WISCONSIN'S LARGEST AFRICAN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

PULSE OF THE COMMUNITY

By Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

“Is the Black Press still needed?
Why or Why not?”

“It’s extremely important for our story to be told, and who better to tell our story than our own Black press.”

ANTOINE REASBY

“Absolutely! (The) Black press has historically told our story and they continue to tell our story. (The) Black press gets to the heart of our culture and gives us visibility to a broader audience.”

TIFFANY BATTON

“Yes, the Black press is the historical stakeholders for our community. They are a vital agent to represent our people, community! We are represented in the manner that speaks/represents us in a positive light because of the Black press! They enhance us and I am grateful for the Black press.”

ERICKA
RUSH

“I unashamedly agree that the Black press is still needed today. Nobody is able to recant our story like we can.

ALEX ERDMAN

Our story must be told and our engagement in journalism is needed, valued and critically important. I am thankful for the continued fidelity and commitment of Black/African American authorship in journalism. I celebrate those resilient persons who work hard daily, telling our stories and being the voice the community needs to hear and earnestly respects.

Mother of Eric Garner writes powerful essay after decline to prosecute cop who killed him

By Kia Morgan-Smith, article

Eric Garner's chokehold death, captured on cellphone video, will not lead to federal charges for the NYPD officer who killed him.

This decision, announced recently angered his family who had waited five years for Officer Daniel Pantaleo to be brought to justice.

Gwen Carr

Garner's mother Gwen Carr wrote a passionate piece for The New York Daily News saying her son who died after being choked into submission, was killed all over again on Tuesday.

Garner's mother Gwen Carr wrote a passionate piece for The New York Daily News saying her son who died after being choked into submission, was killed all over again on Tuesday.

“Five years ago, my son said “I can’t breathe” 11 times as officers placed him in a banned chokehold and killed him. After patiently waiting, following the rules, hoping for accountability and closure, we now learn that the Department of Justice has decided not to bring federal charges against Officer Daniel Pantaleo,” Carr wrote.

“The DOJ has killed Eric all over again, and today we are the ones who are finding it difficult to breathe.” Carr, and many others, believe Pantaleo and the other officers involved got away with murder.

“Everyone saw what happened; the entire

Finding accurate news and information in the digital era

By Princess Byers—MCJ Intern

With continuous barriers facing journalism, it has become a challenge for people to know what news they read, hear, or watch—in traditional ways (radio, newspapers, television) and/or online—is real and accurate.

A lot of news had become opinion-based rather than fact based as it should be. It is becoming harder and harder to get fair, balanced, unbiased reporting to be informed, gain knowledge, and perhaps take some form of action. Advancements in technology gives everyone the freedom to be a reporter of news, but from their own perspective, which is not always good, let alone balanced and unbiased.

Unfortunately, the ability to be “Joe Journalist” is not always a good thing since it allows any and everybody to tell news from their own perspective...which is often skewed to fit the “reporter’s” personal ideology, facts and the truth be damned. However, there are still ways we can combat this problem as both journalists (and amateur journalists), and consumers of news.

Fair and accurate news will always be upheld with some type of source available which will allow readers to fact-check for themselves.

“Accurate news is supported by facts; facts are supported by studies or documented proof, or if you or someone else saw it yourselves,” said James Causey, a columnist with the Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel.

Johnson Publishing Company

(JPC), the creators of Ebony and Jet magazines, is preparing to auction off Ebony's 4 million photo archive valued at $46 million. Sale of the photos will help JPC settle with its creditors, who include noted filmmaker George Lucas and his wife, finance expert Melody Hobson; Hudson-Bay, Macy's and former JPC CEO Desiree Rogers. This past April, the company filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy protection. JPC reportedly sold Ebony and Jet magazines to Clear View Group (CVG). Last month, CVG laid-off the editorial staff of Ebony after failing to meet its May payroll. “While the process is now in the hands of a Chapter 7 Trustee, Johnson Publishing Company is grateful for its 77 years of existence, and the unwavering loyalty, dedication and commitment of its employees, vendors and customers,” the company said in a news release.

Black Enterprise magazine reports that median Black wealth will plummet to zero by 2053, and it will not matter if you have a college education, a fat six-figure salary, or have a C-level suite with matching title from a major corporation. The magazine report noted Black Americans are often still negatively impacted by a lower net worth than other communities. The dismal statistics hit Black women even harder.

According to Black Enterprise, single Black women ages 20-39 who hold a Bachelor's degree, have a median net worth of -11,000 to $0 compared to White women in the same bracket whose net worth ranges from $3,400-$7,500. Married Black women ages 20-39 with Bachelor's degrees have a median net worth of -20,500 to $7,700 while married White women have a net worth range of $18,700 to $97,000.

Murray is one of several Republicans to declare their candidacy to take down the freshman legislator who has garnered many headlines since she's been in office. Murray announced her candidacy on Twitter, accusing Ocasio-Cortez of seeking “celebrity and publicity” more than she helps her own constituents. “There's a crisis in Queens and it's called AOC,” Murray wrote in her tweet. She isn't worried about us—she's worried about being famous. That's why I'm running for Congress.” Murray, who immigrated from Jamaica as a child, will be making her third bid for public office. She ran unsuccessfully for the New York Assembly in 2015, and New York City Council in 2013 by 80-plus percent margins.

Encourage Yourself

Sometimes, self-motivation can be the hardest thing to have. Even I've found myself quick to motivate friends and family, but slack when it comes to motivating myself. It's not necessarily because I don't want to motivate myself.

It falls deeper along the lines of having a strong and positive mentality.

When it comes to teens, there are so many different factors that influence them to behave the way they do. So, how can you stay motivated as a teen in this hectic world? How can you keep yourself encouraged and productive into and throughout your high school years?

Encouragement is the key to motivation. The biggest thing you can do is engage in things that make you truly happy. Even at a young age, happiness and what it really means can be confusing. I have come to learn that self-motivation happens when you can be in a happy place, mentally. You are then able to speak words of encouragement to yourself and bring a whole new light to whatever type of day or situation you're having.

Another way teens can become more self-motivated is to seriously ask yourself where do you want to be in life? Even something as simple as creating short term and long term goals can increase the likelihood of wanting to get things done and finding different ways to do it.

The key is to remember that at the end of the day, everything is mind over matter. Mastering the art of self-motivation will take you to places you would have never imagined. Stay positive. Stay persistent and always encourage yourself.

A study of emergency care involving victims of severe brain trauma is to be performed in this area.

Medical College of Wisconsin and Froedtert Hospital is conducting a research study to learn if either of two strategies for monitoring and treating patients with severe traumatic brain injury in the intensive care unit (ICU) is more likely to help them get better. Both of these alternative strategies are used in standard care. It is unknown if one is more effective than the other.

Because head injury is a life threatening condition requiring immediate treatment, some patients will be enrolled without consent if a family member or representative cannot be rapidly available. Before the study starts, we will consult with the community. We welcome your feedback and questions. For more information or to decline participation in this study, please visit boost3trial.org or contact our study staff at (414) 805-6493.

JULIA MEANS Appointed to the City of Milwaukee's Board of Health

Mayor Tom Barrett appointed Julia Means, Registered Nurse, to the City of Milwaukee's newly created Board of Health last month on June 27.

The nine-member commission will advise the Health Department on policy and advocate for public health practices that improve health outcomes for all Milwaukeeans.

The citizen oversight board was created by legislation adopted by the Milwaukee Common Council and signed by the Mayor in February of 2019.

Julia Means, a Community Health Ministry Nurse with Ascension Columbia St. Mary's Hospital, part of Ascension Wisconsin, touches countless lives everyday through her faith-based work promoting education around chronic disease management, food security, infant mortality in our community and health navigation.

Through Mean's tireless work and dedication, she has made an incredible impact on many in the community.

"I don't know Julia Means personally, but when I hear her name, the first word that comes to my mind is mentor," said Kymm Robinson, Sherman Park neighbor.

The importance of maternal and infant health cannot be overemphasized because it determines the health of the next generation and can help predict future public health challenges for families and our community.

"My cousin was a participant in the Blanket of Love Program and my auntie isn't around to help her, so the program was important," said neighbor Justin Patterson. "Julia Means is a teacher, a protector, a rescuer and a second mother. She's a guardian angel. Without her, I don't know where my baby cousin would be right now."

Means is an instrumental mentor to young women and men because she had powerful mentors in her own life.

"I would never be where I am today without someone pushing me," Means said. "I can help others because I had help.

By combining her nursing skills and her faith, Means has made an impact on Ascension Columbia St. Mary's and across Ascension Wisconsin. She created an innovative collaboration with church congregations, city officials, homeless shelters, neighborhood centers, community partners and programs to create the "Blanket of Love" program in 2004.

The program connects participants to resources that can help lower stress, support wellness and eliminate the two most preventable causes of infant death in Milwaukee: premature births and unsafe sleeping environments.

In 1996, Means became the first Parish Nurse at Ebenezer Church of God Christ. As a Parish Nurse, Means connected the church with the community.

"I'm blessed to work for an organization that fosters and encourages people to have faith in God. Ascension Wisconsin not only allows but encourages me to do my work and not hide my faith," said Means. "If you take care of God's business, He'll take care of your business." Means truly believes this is due to the countless examples of how God continues to work in her life and the lives of her participants.

"I see myself as the bridge between the community and the hospital. I'm an advocate for people in the community that feel they have no voice," said added.

While Means is out and about, people always approach her and tell her how she's impacted their lives. Children even run to her and call her grandma. "I have a new grandchild every day," Means said.

Means is honored and thankful to wake up every day and do this work. Although people give Means recognition for the work she does daily, Means credits God.

"It's not my work, It's God's work. I am grateful He chose me," said Means.

Ascension St. Joseph Hospital is holding their 22nd annual Concerts in the Park Series, Celebrating 140 years of service to the community. All concerts run from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Ballpark food will be on sale at all concerts, with proceeds benefitting a different neighborhood school each concert. There will also be free blood pressure and diabetes screening, fresh farmer's market, courtesy of Mount Cavalry, and fun activities for children.

Army of Ministers Lead House-to-House Canvass on Milwaukee's North Side

Central City religious leaders from diverse denominations mobilized voters for Nov.6

More than 40 Ministers from City of Milwaukee churches convened at Canaan Missionary Baptist Church -- 2975 North 11th Street -- to hold a press conference before they launched a massive canvass door-to-door effort.

Ministers and members of their congregations knocked on every door in an 88 square block area urging people to vote on November 6 and leaving information on where and when they can vote.

According to Rev. Greg Lewis of St. Gabriel's Church of God in Christ, "Our people must use their votes as a megaphone to call for jobs, health care, police accountability, safe streets and quality schools."

"Our religious leaders, we must recognize that we are making a difference in who makes decisions that can help or hurt us."

"In 2018, we are going to show political leaders that our voting block matters and we better be a priority in the future."

The canvass went south from Chambers Street to North Avenue.

Back to the Polis is a network of Churches building a groundswell of voters in 2018.

For more information, please call Rev. Greg Lewis at (414) 324-1829 or email at rev.greglewis@stgabriel.org

PERSPECTIVES

When it comes to economics we are our own worst enemy!

I’ve never been good at math, but even with my questionable skills, we could cure many of our social ills if our earned (or government) dollars touched three Black hands before leaving our community.

Let me reiterate: keeping our dollars in our community will not only impact our economic well being but our cultural and spiritual indolences as well.

Translated into Ebonics, if we spent our “Black dollars” with “Hueman” vendors instead of suburban contractors, Asian suppliers of horsehair or over-priced groceries sold by Brown people (not Latinos) who don’t identify with us, we would not only create thousands of jobs, but restore the nuclear family and take a big bite out of crime.

And, if that dollar touched four Black hands before paying for some rich kid’s private schooling, we could probably end teen pregnancy, replace Uncle Sam with employed brothers and also fund a cure for ashy skin that doesn’t involve Vaseline.

Seriously, if we embraced the concept of Ujamaa (cooperative economics) we could feed ourselves instead of begging others for handouts.

But sadly, my vision is but a pipe (not that kind) dream.

Instead, most of us are too lazy, too comfortable or too brainwashed by Madison Avenue advertising and propaganda to recognize we are our own worst enemies.

Too many of us are too busy playing out our slave roles to understand how we are undermining our own self-determination.

Too many of us lack the cultural sophistication or nationalistic ideology to understand the importance of moving from “civil” to “silver” rights.

Sadly, too many of us can’t focus on Malcolm’s vision or King’s dream because self-hatred clouds our minds and distorts our actions.

Those realities continue to boggle my mind. We talk the talk but refuse to

Senseless Violence Claiming Youthful Lives

Another child has died. They’ve been killed and has had their life shortened by senseless violence. The same type of violence that many overlook until it’s a child.

Truthfully, I don’t think we get as upset as we should. We should be so angry about these deaths that we should demand the elimination of all gestures of hatred in our communities.

When our children began losing their lives or limbs along with the other crimes committed against them, it’s as if the world is ending. It’s like, anything goes which is a no no. As men, we have to protect our children and also our women.

Respect is the tool needed for us as a people to continue. Let’s practice respect then love will naturally form. Look at what we are doing to self. We can stop the violence if we stop accepting it in our lives.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

“I love America more than any other country in the world and, exactly for this reason, I insist on the right to criticize her perpetually.” —Author James Baldwin walk the walk. We understand the importance of self-determination (or some of us do) and community economics, but we make little or no effort to move behind the rhetoric.

We blame “White folks” for Black unemployment and the abysmal state of Black businesses development while refusing to understand how we contribute to the process by spending our dollars outside the community, or with entities that don’t practices reciprocity.

We’ll criticize the Arabs, Jews and Indians for running businesses in the central city but envy them for supporting one another.

We talk about community but don’t understand what the last five letters of the word spell.

This is a multifaceted problem, requiring a multifaceted solution, a recognition of disunity and economic ignorance. But first, we must understand the roots.

Black self-hatred is not only reflected in Black buying habits, we also see it in negative self-esteem, warped values (or lack thereof), crime, domestic violence, and drug addiction.

And nowhere do these social ills more clearly manifest than in our distribution of our resources.

You don’t have to be a behavioral scientist to surmise that we continue to manifest the traits of servitude: the shackles have been removed from our limbs but remain attached to our minds.

Standing on the Willie Lynch foundation, many of us continue to think anything Black/African American is inferior or tainted, and conversely anything White is pure and perfumed, saintly, superior, and godly.

Maybe that’s in part because we believe both Nyame (God) and Uncle Sam are old White men with beards. Either way that assumption is based on centuries of brainwashing and institutional racism.

To atone for the curse of our hue-manness, we have been taught to reject our culture, our value system our spirituality.

You can tell the brother or sister who subscribes to that self-destructive paradigm because he’s the one who rejects Afrocentrism for multiculturalism, a Black Jesus for blond haired, blue-eyed Yeshua, and the Caesar Salad for the baked potato.

These confused and culturally impotent brothers and sisters believe autos purchased from a Black dealership won’t go as fast, burgers from a Black-owned fast food restaurant don’t taste as good and Black ice doesn’t get as cold.

These tribal members will bypass an African American plumber, carpenter, and auto mechanic for White ones and then complain about the depressed state of the Black economy and how “n-words” (niggers) don’t want to pull themselves up by their bootstraps.

These adopted tribal members think Kwanzaa is a religious replacement for Christmas and thus can’t subscribe to the concepts of Ujamaa (and probably can’t spell it either).

And, Nyame forbade someone to make a strong case for an independent Black political party! We’ve been stagnated by the entrenched supposition that one of the wings on the same political bird will save us—only a White conductor can steer the Freedom Train.

The fact that we’ve been stuck at the station for centuries hasn’t deterred us.

But let’s put the brakes on singling out the aforementioned as the sole reason for our economic depression. All of us are guilty to a certain extent.

Even those among us with good and honorable intentions sometimes fall prey to convenience, habit or occasional prejudices.

The question is, are we willing to change course? To try harder. To add a rung on the ladder that will enable all of us to climb out of this pit.

The first step in that long journey can be as simple as erasing from our minds the stereotypes we have about black businesses.

Too many of us are quick to find fault with a Black contractor when in fact they are no better or worse than a White one, and they are family, meaning as they grow, so does the community.

Our criticism is usually based on prejudices and indoctrination. It is a scheme we can’t see through because we are blinded by the prism of slavery.

Recently, my wife and I chose a totally incompetent Black roofer for our home based almost exclusively on his melanin. The roof he repaired later leaked so badly it collapsed our ceiling. And to top off his unprofessionalism, his crew tracked tar on our floor when they entered to use the bathroom.

For the record, we didn’t allow this comedy of incompetence to go unchallenged. We got our money back and spread the word about his incompetence and deceit.

But, instead of turning to the suburbs, we sought out another African American who, incidentally, did an excellent job for which we recommended him to others. We’ve used him on a number of occasions since then, while the original contractor went out of business.

That must be the template we should all use.

Like Black politicians and preachers, we must hold our contractors accountable, expect nothing short of excellence, and then spread the word if they don’t meet our standards.

When we do so, recognize that many of them are first-generation business owners who had to overcome a myriad of obstacles that limited their growth. Many operate on a shoestring budget that prompted short cuts and poor customer service. In those cases, don’t be afraid to offer advice, or to point out bad habits. White folks do it all the time.

Recognize we have a responsibility to each other, that’s the essence of Ujamaa. By nurturing Black businesses (weeding out the cons) we open the door for Black employment and second-generation entrepreneurship. Jobs lead to marriage, home ownership and reinvestment in our community.

The next time you call for unity, or look to a politician to employ the masses, consider the role you play in our plight.

In case your memory (or social consciousness) is faulty, several years ago we had three Black-owned banks, a top rated Black-owned grocery store chain and even a Black-owned hospital.

Ask yourself why they no longer exist, and chances are you can recite the lyrics of Michael Jackson’s “Man in the Mirror” for the answer.

As for me, I proudly invest in Columbia Savings and Loan (the only Black financial entity still standing), utilize Black services and shop at Pick N Save, not only because it advertises in the Black Media while others ignore us, but because it serves our community, unlike Meijer’s, Woodson, and Sendik’s.

If you don’t have options, support the businesses that supports us. Pick N Save sees the value in the $1.5 billion Black consumer market and hires our neighbors. In some respects, it outshines many Black businesses.

That’s a progressive second tier.

Whenever possible, take that dollar (in my case from this Black-owned company), buy gas from the only Black-owned station, purchase an Africentric bracelet for your significant other from Timbuktu, invest a few dollars in Columbia Savings and pay your tithes (oops, sorry about that), so your minister can purchase his next Lexus from a Black car salesman since we lost our only Black dealership.

By the time that dollar finally heads out to the suburbs, it will be smudged, Black.

Local Health Partners Team Up to Address Inequality in Cancer Care

By Sarah Francois

Director of Fund Development & Marketing at Progressive Community Health Centers

There is always a fear of the unknown when dealing with health issues, especially cancer.

Janine Tucker, community outreach coordinator at Froedtert Hospital, hears these concerns daily. “People are afraid of getting a cancer screening because they assume they’d be better off not knowing if the outcome is bad.”

Tucker understands. Breast cancer runs in her family and she is diligent about getting screened regularly. She knows what it feels like to receive the dreaded ‘call back’ after a routine mammogram requires further diagnostic testing.

But as an African American woman who faces a higher risk of dying from breast cancer, Tucker recognizes that catching any signs of the disease early will likely save her life.

Research shows that African Americans have the highest death rate of any racial and ethnic group in the US for most cancers. The causes of these inequalities are complex and often linked to social and economic disparities.

Tucker, who has been at Froedtert since 2015, wants that to change. “I’ve seen people fall through the cracks too many times,” she said. “I hope to do my part to ensure everyone has access to the same quality care that I do as a Froedtert employee.”

Tucker’s role includes partnering with agencies on Milwaukee’s northside. She provides cancer prevention resources, and shares information about where people can go to find affordable health services, even if they don’t have insurance. One such place is Progressive Community Health Centers.

Froedtert and Progressive have been longstanding partners. In 2012, Froedtert pledged $2 million to help expand Progressive’s Lisbon Avenue Health Center, bringing Washington Park residents greater access to primary care services.

In 2017, Froedtert and the Medical College of Wisconsin donated x-ray and mammography equipment to the health center.

“People deserve access to high-quality, comprehensive health services no matter where they live,” said Jenni Sevenich, chief executive officer at Progressive. “Having mammography in the neighborhood increases the likelihood that people will get screened and receive timely care if a problem is found.”

And if a diagnosis is made, Tucker is there to help. She holds weekly office hours at the clinic to support patients in need of follow-up care. She also reassures them that most cancers are treatable if detected early.

“Sometimes it’s as easy as helping schedule a diagnostic test. Other times I attend appointments with patients, so they feel like they have an advocate in the room.”

Tucker is looking forward to Froedtert and Progressive co-hosting the third annual Health and Wellness Day on August 7th at the Lisbon Avenue Health Center. The free event will feature entertainment from the Milwaukee Bucks, haircuts by Gee’s Clippers, family friendly activities and community resources.

Breast and prostate cancer screenings will also be offered at no cost to women and men ages 40 and older. Those wanting a cancer screening should pre-register by calling (414) 805-3666.

"#TheSquad" Vs. Trump

tweeted. "Why don't they go back and help fix the totally broken and crime infested places from which they came. Then come back and show us how it is done."

"These places need your help badly, you can't leave fast enough," Trump added. "I'm sure that Nancy Pelosi would be very happy to quickly work out free travel arrangements!"

Out of the four congresswomen, Omar is the only one who was born outside of the United States, in Somalia. Pressley is Black and was born in Cincinnati and raised in Chicago. Ocasio-Cortez is Puerto Rican and born in the Bronx. Tlaib's parents immigrated to the United States from Palestine. She was born in Detroit.

The president's tweets set off a firestorm of condemnation from the media, Pelosi, Democrats in the House of Representatives, and even four congressional Republicans and one Independent.

All of them voted for and passed a resolution (240 to 187) condemning Trump's tweets, calling them racist, divisive, unrepresentative and xenophobic. True to form, House Republicans voted against the measure, saying Trump's comments were not racist.

Fighting fire with fire, the congresswomen and Pelosi took to Twitter to denounce the president's remarks.

Said Pelosi's tweet: "I reject @realDonaldTrump's xenophobic comments meant to divide our nation. Rather than attack Members of Congress, he should work with us for humane immigration policy that reflects American values. Stop the raids. — #FamiliesBelongTogether!"

Ocasio-Cortez's to Trump: "Mr.

President, the country I 'come from,' & the country we all swear to, is the United States.

"But given how you've destroyed our border with inhumane camps, all at a benefit to you & the corps who profit off them, you are absolutely right about the corruption laid at your feet."

Ayanna Pressley's to Trump: "THIS is what racism looks like. WE are what democracy looks like. And we're not going anywhere. Except back to DC to fight for the families you marginalize and vilify everyday."

Rashida Tlaib to Trump: "Yo @realDonaldTrump, I am fighting corruption in OUR country. I do it every day when I hold your admin accountable as a U.S. Congresswoman. Detroit taught me how to fight for the communities you continue to degrade & attack. Keep talking, you'll be out of the WH soon. #TickTock"

On the day of #TheSquad's news

"We are more than four people... "We ran on a mandate to advocate for those ignored, left out, and left behind. Our squad is big. Our squad includes any person committed to building a more equitable and just world." —Cong. Pressley conference, the hashtag #RacistPresident began circulating amongst those standing in Solidarity with the four congresswomen. By the next day, the hashtag #ObamaWasBetterAt also started gaining traction. The latter, was specifically meant to highlight the sheer incompetence of Trump, in comparison to his predecessor, President Barack Obama.

Trump was one of Obama's most vocal critics and not only ignited the birther movement, but has also spent the bulk of his own presidency attempting to reverse several Obama era policies, so the comparisons may just hit where it hurts.—Source for this article: thegrio.com

Finding accurate news and information in the digital era

Sandra Whitehead, professor of journalism and communications at Marquette University said, "There had never been so much information available; you can research the information you read in stories to assure that it is true."

Understand that there will always be some type of bias in the news you consume because journalists are human beings and humans have biases. They may not always be intentional, but they do exist.

"Professors are traditionally for media unbiased experts on something, but they often have an unintentional bias because they are doing research on a topic that the government or an industry is interested in which will shape what they know about the topic," says Whitehead

However, there are ways to get around biased news. One of the most important is to get your news from multiple sources or do the research yourself.

"When you see a news story you need to click on it, look at it, and see what date it was published," explained Causey. You need to see what publication the story came from, and it's also not a bad idea to see if anyone else had the story. Big stories come with multiple sources," said Causey.

"You can tell a story yourself; social media is a platform. It's a platform for a lot of people to use and everyone may not be a journalist, but you can tell a story in your own way shape or form. And if you see stories that don't properly reflect what happened, there is nothing wrong with calling the reporter who wrote the story and asking why certain facts were left out or asking why things weren't covered in the way you believe they should have been covered."

Journalists must be held accountable for what they report. As a consumer of news, you have every right to confront a journalist when there is inaccurate information in a story you see or read. You are more than welcome to call him or her (the journalist) on it. A good journalist is going to investigate your concern and fix it if it needs to be fixed.

If you want a full picture of what is going on in the world around you read and watch content that doesn't always agree with your point of view. Pay close attention to the story you're watching, hearing or reading as it relates to news—even news you don't agree with. This will ensure you are getting both sides of the story, thus making you a better consumer of news.

"We tend to latch on and to read things that contains our beliefs," said Causey. "But I think if you really want to educate yourself and be a well-rounded person when it comes to news and information, you need to listen to other sources. Get other perspective so you see where people are coming from."

world watched as my son's life was taken by those who swore an oath to protect and serve. It was all captured on video, in plain view, and yet somehow Pantaleo and all of the officers involved in Eric's murder have been able to walk away with a slap on the wrist — if that."

Pantaleo, Carr said, was never penalized and has continued to receive his nearly $120,000 pay over the years and even got $20,000 more in overtime pay.

"In fact, the only "punishment" he ever received was being placed on desk duty, where he's been able to rack up pay and pension benefits.

"Meanwhile, I will never get my son back. My grandchildren will never have their father. My family will never see Eric's beautiful smile again," she wrote.

"The NYPD failed us. Mayor de Blasio failed us. And now the DOJ has failed us. But we aren't going anywhere and we will not be silenced."

Carr said she and her family will continue to push to get Pantaleo and the other officers fired. According to the New York Times, it will be up to Commissioner James P. O'Neill to decide whether to fire Officer Pantaleo.

"We are asking Police Commissioner James O'Neill to fire Pantaleo and all of the officers responsible for Eric's death. They all must be off the force."

The reason(s) for my motion are:

Defendant submits its motion pursuant to Wis. Stat 806.07(1)(c) on the basis of misconduct by the Plaintiff and Wis. Stat. 806.07(1)© on the basis of justifiable relief. Defendant was not served with the Motion for De Novo Hearing on a Temporary Restraining Order or injunction filed by the Plaintiff on May 24, 2019 Defendant recognizes that the record contains an Affidavit of Service signed by Sandra Bicknase, which provides she served the motion on Defendant on Jun 18, 2019 at 3:15 p.m. Defendant did not receive this notice. Furthermore, Defendant's wife, Erma Glass, states that the Plaintiff actually hand-delivered the motion in question to the Defendant's household at approximately 5:20 p.m on June 20, 2019 – after the hearing for the motion occurred.

Defendant further objects to the court's order regarding the firearm restriction and surrender hearing scheduled on June 28, 2019. Defendant respectfully requests the court reconsider its determination of the need for this hearing as Defendant does not own a firearm and has no firearm registered in his name.
