Celebrating our people's emancipation, honoring a community servant and icon

It was Mac Weddle week in the community, as the retiring executive director of Northcott Neighborhood House was honored twice for his tireless efforts to improve the lives of children and adults in Milwaukee's Black community. He was saluted at Juneteenth Day for his hard work putting on what is arguably one of the best Juneteenth celebrations in the nation. He and Northcott employee Adriane Griffin were the Grand Marshalls of the Juneteenth parade. He was given a classy send off later in the week at a retirement fete in his honor at the Tripoli Shrine Center. The R&B singing group, Ray, Goodman and Brown performed at his retirement party.

Weddle has served as director of Northcott for 19 years, and has been with it for 42 serving in various positions. He also served on the board of African World Festival, WHEDA, and MLKEDC.

It's hard to believe race was NOT at the heart of attempted coup against Judge White

There's no way to get around the issue of race being a factor in the attempted coup to oust Chief Judge Maxine White as Milwaukee County's chief judge.

Try as I may, the cloud of race—and racism—keeps blocking out the sun when I analyze the scenario leading up to White's reappointment last week, amid allegations from "colleagues" that she is "authoritarian and indolent," to paraphrase a column Wednesday by investigative reporter Daniel Bice.

The judges took their concerns to the State Supreme Court, seeking a review of White's temperament to block her reappointment to a third term as chief judge of Milwaukee County. The court eventually "overruled" the judges and reappointed White on a 7-0 vote.

And given that the Supreme Court (the appointing body for the state's eight chief judges) is profoundly conservative, implies one of two things: Either they unanimously thought White is the most qualified candidate for the position, or, they didn't want to get caught up in a racial quagmire with an election looming on the horizon.

Actually, if you think about it long enough, you could come to the conclusion that the four "acknowledged" dissenters, could be implying that White (who is Black) is a "b-tch".

Or better yet, you could merge the two suppositions and conclude she is a "Black B-tch"—aka "Uppity Negro."

But given that one of the dissidents is a woman suggests it is more racial than sexual.

Four of the judges linked to the judicial coup—Jeffrey Conen, Glenn Yamahiro, Dennis Cimpl, and

Question of the Week:

"Now that Milwaukee Bucks' star Giannis Antetokounmpo has won the NBA Most Valuable Player award, do you think he and the team will win the world championship next year? Why or why not?"

"The Bucks could have a good chance to win the NBA championship if they resign key players. Giannis must improve as a better outside shooter (mid-range). I don't feel good about it if they re-sign (Khris) Middleton and (George) Hill."

"I think the Bucks will win it all next year. I was a young boy when we last had as many accomplishments as we did this past season. I hope one day to tell my kids how we won our second title."

KARL HARRIS

"As a season ticket holder, I think the Milwaukee Bucks can and will bring a championship to our great city. They've received something they didn't have: experience. Stay tuned! The Bucks will bring a championship to Milwaukee in the near future."

ELDER RICKY PRICE

"Yes, I think Giannis and the Bucks know what it feels like to play in the playoffs and now they have the experience as to what it feels like to play in a finals. Next year, they will bring the (championship) trophy home."

Black YouTuber's body found a week after posting suicidal video

The body of a popular Black YouTuber named Desmond Amofah (aka "Etika") (at right) was pulled from New York city's East River recently, a week after he posted a suicidal video. According to the New York Post, the 29-year-old Brooklyn social media influencer and gamer was last heard from around 8 a.m. on Wednesday. He went missing on the same evening after posting an alarming video in which he appeared to be having suicidal thoughts. Despite his success Amofah cautioned in his last video that too much social media exposure will (expletive) you up....It (your life) can get blown completely out of proportion dog. #### Artist tasked with painting city mural arrested for vandalism

A Black male painter and musician commissioned by the city of Detroit to paint a mural, was recently arrested for vandalism by police while working on the project. "It's an oxymoron—doing something for the city and being arrested by the city," said Sheefy McFly (pictured at right) in an interview with the Detroit Free Press. McFly was painting a mural near 7 Mile and John R on Detroit's northeast side on June 21 when two female officers pulled up and arrested him. McFly claims he was treated like a felon, and felt racially profiled and bullied. A Detroit police official said McFly was uncooperative with their investigation and arrested for resisting and obstructing police, and having an outstanding traffic warrant. —Source: thegrio.com

Black tv show creator critical of Black stars for not boosting Black productions

Lena Waithe (right), creator of television shows "The Chi" and BET's "Boomerang," called out star Black actors for not boosting film and TV productions written, produced and directed by African Americans. She said there are some very big Black movie stars who could pay for two, three, even five small independent movies to get made by Black directors and writers. Waithe was also critical of Black stars for not helping with pivotal films important to the culture. She pointed to "Moonlight" and "12 Years a Slave," two important movies to the Black community that were produced by White movie star Brad Pitt. "I really do feel like there's a way for us to change the movie business from the inside out," said Waithe, "but we're all in our own silos doing our own thing." —thegrio.com

GIANNIS ANTETOKOUNMPO NAMED NBA'S MOST VALUABLE PLAYER!

Antetokounmpo joins Abdul-Jabbar as only players in Bucks history to win MVP

Giannis Antetokounmpo has been named the Kia NBA Most Valuable Player for the 2018-19 season, the league announced during the NBA Awards in Los Angeles recently. Antetokounmpo joins Kareem Abdul-Jabbar as the only players in Bucks history to earn MVP honors.

"We are beyond proud of Giannis for earning his first MVP award," said Bucks General Manager Jon Horst. "This well-deserved honor is due to his relless hard work and dedication in becoming the most impactful player in the NBA. Giannis propelled the Bucks to great heights last season with his leadership, drive and unselfish play.

"His grace on and off the court has made him one of the most admired players in the world. On behalf of ownership, the entire Bucks organization and Bucks fans everywhere, we congratulate Giannis for being named MVP."

While leading the Bucks to their best record since the 1980-81 season and the top mark in the NBA at 60-22, Antetokounmpo averaged 27.7 points (3rd in the NBA), 12.5 rebounds (6th in the NBA) and 5.9 assists (T-20th in the NBA) per game – all career-highs.

He also shot a franchise record 57.8% from the field (11th in the NBA), blocked 1.5 shots (10th in the NBA) and swiped 1.3 steals each contest. Antetokounmpo became just the ninth player in NBA history to average at least 25.0 points, 10.0 rebounds and 5.0 assists per game over the course of a season and did so with the highest shooting percentage.

Stories from new UWM graduates inspire us all!

BY MARK A. MONE—Chancellor University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Chancellor Mark Mone shares the success stories of some recent UWM graduates.

As summer gets underway, we are so proud of all the graduates from around our city. Whether someone is graduating from kindergarten, eighth grade, high school or college, these are important and life-changing accomplishments.

Just last month, the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee held its 120th Commencement ceremony. More than 3,500 students were eligible to graduate and walk across the stage at UW-Milwaukee Panther Arena. This is where we hear some of the year's most inspiring and diverse stories, and like the students who share them, these stories have origins in our community and from around the world.

UWM enrolls students from 92 countries, and more than a third of our students are people of color. Our long history as a diverse and welcoming campus is a unique and valuable benefit to our students – and one of UWM's greatest strengths. We are proud to play such a crucial role in the personal journeys of our students, and I'll share just a few of the many stories from our May graduating class.

Tre'quan Martin finished high school a year early with a $100,000 scholarship to attend Morehouse College in Atlanta. After overextending himself with extracurriculars, he narrowly missed the required

Teens and the Miseducation of Safe Sex

When you think of the term “safe sex,” what is the first thing that comes to mind? Usually it’s the act of being proactive and using protection (condoms) while being sexually active.

As years go by and the age of sexually active individuals get lower and lower, one can’t help but wonder, how safe can sex can really be? What exactly is safe sex? Teens make up one third of the US population. They also account for 50% of the STD cases the United States has seen. So, my question is, is sex even safe anymore? If so, why has the CDC removed the term from their clinical vocabulary?

After doing some deep digging, I have come to the conclusion, along with many others, that safe sex really isn’t a thing. Especially for teens who are still growing into their adolescence. There is a bit of miseducation on the much emphasized “safe sex” practice.

For example, imagine a young boy or girl who loses their virginity to their first love. Emotions, thoughts and feelings are pretty much haywire. Now, imagine a terrible break up between the two.

We’ve preached safe sex means using condoms and not having multiple partners so much, that we’ve overlooked the emotional dangers being sexually involved at a young age can bring about.

Teens don’t know what they want for breakfast or lunch, let alone are they physically or cognitively mature enough to handle the emotions that having sex can bring.

Studies show that in the 60’s there were only two known STD’s. It is now safe to say that the number has increased to 35, with 50% of these outbreaks being found in teens and young adults between the ages of thirteen and twenty-four. That is a very scary, yet serious thing to think about.

So, what’s the best way to teach safe sex? Honestly speaking, the best way to teach safe sex is to teach no sex at all.

In addition to teaching how important it is to be abstinent, it’s also crucial that your teen knows and understands concepts that lay beyond the physical aspect of sex. Why? Because, sex is more than a physical interaction and terms like “precautious” and “safe” are meaningless.

Teens have minds, feelings, hearts and spirits. Preaching that safe sex means using condoms to prevent STD’s and teen pregnancies is highly unrealistic.

While protecting the physical is necessary, it is just as important to protect the mental. Parents, mentors, doctors and teachers across the nation should incorporate teachings of emotional repercussions teens can experience when becoming sexually active.

Bucks’ Giannis Antetokounmpo named NBA’s MVP

A First Team All-NBA and First Team All-Defense selection, and finalist for Defensive Player of the Year, Antetokounmpo earned Eastern Conference Player of the Month honors in Oct./Nov., December, February and March/April last season and was a six-time Eastern Conference Player of the Week winner.

Antetokounmpo captained Team Giannis at the 68th All-Star Game in February after receiving the most player votes, the second-most fan votes and tied for the second-most media votes among all players.

This is the fourth time a Buck has won MVP and the first time since Abdul-Jabbar in 1973-74, who also won in 1970-71 and 1971-72. At the age of 24, Antetokounmpo is just the 12th player to win MVP before turning 25 and is the youngest MVP since Derrick Rose (22) won in 2010-11. The Kia NBA Most Valuable Player was voted on by the media.

grade point average to maintain his scholarship. He returned home to Milwaukee, where he discovered a new home at UWM.

Along the way, he connected with Milwaukee Public Schools to advise its students on scholarships and admissions and serve as a role model.

After finishing his first degree at UWM, he earned a master’s degree in administrative leadership in adult, continuing and higher education administration. He plans to continue advising students to show them how much they can achieve.

Mercedes Islas learned she was pregnant after getting accepted to UWM’s College of Nursing. UWM set up a virtual classroom to help her stay on top of her studies after her daughter was born. Another professor allowed her to bring her newborn to class.

In 2018, Mercedes and another student traveled to China to represent UWM and claim first place in the Shanghai International Nursing Skills Competition. Mercedes remembers seeing her mother graduate college and hopes to serve as a similar role model for her two daughters, not only by receiving her bachelor’s degree, but also by planning to continue her studies at UWM and earn a doctorate degree.

Alvaro De León González was born in San Jose, California, and moved to Mexico when he was 8 years old. In Mexico, he studied at the Universidad Autónoma de Aguascalientes and decided to transfer his credits to UWM to finish his civil engineering degree. Alvaro chose to study at UWM because of the university’s high level of engagement with state and local organizations.

In 2018, Alvaro landed a full-time position with Milwaukee’s city government as an engineering drafting technician. UWM gave him valuable opportunities to network and connect with the Milwaukee community, and Alvaro made the most of them.

Tre’quan, Mercedes and Alvaro are just a few examples of the diverse and inspiring individuals who graduate from UWM and go on to make a difference in the lives of others. They are the faces of the future, and they show just how powerful earning a college degree can be.

BIBLICAL COUNSELING FOR TODAY'S CHRISTIAN FAMILY

By Rev. Judith T. Lester, B.Min., M.Th.

July Is National Cell Phone Courtesy Month

Cell phones have become the norm in our society rather than the exception; therefore, it is proper to highlight cell phone courtesy. July is National Cell Phone Courtesy Month.

It is an event Jacqueline Whitmore founded a few years ago with the intent to encourage the increasingly unmindful corps of cellphone users to be more respectful of their surroundings by using some simple cellphone etiquette principles.

This topic is timely as there are millions of cell phone users in the United States alone and millions of cell phones ring irritatingly every day.

While cell phones are important tools in emergency situations; with the amount of people using cell phones in the United States, some courtesy is in order. This article will address cell phones at work and cell phones in worship.

Rules for Using Cell Phones At Work

Having your cell phone at work can be useful but it can also be very disruptive.

Your friends and family can reach you anytime, anywhere, which can be annoying. When you're on your own time, the choice to turn off your cell phone is entirely yours.

When it comes to using your cell phone at work, however, you have to be mindful of your co-workers and your boss. Here are some rules you should follow if you have your cell phone at work.

1. Turn Your Cell Phone Ringer Off. At least set it to vibrate. The sounds of different ring tones going off all the time can be very annoying to others. In addition, you don't want your boss to know how often you get calls.

2. Use Your Cell Phone Only for Important Calls. What should you classify as an important call?

The school nurse calling to say your child is ill, your child calling to say he's arrived home from school safely, and family emergencies that you must deal with immediately are important. Your friend calling to chat, your child calling to say the dog had an accident, or your mom calling to tell you a relative just got engaged should not be considered important.

3. Let Your Cell Phone Calls Go to Voice Mail. It will take much less time to check your messages than it will to answer the call and then tell the caller you can't talk.

4. Don't Bring Your Cell Phone Into the Restroom. Ever. Why? Well, if you must ask — you never know who's in there; the person on the other end of the line will hear bathroom sounds, e.g., toilets flushing; not to mention an invasion of your co-worker's privacy.

Cell Phones In Worship
 In worship, many people use their cell phones to search for scriptures, or to make notes on the sermon, however, nothing is more annoying than having a cell phone ring during worship services.

It is recognized that there are some professions that require one to be available at all times. Even in that instance, the cell phone has a vibrate button. Setting one's phone on vibrate allows a person to have their phone on, however, when a call is received, it vibrates instead of ringing. If you must bring your cell phone to worship, then it would be a sign of respect to your fellow parishioners to turn it off or set it on vibrate. A ringing cell phone in worship while others are praying is quite disturbing.

Many churches, in fact, have instructed their greeters and ushers to remind parishioners as they enter worship to turn off their cell phones or use the vibrate feature.

So, what do you do if you get a sudden and unexpected call in worship? If your phone rings in worship and it is from God, then you should answer it. But if it is not God, and it is not an emergency, it is only a distraction from the devil, and you should ignore it!

 Army of Ministers Lead House-to-House Canvass on Milwaukee's North Side

Central City religious leaders from diverse denominations mobilized voters for Nov.6

More than 40 Ministers from City of Milwaukee churches convened at Canaan Missionary Baptist Church - 2975 North 11th Street -- to hold a press conference before they launched a massive canvass door-to-door effort.

Ministers and members of their congregations knocked on every door in an 80 square block area urging people to vote on November 6 and leaving information where and when they can vote.

According to Rev. Greg Lewis of St. Gabriel's Church of God in Christ, "Our people must use their votes as a megaphone to call for jobs, health care, police accountability, safe streets, and quality schools."

It's hard to believe race not at center of attempted coup against Judge Maxine White

Stephanie Rothstein—now hope to go quietly into the night, hoping White—who appoints judges to different branches—does not retaliate.

I've known White since she was appointed to the bench by then-Governor Tommy Thompson, a Republican, in 1992.

Many of us assumed White was conservative, if not Republican.

In truth, I never asked her of her political ideology. I do know, both from conversations with colleagues and community leaders, as well as personal experience, she is a conservative jurist—meaning she's uncommonly ethical, uncompromising and an excellent student of the law.

As far as her political affiliation, well, Tommy Thompson was an unusual Republican, who actually cared about Black folks and warranted the highest Black voting percentage of any Republican running for statewide office in Wisconsin history.

He made appointments based on credentials, and White stood above most applicants for a vacant judicial seat.

But those accolades weren't exactly what came to mind when I appeared in her court many years ago on some trumped up (no pun intended) charges of assault. When the so-called "victim" didn't show up for the jury trial I requested, White ordered the DA to find out why.

After lunch, the DA said I had "allegedly" threatened the witness. And White threw me in jail!

Obviously, I hadn't, and immediately after my innocence was proven (and I was released from jail) we proceeded with a jury trial with a replacement judge.

As part of my defense, I had to put on a "karate demonstration" during which I showed the karate technique I used while defending myself.

We also presented a video showing had I wanted to hurt the person who attacked me, I could have.

In any event, the new judge handling the case exonerated me based on police testimony.

I must admit, I had less than complimentary feelings about White for a looooooooooooooooooooo time after that incident.

But I've always respected her and was elated when she was named the chief judge.

I also assumed she would eventually come under attack because that's the way things are in Milwaukee.

They (white judges) attacked the first African American judge, Vel Philips, before she could pick up her gavel in 1978.

And the attacks have continued ever since.

They went after Russell Stamper for exhibiting pride in his African American heritage. They helped block Louis Butler's bid to the state supreme court.

They have also sought to undermine Municipal Court judges Derek Mosley and Valerie Hill for being too lenient on minority victims of the system.

And who can forget the angst against the late Stanley Miller, who was also appointed by Thompson in 1992? He retired after two terms for health reasons that some attributed to his frustration in dealing with the culture at the courthouse.

Although White is not as vocal about racism in the judicial system as Stamper or Miller, she has set the tone, with an unblemished record that is worthy of emulation and accolades. She is, in a nutshell, a strong and powerful Black woman in the mode of Michelle Obama.

And it is because of that posture that she probably won't respond to her critics—"when they go low..." as Michelle said.

But this latest attempted coup does raise the question of whether those who have power over Black defendants can make unbiased and fair—justice vs. "just-us." Or, can we assume that many white judges, or at least those who secretly worked to undermine White, see justice through the eyes of Lady Justice—a blind white woman holding scales that always seem to be tilted in favor of everybody but us.

Actually, the answer is obvious. Remember, Wisconsin has the highest Black male incarceration rate in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and even South Africa.

And it's not because of the crime rate, or some pathological gene linked to African Americans, and Mexicans according to the Demigod living in the "White House".

Nope. Sadly, we know the answer to that question, and it is that too many local judges see justice in Black and (Maxine) White.

Hotep.

After Oprah's Central Park Five interview, you realize that a $41 million settlement will never be enough

By Ernest Owens, posted June 13, 2019

June has been a momental month for social justice through the arts. Award-winning filmmaker Ava DuVernay's groundbreaking Netflix film When They See Us, detailing the heartache and impact of the Central Park Five, has broken records and invoked renewed empathy for the five young Black men who lost years of their life in prison.

Since its release, it's been the most watched show in America. A new generation has been exposed to the trauma surrounding the unjust conviction of Antron McCray, Korey Wise, Kevin Richardson, Raymond Santana and Yusef Salaam (who at the time were between the ages of 14-16 years old) in connection with the assault and rape of Trisha Meili. As a result, public opinion has weighed in and no one is feeling it more than the two prosecutors who were involved in the wrongful conviction. Both Linda Fairstein and Elizabeth Lederer have faced major backlash, firings, resignations, and public shaming for their part in this travesty of justice.

Meanwhile, the Central Park Five have gone on to garner viral sympathy and further exoneration in eyes of anyone who has looked at the hard facts of this case. The group, referred to many now as "The Exonerated Five," recently received the ACLU's Roger Baldwin Courage Award and have been given the opportunity to tell their story to many major news outlets.

On Wednesday night, however, the men were granted the one opportunity they have always wanted — the chance to be interviewed by the Queen of all Media herself, Oprah Winfrey, for a special aired on her OWN that unexpectedly gave a different viewpoint than what I initially expected to see.

What I anticipated was a optimistic yet motivational heartfelt conversation that would be reminiscent of many of Oprah's past interviews. Instead, what I watched was a sober and raw look at how a failing justice system continues to terrorize those found innocent beyond exoneration and settlement and how such implications carry consequences that may never be resolved.

"Even to this day I'm damaged. I need help. I know it. I try to keep myself busy," Antron McCray told Oprah Winfrey during the special. "The system broke a lot of things in me that can't be fixed."

It was hard hearing the ongoing trauma many of those men have continued to face. Their onstage tears and the crying in silence conveyed more than any words that could be said. The deep pauses, the inflection in their voices, in each description there was a pain present that you know may never go away because you can still see it in their faces even through a television screen. Moments of joy and anger were somehow felt hand-in-hand. I was personally moved by Korey Wise's resilience as one who faced the more intense interrogation by law enforcement.

Even so, nothing compared to the instant knee-jerk reaction when McCray said he would never forgive his father, Bobby, for pressuring him to confess to a crime he didn't commit.

"No ma'am ... he's a coward," McCray told Oprah with intensity. "I hate him, my life is ruined."

The interview left me with a deeper sense of urgency on being more sincere with discussing the impact that incarceration has on those closest to us. It's not enough just to celebrate those who are released, but actually recognize that life after incarceration carries trauma that also needs guidance and support. It's not just enough to pray and keep the faith, but to actually commit yourself to checking in and lending professional support. Since the show, I can't stop thinking about how many Antron McCrays are in my family and what can be done to make them feel more seen and loved.

"We're still here," Raymond Santana said towards the end of the show. "We're grown now."

This is true, and I think it's time for America to get serious about how we support and protect our brothers like the Exonerated Five, making sure they know they're not on their own.

Those words hit me deeply. It revealed a sobering truth that nobody at home watching wanted to hear, but it was real. Despite the dusted off praise, additional settlement, honors, and visibility, none of it will ever be enough to fix some of these men's lives. As a society, and as Black people more generally, we are often engrained to have faith and be more hopeful, but McCray kept it real in an unexpected way revealed that a failed system that exonerates also leaves scars that can't be healed.

Remember when...

Original Black R&B flourished in 1950s Milwaukee

By Richard G. Carter

"Well if I don't love you baby, grits ain't groceries, eggs ain't poultry and Mona Lisa was a man..." Little Willie John, King Records (1955)

The heyday of doo-wop and original Black rhythm and blues -- 1953-63 -- made a lasting impression on Milwaukee's vibrant Black community. Indeed, this truly American art form flourished in our inner-city neighborhoods and was loved by teens and adults.

Vocalizing teenagers regularly did their thing on summer nights on, or near, the Lapham Park playground at N. 8th and W. Brown Sts., and outside Larry's Frozen Custard near N. 6th and W. Walnut Sts. And their prodigious talent was applauded by onlookers.

Most copied the styles of leading Black groups of the day -- Spaniels, Clovers, Five Keys, Orioles, Drifters, Moonglows, El Dorados, Danderliers and Counts. Lead singers hoped to emulate James (Pookie) Hudson, Buddy Bailey, Rudy West, Sonny Til, Clyde McPhatter, Bobby Lester, Pirkle Lee Moses Jr., Dallas Taylor and Chester Brown.

Most deep, doo-wop voices parroted booming bass-lines by the likes of the Spaniels' astounding Gerald Gregory -- the best of all time -- and Prentiss Barnes, Jimmie Ricks and Bill Pinkney. The latter, of course, wowed the entire nation for the Drifters in 1954 with his signature bass lead on Irving Berlin's "White Christmas" -- a holiday staple to this day.

Adults and teenagers flocked to see, and hear, these fine performers when they came to town -- heralded on colorful posters plastered on telephone poles and light poles, and displayed in windows of Black barbershops, beauty shops, restaurants and taverns.

Back then, R&B shows usually were held at movie houses such as the Colonial at N. 16th and Vliet Sts., the Garfield on N. 3rd between W. Locust and W. Chambers and, on occasion, downtown at the Riverside and Wisconsin theaters. From time-to-time, local groups -- such as one headed by the phenomenal John Taylor -- would open the shows.

In these venues I also recall stunning solo performances by James Brown and his Famous Flames, Little Richard Penniman, Johnny Ace, Andre (Bacon Fat) Williams, B.B. King, Bo Diddley, Lloyd Price, Esther Phillips, Big Maybelle, Etta James, Ivory Joe Hunter, Willie Mabon and the one and only, Roy Hamilton.

But male vocal groups were our main interest, with hits such as "Baby, It's You," "Goodnight Sweetheart" and "You Gave Me Peace of Mind" (Spaniels); "Good Lovin'" and "Blue Velvet" (Clovers); "Most Of All" and "Sincerely" (Moonglows); "I'll Be Forever Loving You" and "At My Front Door" (El Dorados); "Darling Dear" and "Hot Tamales" (Counts), and "Chop, Chop Boom" and "My Autumn Love" (Danderliers).

Also memorable was the sound of R&B every summer night from car radios cruising Walnut St.-- the tingling heart of Black Milwaukee. More often than not, they came from clear-channel WLAC radio in Nashville on Randy's Record Shop. It was almost non-stop.

Record retailer Randy Wood, in Gallatin, Tenn., was White, and his main host was Black-sounding, White disc jockey, Hoss Allen. He captured Black Milwaukee, playing the likes of "Earth Angel" (Penguins); "Sexy Ways" and "Annie Had a Baby" (Midnighters); "I Only Have Eyes For You" (Flamingos); "Red Hots and Chili Macs" (Moroccos); "Blue Moon" by the Marcells, and "In The Still of the Night" (Five Satins)

Unlike the great Moonglows, most pioneering, talented Black vocal groups, have yet to be inducted into the White-run Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Foremost are the iconic, multi-hit, legendary Spaniels -- with doo-wop's greatest lead and bass singers -- Hudson and Gregory. Their 1955 recording of "Painted Pictures" was the first time the phrase "doo-wop" was clearly heard on a record. Yet, they are ignored by the Rock Hall.

Great Black groups live on stage in those days warbled into only two microphones -- one for the lead and one shared by three or four background singers. Still, they created a sound second-to-none -- without electronic tricks, vocal enhancements or lip-synching.

One of my fondest memories of R&B shows in Milwaukee was a 1955 performance at the Garfield (later the Opportunities Industrial Center training site) by the Diablos and their dynamic lead singer, Nolan Strong. At that time, the group was working for Fortune Records and riding high with a phenomenal, ghost-like hit called "The Wind."

Along with the Flamingos' still popular "I Only Have Eyes For You," the Diablos version of "The Wind" is one of the smoothest R&B sounds in history. And Strong's lilting voice -- in tribute to his idol, Clyde McPhatter -- is among the mellowest. To wit:

"I-I know she-e-e has gone, but her lo-ve lingers on, in a dree-a-m that the wind brings to me..." The words, and phrasing, give me goose bumps to this day.

Watching and listening to them amidst an all-Black capacity crowd on a summer Sunday afternoon, of all times, proved to me that the boss sound of our "Big Beat" could be appreciated any time of day or night, in any venue. And the Near North Side of Black Milwaukee in the middle '50s was where it was at, more times than I can count.

For Milwaukeeans who may have missed it, listen up: The beautiful and bountiful, down and dirty, soaring and soulful Black R&B, a.k.a. doo-wop, of my salad days here in the 1950s-'60s, evolved into rock 'n' roll and changed the world. And this original sound -- despite being watered-down over the years -- still makes the world go round.

URBAN MY DIALOGUE

By Torre "ToeJoe" Johnson

A World of Complete Happiness

Today, freedom is needed even more than yesterday. Yesterday we fought for and received, then somehow for some reason we stopped recognizing our needs. We stop having the desire to have and create our own.

We stopped having a need for a complete world. It seems as though when some of us were allowed to achieve, we no longer cared how or why the others around us grieved. Not to mention caring about if they were even being fed.

In our world we have so many different beliefs and opinions. Especially how our concerns should be addressed and then met.

I pray daily that one day soon we will come together and begin building villages, while continuing to accept each life challenge. This is because everyone has a right to experience complete happiness. Peace.

Public Notification of Completion of a National Research Study Conducted in Milwaukee County

The IMMEDIATE Trial, studying the effect of intravenous glucose-insulin-potassium (GIK) versus intravenous glucose placebo (an inactive substance) in patients with a suspected lack of blood supply to the heart, given in the out-of-hospital setting by emergency medical services (EMS), has been completed in Milwaukee County.

About the research

This study was funded by the National Institutes of Health and took place between December 2006 and July 2008. Researchers and physicians studied a total of 911 patients treated by 36 EMS agencies located in 13 US cities and metropolitan areas. Milwaukee County was one of the study sites where Milwaukee County EMS and the Medical College of Wisconsin performed this research.

Of the 911 patients enrolled nationwide, 59 were enrolled in Milwaukee County between February 2007 and July 2008. The average age of patients in this group was 62 years. 43 patients were male (73%) and 16 were female (27%). 36 patients were Caucasian (61%), 20 were African American (34%), 1 was Native American (2%), and 2 were unreported race (3%). 1 patient was Hispanic (2%).

Study results

Among patients with a suspected lack of blood supply to the heart, out-of-hospital treatment with intravenous glucose-insulin-potassium (GIK), compared with glucose placebo, did not reduce progression to a heart attack or improve 30-day survival. Out-of-hospital treatment with intravenous glucose-insulin-potassium (GIK) was associated with lower rates of the combined outcome of either in-hospital death or out-of-hospital or in-hospital cardiac arrest (a condition where the heart does not pump blood). The information gathered in this trial will help us develop the best treatments to improve outcomes for patients suffering a suspected lack of blood supply to the heart. For additional information, please contact Dr. Tom Aufderheide by phone at (414) 805-6493 or by email at RRC@mcw.edu.
