27 points for the game and grabbed 17 rebounds. The Raptors' All-Star small forward came into the Eastern Conference Finals averaging 34.1 points per game.

The Toronto Raptors acquired Kawhi Leonard via trade from the San Antonio Spurs for DeMar DeRozan, Jakob Poeltl and a protected 2019 first-round pick.

The Bucks, losing four straight, earned the NBA's top seed by having the best record in basketball. Led by Antetokounmpo, who is the favorite to become the league's MVP, and is a member of the All Defensive first team, averaged 27.7 points and 12.5 rebounds per game in his sixth season.

The Raptors' head coach, Nick Nurse, used Leonard to defend Giannis. The matchup proved to be effective, as the Bucks' offense sputtered at times during the last four games. In game five, the Raptors blitzed the Bucks 26-3, late in the third quarter to deliver the death blow.

Toronto exploited the Bucks' weaknesses. The team struggled to bring the ball up court and couldn't penetrate, nor make open shots. The Raptors were quicker to the ball and also to the foul line.

Leonard used an abundance of pump fakes and stutter steps to keep the Bucks' defense off balance. Overall, the Toronto star was sensational and proved he was his team's best weapon in the series.

His impact inspired other Raptors players to overachieve, such as Serge Ibaka, Kyle Lowry, Pascal Siakam and Fred VanVleet Jr.

cility this spring. All new areas are expected to begin operation throughout 2019.

The Completion Celebration will begin at the band shell at 1 p.m. with the untying of a kente cloth bow, and continue with remarks from Kaylan Haywood II, representative for Wisconsin's 16th Assembly District; Russell W. Stamper II, 15th District Alderman; Supreme Moore Omukunde, 10th District County Supervisor and Sr. Diana De Bruin, Associate Director of Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi. There will also be a multicultural blessing and libation ceremony and a performance by the Parklawn Assembly of God Praise Dancers.

Public tours of the facility, entertainment and refreshments will be part of the celebration, along with a Trade Fair featuring north side entrepreneurs.

"These beautiful spaces will serve to connect our community," said Sr. Edna Lonergan, St. Ann Center founder and CEO.

"The band shell will draw talented people from the neighborhood who haven't had an audience before. Our expanded dementia care and overnight respite will allow people to go to work knowing their loved ones are receiving compassionate care. Also, we're committed to making sure our children learn how to swim before they start kindergarten."

Nationally, 70% of African-American children, 58% of Hispanic children and 40% of white children have little or no swimming ability and are at risk of water-related injury or death.

The Bucyrus Campus is a replication of St. Ann Center's Stein Campus, located on Milwaukee's south side for more than 30 years.

Featuring a unique intergenerational model, the center provides community-based health and educational day services to children, frail elders and adults with cognitive and physical disabilities, while providing resources and support to their caregivers.

Other services open to the community include a medical clinic and a specialized dental clinic that exclusively serves people with physical or cognitive disabilities.

Sen. Dave Hansen & Rep. David Crowley Unveil Automatic Voter Registration Bill

MADISON, WI – Representative David Crowley (D-Milwaukee) and Senator Dave Hansen (D-Green Bay) recently introduced--with Governor Tony Evers--legislation relating to implementation of state wide automatic voter registration (AVR).

This is following the recent decision of Joint Finance Republicans to remove AVR implementation from Governor Evers Budget.

“The cornerstone of democracy and representative governance is the belief of the people in the legitimacy of free and fair elections,” stated Rep. Crowley.

“Wisconsin has a proud tradition of robust civic engagement and electoral participation but has seen its state government spend the last decade fighting to create new barriers and unnecessary obstacles for Wisconsinites to exercise their fundamental right to vote.”

“When I started in the Senate, both Democrats and Republicans believed the more people voting the better,” said Senator Hansen. “There were bipartisan efforts that expanded early and absentee voting, and voter registration. Then in 2011 things changed.

Instead of working together to make it easier for people to vote and to register to vote, Republicans passed more and more changes to the law designed to suppress voter participation.”

Rep. Crowley

Rep. Crowley’s and Sen. Hansen’s legislation (LRB-1105/P2) will reduce potential barriers that individuals may face in registering to vote and restore the public’s faith in our representative government. The effects of AVR have been consistent across the nation.

From Rhode Island to California, AVR is boosting registration rates across the map.

States like Georgia, which had a 93.7% increase in voter registration rates after implementing AVR, will be used as a model in implementing our own system here in Wisconsin.

“We have the opportunity to make 2020 our most diverse electorate yet: increasing voter registration rates encourages participation in the electoral process and provides the potential for more voices to be represented within our government,” said Crowley.

“The people of Wisconsin deserve access to a high quality, modern election system that encourages participation from the largest number of voters, Hansen said.

“One of the best ways to help with that is to make it as easy as possible for people to register to vote.

“We can do that by implementing a system of Automatic Voter Registration that creates a more fair voting process.”

Army of Ministers Lead House-to-House Canvass on Milwaukee's North Side

Central City religious leaders from diverse denominations mobilized voters for Nov.6

More than 40 Ministers from City of Milwaukee churches convened at Canaan Missionary Baptist Church -- 2975 North 11th Street -- to hold a press conference before they launched a massive canvass door-to-door effort.

Ministers and members of their congregations knocked on every door in an 80 square block area urging people to vote on November 6 and leaving information on where and when they can vote.

According to Rev. Greg Lewis of St. Gabriel's Church of the Holy Spirit, "Our people must use their voices as a megaphone to call for jobs, health care, police accountability, safe streets and quality schools."

Rev. Greg Lewis (pictured above), Assistant Pastor at St. Gabriel's Church of the Holy Spirit, says that 2018 was going to show political leaders that voters make a difference in who makes decisions that can help or hurt us.

Alverno College, Ascension Wisconsin Announce Letter of Intent for Strategic Alliance
Institutions seek to develop mission-driven workforce, deliver personalized care to all Alverno College and Ascension Wisconsin have signed a letter of intent to establish a strategic alliance to improve the health of the state's residents, Alverno President Dr. Andrea Lee and Bernie Sherry, Ministry Market Executive for Ascension Wisconsin, announced Tuesday.

This relationship will amplify the existing clinical relationship between the two Catholic institutions and seeks to further develop a skilled, mission-driven workforce to help meet the needs of the state's rapidly evolving healthcare environment. It also will further advance the initiatives of Alverno and Ascension Wisconsin, grounded in their shared Catholic and Franciscan values, to strategically drive improved health outcomes for the state's residents.

Alverno will expand its existing academic degree, certificate and credential programs in healthcare and develop new programs. This includes degrees and continuing education opportunities for employees at Ascension Wisconsin's 24 hospital campuses and more than 100 clinics statewide. Ascension Wisconsin will provide expanded access for Alverno students to the clinical education experiences necessary in their preparation as healthcare professionals. This includes clinical placements and career placement opportunities within Ascension Wisconsin's statewide integrated system of care.

"This is a logical and desirable alliance for Alverno College," Sister Andrea said. "Providing accessible, high-quality and affordable healthcare to residents of the city, region and state, especially for those with limited access to care, is a highly recognized characteristic of Alverno healthcare professionals and of Ascension Wisconsin associates."

"As an anchor in communities from Racine to Eagle River, Ascension Wisconsin is focused on providing compassionate, personalized care to all people, especially those living in poverty and who are most vulnerable," Sherry said. "This alliance will build on our shared commitment to strengthen educational opportunities for the next generation of nurses, with a focus on increasing diversity in the workforce."

As part of the Alverno-Ascension Wisconsin strategic alliance, leaders of the two institutions have signed a letter of intent and are engaged in serious discussions to combine Alverno's JoAnn McGrath School of Nursing and Health Professions and the 118-year-old Columbia College of Nursing (CCON), part of Ascension Wisconsin, located in Glendale, Wis., subject to receipt of all necessary approvals. Once finalized, CCON's coeducational programs will be administratively housed in Alverno's School of Adult Learning and New Initiatives, with curricular oversight by the JoAnn McGrath School of Nursing and Health Professions.

"We are eager to collaborate with our CCON nursing colleagues and are especially interested in the possibility of expanding our footprint with a north side presence," said Patricia Varga, Ph.D., dean of Alverno's JoAnn McGrath School of Nursing and Health Professions.

"We share a passion for excellent nurse preparation," explained Heather Vartanian, PhD, RN, ANP-BC, president and dean of Columbia College of Nursing. "Collaborating around our shared mission in healthcare education will only enhance our capacity to contribute positively to the evolution of healthcare delivery in the region."

"Healthcare is changing rapidly, so rapidly that demand for skilled healthcare providers cannot keep pace with the need, a clear indicator of the power of alliances such as this and others across the region," Dr. Lee said. "Ascension Wisconsin and Alverno educators will have significant roles in advancing important conversations on healthcare delivery in the future. We are excited to continue the conversation and to move quickly to action."

Given that the Alverno and Ascension Wisconsin's strategic alliance will not be exclusive, both Alverno and Ascension Wisconsin will continue their current and emerging business relationships with other institutions and healthcare systems.
