PULSE OF THE COMMUNITY

Photos and question by Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

"Do you think there is too much dependency on technology today? Why or why not?"

"Yed, I believe most of humanity base their lives on technology rather it's a social site, Facebook, Twitter, Instagram. They should be replaced with more reading. There's no time for daily living (with technology)."

JANAYA NEYLON

"Yes, I believe technology is used too much. Because of this, families are not spending quality time together. That's because everyone is always on their phones."

"Yes. Because we've gotten to the point where we are missing out on basic human contact.

We are (as a society) becoming desensitized."

"Yes. Today's society relies too much on technology. It takes away the ability to problem solve is a person does not have the ability to solve problems, step by step. They will be left clueless without technology."

Mr. Perkins Family Restaurant celebrates 50 delicious years!

Mayor Tom Barrett presented a city proclamation honoring Willie and Hilda Perkins for their half-century of providing the community delicious food and friendship, as well as being a stable economic institution that provided jobs. The Perkins and the mayor are joined by (far left) the Perkins' daughter, Janice Perkins and (far right) their daughter-in-law Cherry Perkins, the wife of the late Willie Perkins, Jr. who took over the restaurant from his parents. Cherry now owns and runs the establishment.

The Perkins, Cherry Perkins and the mayor are joined by relatives who came from Texas to celebrate with their extended Milwaukee family.

Family, friends, loyal customers, city and state elected officials, clergy and community leaders were on hand recently to enjoy entertainment, hospitality and, of course, the delectable fare at Mr. Perkins' Family Restaurant as they celebrated 50 years of community service. The couple, their daughter-in-law and current owner Cherry Perkins', were honored for their for being a pillar of entrepreneurship.

Family of mentally ill woman who died in jail awarded nearly $1M

The family of Wickie Bryant, an Atlanta woman who died in a dark, dank cell almost four years ago from diabetes complications will reportedly receive $995,000 in a wrongful death settlement with the city. Bryant, who reportedly suffered from schizophrenia, ultimately died from diabetic ketoacidosis, according to news reports. While Atlanta officials argued an officer checked on Bryant at least five times in less than four hours, three nurses and two corrections officers still faced disciplinary action. The family filed the lawsuit in 2017 and are still grieving over their loss. "The goal from the very beginning was to get justice for Ms. Bryant and her family," said Stephen Fowler, one of the family's lawyers, to Atlanta's WSBT-TV.

Violent Chicago weekend casts cloud over city's improved crime numbers

Despite a reported nine percent drop in crime in the first five months of 2019 in Chicago, that city's law enforcement officials may have celebrated too soon. Fifty-two people were shot and eight killed in the first weekend of June in the Windy City according to the Chicago Sun-Times. The sudden spike has prompted new Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot to announce she intends to meet with Chicago Police Superintendent Eddie T. Johnson and members of his command staff to discuss how to combat future surges in shootings. Sup. Johnson said his department will "work diligently to provide consistent and fair policing in all of our neighborhoods and our efforts are paying dividends." —Source: thegrio.com

14-year old to be youngest admitted into Spelman College

This fall, when 14-year-old Sydney Wilson sets foot on the hallowed grounds of the all-women Spelman College, she will be the youngest student ever admitted into the prestigious HBCU (Historical Black College/University). During her early years at school, it was evident Wilson was an excellent student. When she reached second grade, it was found she was really a bit different from her peers. Many of her classmates teased her for being too smart but she didn't let it bother her. "I just stayed on my path," Wilson told an Atlanta television reporter. "I didn't really feel like I needed to be popular...because, I mean, I like myself." Wilson plans to live on the campus and wants to major in Biology in hopes to use animal science in curing human illnesses one day. —Source: Blacknews.com

Depression in the Eyes of a Teenager

The great transition from tween to teen brings about so many changes. This point is pivotal to the growth and development of your teen becoming a young adult. With so many different changes going on, internally and externally, the emotional stability can be a little haywire.

Mental health issues are serious in any given situation, however, mental health due to depression in teens, can lead to a long shaky road in their adult years. So what exactly is it like struggling with depression at such a young age?

Adolescence is expected to be uncomfortable and unsettling. With the many physical, emotional, psychological and social changes that occur in this stage of life, anything as simple as having high expectations for school academics, at home relationships, and other day to day interactions can bring your teen to a stressful point.

Mental Health of America, shares that when teens' moods disrupt their ability to function on a day-to-day basis, it may indicate a serious emotional or mental disorder that needs attention called adolescent depression.

At this point, parents and caregivers should pay close attention to their child and be prepared to take action.

Depression in the eyes of a teenager isn't always obvious. Sometimes it can be silent and unrecognizable. Mental Health of America says to look out for the following when trying to detect whether depression is an issue with your teen.

These symptoms may indicate depression, particularly when they last for more than two weeks:

- Poor performance in school
- Withdrawal from friends and activities
- Sadness and hopelessness
- Lack of enthusiasm, energy or motivation

Determined to give her daughter knowledge to reduce her risk of ever saying #MeToo, Phyllis Williams-Strawder had and continues to have "Sex Talks" with her daughter, Morgan.

In That Damn Girl Stuff: A Mother's Truth, Strawder goes beyond "birds and bees" too surprisingly revealed truths about herself, including one truth she never told until now.

The candid conversations began when Morgan was an inquisitive nine-year-old. Strawder wanted to make sure her daughter would be comfortable with her budding sexuality.

She wanted her to know sex is more than physical. It is a battle of mind, body, and spirit.

Readers quickly see Morgan overwhelmed by the depth of the conversation and desperate to turn back time. However, the humor, sincerity and directness, Strawder shares with Morgan create an unconventional approach, while serving as a guide for parents of young girls.

This second edition finds Phyllis revealing more of her emotional vulnerability. She also includes personal photos and new chapters.

Release date is scheduled for July 23, 2019, along with a Facebook Live event.

Depression in the Eyes of a Teenager

- Anger and rage
- Overreaction to criticism
- Feelings of being unable to satisfy ideals
- Poor self-esteem or guilt
- Indecision, lack of concentration or forgetfulness
- Restlessness and agitation
- Changes in eating or sleeping patterns
- Substance abuse
- Problems with authority
- Suicidal thoughts or actions

Adolescence depression is increasing at a very high rate and should be treated by a professional as soon as it is detected. The above-mentioned signs, should not be taken lightly.

Doing so can lead to something severe and life threatening. Depending on the situation, treatment can be the best option to assisting with teenage depression.

Therapy can help teens understand why they are depressed and it can help them learn how to cope with stressful situations.

Psychotherapy, Cognitive-behavioral therapy and interpersonal therapy are a few options that have been trusted by many.

Whether you know someone or are experiencing depression yourself, it is important to know that there are options.

When speaking to your teen about his or her everyday life, remember to ease into the conversation. Instead of directly asking them how they feel, try making the conversation more general.

Something as simple as, "What are the kids saying at school about xyz..."

This allows an easy access to the conversation regarding things they may be experiencing.

Your child is more than likely not going to volunteer this information or initiate the conversation, but as long as there is some sort of effective communication, all should be well.

Change is inevitable, and it is a little more manageable when you know how to maneuver in these type of situations.

graduated from Lincoln High School and was a part-time student at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

In 1982, Janet was pictured on the cover of Milwaukee's Echo Magazine over the headline: "Career Woman Gives Teenagers Tips on Dos, Don'ts in Work-World."

In the article, she expounded on the benefits of her Christian upbringing and concerns about teenagers. Her 12-point advice to the city's teens:

Go to school, set goals for yourself, develop more than one set of marketable skills, strive for academic excellence, read broadly, read newspapers and watch TV news, learn to speak more than one language, become involved in extracurricular school activities, cultivate a positive, pleasant attitude, keep an eye on the job market, be willing to begin at an entry level position and be sure you have the required skills before you apply for a job.

Janet always credited her deep concern for others to the lasting, loving, life lessons imparted by her well-known, activist Milwaukee parents. And as a result, she was generous to a fault.

"We always thought of Janet as our cool aunt," said Milwaukee native Sherry Carter, Richard's daughter and former popular co-host of "Video Soul" and solo host of "Video LP" on Black Entertainment Television. She also was live in studio on WNOV's "Carter-McGee Report" in October 1994.

"We just loved her so very much," Sherry added -- speaking on behalf of her sister, Tracy of Los Angeles, who also was born in Milwaukee.

In addition to Richard, Sherry and Tracy, Janet's other Milwaukee born-survivors are nephews Terrence, of Acworth, Georgia, and Steven, of Shaker Heights, Ohio.

A private family visitation for Janet was held last weekend at Northwest Funeral Chapel, 6630 W. Hampton Avenue.

Each year, its ranks have grown with individuals that bring outstanding attributes and commitments to the community.

2019 Negro League tribute to bridge generations

The Brewers will don the uniforms of Milwaukee's Negro League team, the Bears, while their opponents the Pittsburgh Pirates will wear the uniforms of that city's Negro League team, the Crawfords.

Fans who purchase the game package will receive a vintage Lorenzo Cain Bears' replica jersey.

The weekend's festivities will kick off with an induction ceremony for the two new members of the Wall of Fame at Holy Redeemer at 1 p.m. Holy Redeemer purchased the wall from the Brewers 14 years ago and has worked with the team to keep alive the honor.

A brunch will follow the installation services which will be attended by a score of Negro Leaguers, including two local heroes and several past inductees.

On Saturday, a program will kick off at Rose Park at 11 a.m. with a T-ball instructional program that will introduce central city children to baseball. That session will lead into the first commemorative little league game that will pit the Beckum Stapleton vs. Felix Mantilla in an all-star game.

A program will follow at 1 p.m. with recognition of the players followed by the unveiling of a memorial marker for Borchert Field, which was the one the city's first professional ballparks. The Milwaukee Bears played there in 1923.

Milwaukee is the only city to honor the Negro Leagues with such colossal fanfare. The original Wall of Fame was constructed at Miller Park. During the last 14 years of the current tribute structure, nearly three dozen members of the Negro Leagues have been honored.

Each year the Brewers Foundation has donated to Yesterday's Negro League Baseball Players Foundation and the Negro Leagues Museum as part of the commemorative.

Odom was born in Macon, Georgia, and lettered in baseball, basketball, football, and track. He had an astonishing 42-2 pitching record, including eight no-hitters.

Known as "Blue Moon," Odom was primarily known for his major league career with the Kansas City/Oakland Athletics, Cleveland Indians, and Atlanta Braves, but he began his professional careers with the Birmingham Barons.

He appeared in three World Series and ended his career in 1977.

Cobb played for the New York Black Yankees. After high school, he turned down an offer from the St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds to accept a college scholarship to Allen University.

After graduation, he signed with the Indianapolis Clowns before joining the Yankees. In 1958 he was offered a contract with the Milwaukee Braves but got drafted into the U.S. Army.

The Great Black Hopes of Boxing

SIGNIFYIN'

By Mikel Kwaku Oshi Holt

Other members of the Negroocracy tried to use Islam as a left hook to stagger Ali, including Floyd Patterson.

Obviously, Ali was not the only Black "champion" to feel the wrath of American Apartheid's coordinators.

The first recognized Black champion, Jack Johnson, was charged with the crime of liking vanilla (White women) and flaunting this preference in front of White America (particularly White men).

He did so during an era in American history Black men could be lynched for merely looking at a White woman...or not tap dancing fast enough!

Johnson was forced to leave the country and only permitted back when he allowed himself to lose to a Great White "Dope."

Not all African American professional boxers are worthy enough to be placed on a pedestal by us.

Some are an embarrassment to our tribe because of their conduct and lifestyles. Floyd "Money" Mayweather, Jr., is the richest boxer in history—of any race. But his unbeaten record, technical skills, and superior ring generalship are obscured by his out-of-the-ring activities.

He's spent time in prison for domestic abuse, and his openly disgusting chauvinism is only matched by his pompous nature and disconnect to the upliftment of Black America.

I'm sure there's probably more than a handful of brothers who envy Mayweather's trendsetting claim to "keep" three or four baby mamas' in his multimillion-dollar estate simultaneously, but that "porno scenario" sends what kind of message to his children, the institution of marriage and Christianity?

I'm sure there are many sisters who would jump at the opportunity to sleep on beds of gold (gold sheets, that is).

And being a Black boxing champion provides, to some, an excuse for wrongdoing. Just ask Mike Tyson.

To this day there are those who assert Tyson was "the victim" of the rape charges that sent him to prison. And since many professional boxers started their careers in prison, it's assumed their conduct outside the ring will always be tainted.

Moreover, in our materialistic world, riches and notoriety are like a suit of armor. And the blinding glare cast off that suit of gold can obscure our vision.

But that's an illusion.

If we had our druthers, all of our professional pugilists would be measured against Sugar Ray Leonard and Andre Ward. Handsome, well mannered, articulate, and professional.

Joshua seemed to fit that profile, only to be knocked out by Ruiz.

And since the heavyweights always take center stage, that leaves us with Deontay as the next best option. He may not be as articulate as some, but he's a fun-loving, exuberant individual who has taken the physician's oath to "do no harm"...to his image, and ours.
