Democratic Chairwoman and California Congresswoman Maxine Waters slammed Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg for its practices. He was the sole witness before the House Financial Services Committee hearing on Facebook's proposed Libra digital currency. She chastised the CEO for his company's lack of diversity, the anti-trust investigations into Facebook, and his company's impact on society. Waters said given Facebook's size and reach, it's opened serious discussion of whether the social media company should be broken up. Stunned, the Zuckerberg smirked and whispered to his staff. Victorious, Waters turned the mic over to the GOP minority member. —Thegrio.com

Portrait of former mayor Marvin Pratt unveiled at school named after him

Marvin Pratt, the only person in Milwaukee history to hold both the offices of mayor and Milwaukee County Executive, and his wife Diane admire the portrait of himself as it was unveiled by Milwaukee Public School Superintendent, Dr. Keith Posley, and Janice Carter, principal of Marvin E. Pratt Elementary School, where the ceremony was held before the students, faculty, and district officials. Pratt Elementary was formerly Silver Spring Elementary School. The name was changed in 2016. It's the hope of school officials the portrait will inspire future generations of students. It will hang near the school entrance so all students can view it often and understand the legacy of the man for whom their school was named. —Kemp photo

Gov. Evers calls for special session to take up gun bills

Black lawmakers praise governor for his leadership on the issue

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

State Rep. David Crowley, state Sen. Lena Taylor, and Milwaukee Ald. Cavalier Johnson recently praised Gov. Tony Evers for calling on the state legislature to convene a special session to act on common sense gun safety reform.

Saying it was "the right thing to do," Evers made his call for a special session during a news conference at Milwaukee's city hall where he signed executive order #54, which requires the convening of the special session to address the gun violence.

Evers wants lawmakers to vote on two bills during the session scheduled for November 7. One measure would enforce universal background checks, and the second (called "Extreme Risk Protection Orders" or ERPOs) would allow the courts to remove guns from individuals who may harm themselves or someone else.

"We're not talking about theory here," said the governor. "We're talking about actions that the legislature can take that will literally save lives in the state of Wisconsin."

Saying the proposed measures take a real step toward decreasing senseless gun violence, while maintaining Second Amendment protection, Rep. Crowley said the measures have widespread public support.

A recent summer poll showed 80% of Wisconsinites support gun safety laws—including gun owners.

Ald. Johnson cited a Marquette University Law School poll of 2018 in which 80% of Wisconsin residents favored extending background checks

The U.S. Postal Service will honor the late trailblazing veteran journalist Gwen Ifill with a commemorative stamp. Ifill, a PBS news anchor who died in 2016 of cancer, was among the first African Americans to hold prominent positions in both broadcast and print journalism. The stamp will be the 43rd postage stamp included for the Black Heritage series. Ifill previously worked at The Washington Post, The New York Times, and NBC News. ### NEW BUCKS-BRANDED WASHINGTON PARK COURT REFINISHMENT UNVEILED

Members of the Froedtert and the Medical College of Wisconsin health network joined Milwaukee Bucks mascot Bango recently to celebrate the newly Bucks-branded refurbished basketball court at Washington Park, 4164 W. Washington Blvd. The celebration included the unveiling of the court, which was presented by the Bucks and FMCW, as well as a youth basketball clinic and a community resource fair. The FMCW health network also introduced its Community "Care-A-Van," designed to provide residents access to free health screenings, education, coaching and health navigation. —Photo by Yvonne Kemp

The law team that represented former Dallas police officer Amber Guyger has started the process to overturn her conviction for the killing of Botham Jean by filing an "intent to appeal." Guyger was handed a 10-year sentence for fatally shooting Jean in his apartment, after mistaking his place for her own. The trial evoked issues of race, police misconduct and legal definitions of self-defense. Because Guyger garnered sympathy from Judge Tammy Kemp in her case, the Dallas County D.A.'s office wants Kemp replaced by another judge. The county's D.A. John Creuzot faces a contempt hearing. Kemp found him in contempt for taking part in an interview ahead of the trial, even after she issued a gag order. —Thegrio.com

ON THE TABLE WITH MUI

Dr. Eve Hall, president and CEO of the Milwaukee Urban League moderated a panel discussion the organization hosted recently as part of the city-wide "On The Table" discussions at North Division High School, 1011 W. Center St. The panel participants (pictured above with Hall) spoke on the criminal justice system and its socioeconomic impact on African American families and the community as a whole. The panelists were (left to right): Dr. Mohammad Dakwar, provost at MATC, Dr. Sadique Isahaku, a dean at MATC, and Leonard Simpson, who works at MATC helping incarcerated individuals pursuing college credits. Sponsored by the Greater Milwaukee Foundation, "On The Table" is an annual, one-day event in which citizens of all backgrounds and races talk about issues impacting them and Milwaukee in general. The discussions are held at various venues around the city and are done over breakfast, lunch, dinner or coffee. —Photo by Yvonne Kemp

PULSE OF THE COMMUNITY

By Yvonne Kemp

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:
"How important is gun safety and reform in making our community safer?"

"Gun safety is important because as a community, we have seemingly forgotten the importance of caring what happens in and around our community home and neighborhood. Education is key."

PATRICIA A. BRIGHAM

"It is imperative that we change the gun laws, so it will be harder for people to purchase weapons who have no business ever trying to get a gun."

MAC WEDDLE

"Gun safety is important as too often children are either seriously hurt or killed because they've gained access to weapons that have no gun locks or properly put away. Children don't know the dangers. However adults do and should take better precautions."

CHERYL ISABELL

"I believe that gun safety is a major key to healing our community. The focus should be equally divided between both citizens and our law enforcement departments. We are all responsible for the condition/social climate we are establishing for our future generations."

MARCOS KING

Services set for "renaissance man" Darrin Reasby

Services celebrating the life of community renaissance man Darrin Reasby, who died last weekend, several years after receiving a heart transplant, will be held Saturday, October 26, at Jerusalem Missionary Baptist Church, 2505 W. Cornell St., on the corner of Cornell and Teutonia Avenue. Visitation will start at 11 a.m., followed by the celebration starting at 12 noon.

A lifelong Milwaukee resident who worked with many companies, organizations, as well as several celebrities, Reasby's greatest joy was serving his community as an advocate for children and youth. He enjoyed teaching the youth entrepreneurial skills and training them how to start their own businesses by creating his organization called, "Born2Dream."

The organization aim was to teach young people that if they dream it, they can achieve it. Reasby taught them how to create their own businesses and teaching entrepreneurial skills through workshops and exposing them to other leaders in the community.

Through "Born2Dream," Reasby did everything for the youth, from helping them attain scholarships for school to helping them open savings accounts and learn money management and how to save for the future.

After receiving a heart transplant, Reasby refused to let the challenges that go with such a life extending surgery slow him down or stop him from giving back to the community.

Reasby was a creative genius and had so many ideas he wanted to impart to the young people in the community.

One idea was his new venture: a bakery for young people to work in and run called, "Are You Kidding Me Bakery."

Reasby was a chef, a fashion designer, event coordinator, and carpenter. He was also a son, brother, father, cousin, leader, and friend.

Advancing the community with the M<sup>3</sup> education partnership

By Mark Mone
Chancellor
University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

It's important to have partners in life, whether personal, at work, in sports or the arts.

A significant partnership involving the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee that's dedicated to improving our community's future through education is earning national recognition and showing promising results.

These hopeful signs, along with the start of a new school year, provide an opportunity for UWM, Milwaukee Area Technical College and Milwaukee Public Schools to reinforce our commitment to M<sup>3</sup> (pronounced M-cubed).

Together, we serve more than 130,000 students, and we are working together to forge a true public education network.

Thanks to our collective efforts, M<sup>3</sup> is building on a solid foundation. Graduation rates are rising at MPS. The four-year high school completion rate was 66.7% for 2017-18, the last certified figure, up from 59.7% in 2015-16. The target for 2020 is 72%.

The Parent Institute is expanding. The M<sup>3</sup> program was originally for parents of ninth- and 10th-grade students, but this year, it's grown to include parents with children in MPS middle schools.

The program supports parents as advocates for children's academic success and provides information about postsecondary options and entrance requirements.

More MPS students are applying for financial aid. MPS seniors are completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid at a higher rate – 70.1% of students as of July 31.

That puts MPS students on track to meet or exceed the 2018 year-end total of 74.6% through Sept. 30, 2018.

Early College program participation has doubled. In May 2019, 32 students completed the first class of the M<sup>3</sup> Early College program. Now, more than 60 students are taking 19 college credits over the course of the 2019-20 academic year. Early College gives MPS students a taste of college life by taking classes at MATC and UWM.

Our efforts are starting to earn nationwide recognition, too. In June, a group from Aiken County, South Carolina, traveled to Milwaukee to learn more about M<sup>3</sup> by speaking with leaders and representatives from UWM, MATC and MPS.

Also, we were honored with an award at the University Economic Development Association national conference in Reno, Nevada, in October.

Representatives from each of the M<sup>3</sup> partners delivered the winning presentation in the "Talent + Place" category that included two other finalists.

The category recognized projects that showed how putting the right people in the right environment benefits the community and economy.

Such recognition provides validation for the hard work of caring people from UWM, MATC and MPS. Still, there is so much more to accomplish.

We share a better understanding of how to work together. Leaders and stakeholders from all three institutions gathered over the summer to exchange new ideas. As a result, we're in the process of considering new goals that would measure progress well beyond 2020 and include postsecondary achievement.

The reward is witnessing scenes like the one I saw in May at the new Lubar Entrepreneurship Center and UWM Welcome Center, where M<sup>3</sup> honored the inaugural Early College class of 32 MPS students. They smiled, laughed and expressed their hopes for the future – a future that many did not believe was possible.

Graduates like Eric Andrekopoulos are proof of how lives have been so positively impacted by the M<sup>3</sup> collaboration. He was initially nervous about his workload going into the Early College program and felt like he was "doomed to fail."

That was hardly the case. After completing the program, he planned to join the Marine Corps as an aviation mechanic, the next step toward his goal of going into aerospace engineering.

"I see you're trying to expand" the Early College program, Andrekopoulos said at the graduation ceremony, "and that's a good thing to do, especially for upcoming generations."

Milwaukee Downtown, BID #21 funds hire of Downtown Homeless Outreach Coordinator

District rallies support for long-term solutions to end homelessness

As part of its Key to Change campaign, Milwaukee Downtown, BID #21 has raised more than $80,000 to fund a Downtown Homeless Outreach Coordinator for the next year. Housed within Milwaukee County's Housing Division, the position will be funded by Milwaukee Downtown, BID #21 and its funding partners, which include other business improvement districts, downtown associations, citizens and companies. The hire is one step towards alleviating homelessness in the greater downtown area; however, fundraising efforts are not over.

Milwaukee Downtown, BID #21 continues to lead the charge to reach its goal of $225,000 – a goal that would guarantee the position for the next three years. Homeless Outreach Coordinators already exist within Milwaukee County Housing Division; however, they are challenged daily to meet the needs of the entire county. The appointment of the Downtown Homeless Outreach Coordinator allows for a concentrated effort in the greater downtown area, where many of the county's homeless reside.

Beth Lappen has been named Downtown Homeless Outreach Coordinator for downtown Milwaukee's central business district, as well as several neighboring districts and main streets. Lappen brings more than 20 years of case management experience, with a focus on individuals with severe and persistent mental illness. Prior to her appointment, Lappen served as a Community Intervention Specialist at Milwaukee County Housing Division. She also worked as an Administrative Coordinator at Milwaukee County's Behavioral Health Division and as a Program Manager of Mental Health America of Wisconsin. Lappen holds a master's in social work from UW-Milwaukee.

Social Development Commission Helps Milwaukee County Residents Prepare for Colder Weather

SDC Auditors Check Homes for Energy Efficiency, Offer Emergency Furnace Replacement

It's that time of year. The cold weather is back. This means Milwaukee County residents are cranking up the heat. It can add hundreds of dollars to a household budget creating a huge financial burden for local families.

SDC's Weatherization Team can help.

SDC auditors inspect homes and help residents make changes that make homes more energy efficient. Updates and changes help some families save more than $400 a year on energy bills.

Serving like a non-profit, the state's largest community action agency can replace hot water heaters, furnaces and other items to help Milwaukee County's low-income residents.

Weatherization also saves energy in the home by repairing and improving the building.

The goal is to increase the home's energy efficiency, safety, and comfort by eliminating drafts and performing minor furnace maintenance and repair. Auditors may add insulation in attics, walls, the floor and perimeter.

Weatherization services prevent the loss of heated inside air. It ensures that appliance and heating systems work safely and efficiently. Auditors are available weekday mornings. As long as the home owner gives permission, reporters can follow an auditor and see how they are improve homes for weatherization customers. Contact Kim to schedule interviews.

Black Nouveau producer Everett Mashburn to be inducted into MKE Press Club Media Hall of Fame

Award-winning public television producer Everett L. Mashburn is one of eight individuals who will be inducted this year into the Milwaukee Press Club's Media Hall of Fame.

The event, which is open to the public, will be held on Friday, Nov. 1, in the Woodland Dreams Ballroom at Potawatomi Hotel & Casino, 1721 W. Canal Street in Milwaukee.

Mashburn is the senior producer of Milwaukee PBS's "Black Nouveau," which examines issues, culture, history, heritage, and challenges facing and affecting African Americans.

A lifetime public broadcaster, he has earned numerous awards recognizing his excellence in production, including four Emmy Awards, two CINE (pronounced: sin-eee) Golden Eagles, a duPont Silver Baton from the Columbia University Journalism School, three awards from the National Black Programming Consortium, and over a dozen awards from the National Association of Black Journalists, eight of which were for "Black Nouveau."

Everett is the 2014 recipient of D&R's Bayard Rustin Award in recognition of his efforts to promote peace, justice, and equality. He is a member of the National Association of Black Journalists, the Wisconsin Black Media Association, and the Beta Omega Epsilon Fraternity, Inc.

Obtain and get signed the papers that will allow healthcare providers to share healthcare information. Healthcare Providers do not have to share healthcare information unless approved. Know and share:

- Know who the healthcare providers are for you and your loved ones. Share this information while you and your loved ones are considered "mentally competent" to discuss the information. If you or your loved one are not considered mentally competent you may need to go to court to be declared guardian. Check with an attorney or your local guardianship office NOW... before the crisis occurs (Know Your Rights as guardian and seek legal advice).
- Know where the insurance papers, wills, trusts are if any. If they don't exist create them.
- Don't scramble to find this information later; the more you know early about the private affairs of loved ones (and the more you share with those caring for you) the more you can concentrate on the health issues and avoid stress. Caregiving is never easy, but the more caregivers know early, the easier and less stressful caregiving can be.

to private gun sales and 56% of those polled favored banning assault-style weapons.

"These are measures that have widespread public support," Crowley said. "Every single member of the legislature should be put on the record in a recorded vote about whether they support these measures that will save lives."

The state representative said instead of doing the right thing and hold public hearings where a robust public debate on the bills could be held, Republican lawmakers have chosen to bury the issue to avoid being forced to choose between popular policy, and their gun lobby benefactors.

"The special session is the only way that these bills—bills that will protect communities and families without infringing on individual rights—will see the light of day."

While she said she is grateful Evers is amplifying the concerns of the people of the state regarding the issue of gun violence, Sen. Taylor said the call for the special session and the bills being proposed are but one piece of the puzzle.

"We know that there are many contributing factors that require additional review and work," Taylor added. "For example, the recently announced study completed at UW-Milwaukee's Joseph J. Zilber School of Public Health, which links early lead exposure to gun violence."

The senator even noted a "lead-crime hypothesis" reported in a 2017 Reuters article where researchers have made the connection from lead in gasoline fumes, household paint, and most recently contaminated water delivery systems to crime and violent behavior. But Taylor was quick to note not every individual impacted by lead has gone on to commit a violent crime.

"... We have to consider every route by which a person can enter a pathway to violence," Taylor said. "We know that whether through broken systems, failed leadership, or indifference, certain communities have been ignored or underserved.

"We're not talking about theory here," said the governor.

"We're talking about actions that the legislature can take that will literally save lives in the state of Wisconsin."

"We must acknowledge the need for multiple approaches to stem gun violence. Whether public health, environmental justice, mental health, economic development and more, every contributing factor requires a platform to be heard, engaged, and remedied. Only then will we get on a path towards a safer future for us all."

Johnson said with guns shots ringing out hourly in communities across the nation and in Wisconsin too many youths have learned to be lulled to sleep by the sounds of gunfire.

"In fact, over the years, too many people and especially too many youths have learned to be lulled to sleep by the sounds of gunfire. In fact, over the years too many people and especially too many children have grown so accustomed to the sound of gunfire they don't hit the floor and don't think to call the police."

Johnson said it's time state lawmakers on both sides of the aisle publicly discuss legislation that can help reduce gun violence. "The special session will make that happen and the people of Milwaukee (and Wisconsin) will be watching."

Siloah celebrates 125 years Oct. 27

Siloah Lutheran Church, 3721 N. 21st St., will celebrate its 125th year anniversary with festival services on October 27 at 2 p.m., and celebrating songs featuring several choirs. A dinner will be served at 4 p.m. at the Grace Center.

There were few houses in the area of Capitol and Teutonia when Siloah was organized. Members waded through muddy fields to come to church in the early days.

But as the neighborhood attracted German immigrants, the congregation became the largest church in the Wisconsin Synod with over 3,000 souls.

As German families moved out of the neighborhood in the early sixties, Siloah considered relocation to another neighborhood where the members were living at the time.

Instead, the diversified congregations decided to build a school to serve the families of the community.

That school now serves many children grades pre-kindergarten through eighth grade. The Siloah congregation worships on the corner of 21st and Nash Streets where it has been for 125 years.

This integrated church includes a majority of African Americans who supports a new pastor and six full and part-time teachers. The congregation is a member of the conservative Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod.

The African Children's Choir to Perform October 27 at Peace Lutheran in Racine

The African Children's Choir will perform Sunday, Oct. 27, at 6 p.m., at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, 4340 Six Mile Rd, in Racine.

The African Children's Choir melts the hearts of audiences with their charming smiles, beautiful voices and lively African songs and dances.

The program features well-loved children's songs, traditional Spirituals and Gospel favorites. Concerts are free and open to all. A free-will offering is taken at the performance to support African Children's Choir programs, such as education, care and relief and development programs.

Music for Life (The parent organization for The African Children's Choir) works in the African countries: Uganda, Kenya, Rwanda, and South Africa. MFL has educated over 52,000 children and impacted the lives of over 100,000 people through its relief and development programs during its history. MFL purpose is to help create new leadership for tomorrow's Africa, by focusing on education.

The African Children's Choir is a nonprofit humanitarian and relief organization dedicated to helping Africa's most vulnerable children today so they can help Africa tomorrow. No tickets. Donations appreciated.

Army of Ministers Lead House-to-House Canvass on Milwaukee's North Side

Central City religious leaders from diverse denominations mobilized voters for Nov. 6

More than 40 Ministers from City of Milwaukee churches convened at Canaan Missionary Baptist Church -- 2975 North 11th Street -- to hold a press conference before they launched a massive canvass door-to-door effort.

Ministers and members of their congregations knocked on every door in an 88 square block area urging people to vote on November 6 and leaving information on where and when they can vote.

According to Rev. Greg Lewis of St. Gabriel's Church of God in Christ, "Our people must use their votes as a megaphone to call for jobs, health care, police accountability, safe streets and quality schools."

Our community has been seriously damaged by the barrier is down in 2018. I am educating people on what they need to vote, helping get their IDs, and making sure people have the tools to participate in the future.

FIRST SUNDAY

The NEW MCJ Weekend focus on the news and views in Milwaukee's Faith-Based Community

If you have news about your church and its activities and outreach efforts, we'd like for you to place it in "First Sunday," the new edition to the Weekend Edition that will appear in area churches on or before the first Sunday of each month. The information will also appear on the religious page of the MILWAUKEE COMMUNITY JOURNAL. This new focus joins the Weekend Edition focus family, and is part of our restructured roster of focuses, which includes: "Family Time," "Health & Wellness," "In The Black" (business and personal finance).

Below is the list of things we would like you to include when sending us your news! Email your event news to: editorial@milwaukeecommunityjournal.com

We look forward to hearing from you and putting your "good news" in the Milwaukee Community Journal.

Sunday has its own newspaper

- WHO: (The name of your church)
- WHAT: (What religious or non-religious event are you holding or sponsoring at your church)
- WHERE: (The location of your church [the address])
- WHEN: (Day, Date, and Time)

PERSPECTIVES

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

“Give your brain as much attention as you do your hair and you’ll be a thousand times better off.”

—Malcolm X

Part Two: The New Frankenstein Monster

I hate to admit it, but I’ve given up hope that we can reverse the dysfunctional state of the African American family in my lifetime, which means a significant percentage of our Black males will either subscribe or contribute to the “Culture of Poverty” (COP).

And that involvement significantly enhances the possibility that they will drop out of school, engage the criminal justice system, or join the terrorist army that is creating havoc in our community.

As mentioned last week, our community is being overrun by ghetto gangsters/Frankenstein monsters of our own creation, with body parts supplied by outside special interests and subsidized by the dominant political parties that profit from our misery.

It’s not happenstance that the last few years have witnessed the poverty industry surpassing the prison industrial complex in a conspiratorial scheme to forge new chains of slavery (profitability) to shackle our Black men.

There is evidence these special interests—progressive and conservative, middle-class professionals and the filthy rich have worked to sabotage efforts to free the new slaves—African American, Black, colored and Negro men sentenced to life imprisonment without bars.

We share their sentences and find ourselves trapped inside the prison while they prey upon us, creating opportunities for poverty pimps and missionaries. These gangsta thugs are indeed slaves despite their outward appearance—wearing brand name shoes, expensive rimmed cars, and a cloud of blunt smoke clouding their vision.

As abolitionist Harriet Tubman once said, she could have led more slaves to freedom, if they knew they were slaves.

That’s the dichotomy of our quest to seek justice and equality in America, assuming we want to include all of us, instead of a privileged few.

Most of those young thugs (and their thugette counterparts) have chains around their brains and don’t even know it. They are being pimped by a system that benefits from their negativity, including the government school system, poverty agencies, and even foreign countries that advance nationalistic programs that seek to maintain, if not grow, their market share.

But while it is true there are forces outside the community for whom maintaining the status quo is beneficial, we do our part by selling our children to them as fodder.

It speaks volumes that 70% of Milwaukee Black households are headed by a single woman, nearly 80% of whom are poor, uneducated, and more interested in buying weaves and wigs than a book for their child.

And when she, in turn, accepts the COP as a social norm, bad things happen to her children, particularly the boys who do not have a father in their lives, or a village to raise them in a positive manner.

A large percentage can’t read (in part because they were rarely read to or motivated as infants) and eventually drop out of school.

Many implode, and most will, in turn, impregnate an impressionable young woman with low self-esteem and even less ambition.

They are the monsters we help create, and many, if not most are predestined for felony convictions, most for doing harm to the community that birthed them.

And make no mistake: the COP—where there is no energy, effort, or expectations—is an opioid. It is a drug like crack, the more you suck on that pipe (vape), the more your physical and psychological condition deteriorates. You become a junkie, and just saying ‘no’ bounces off you like political rhetoric to a deaf person. Like heroin, this drug rids its victims of motivation, human compassion, and spirituality, if they had any, to begin with.

So, knowing the problem, why am I so pessimistic about solutions?

Three reasons:

The most potent entity impacting our lives—those I previously mentioned—have no motivation to affect positive change. In fact, just the opposite.

Nor do the partisan politics or corporate America. Taken together, that means there are three visible sources contributing to the maintenances of the status quo. And in truth, many Black civil rights groups have as their agenda the distribution of more crumbs instead of Black empowerment. Matter of fact, many of them are puppets of the political and civic structure and do their bidding, even when it is harmful to the people they supposedly were created to help.

If I’m not exaggerating on those points, that only leaves us to solve the problem for us. In a nutshell, it is left to us to shut down the laboratory, to tear down the apartheid walls and cast off the cultural slave chains.

And again, I’m not that optimistic.

I’ve been “Signifyin’” for decades. And though I’ve been part of several groups that created a national Black agenda, there has never been an embraced consensus and an even less acceptance for constructive fundamental change.

In fact, as Howard Fuller once said, “everybody’s for change until you present it.”

That change has to come through one of the three “C’s:” Cooperation (Ujamaa), culture or the church (mosque, temple or Shrine).

The problem with that strategy is another set of “C’s:”

Most of us are conflicted, confused, or compromised.

The best strategy we have working for ourselves is our faith and culture. But those of us who see ourselves and try to live our lives standing upon an Africentric foundation are few in number. Replacing a Eurocentric mindset, including its foundation of individualism and exploitation with an Africentric mindset is easier said than done, and will not take place before the bottom is completely removed from us, the reestablishment of slavery, or a global world war that will necessitate the bonding of Hue-mans in small tribes and communities.

And, most Black Christians are ill prepared or resolved to do what our religious tenets dictate.

Last Sunday, I was asked to lead a discussion/sermon as I walked through my church assembly door.

It was suggested that I open my Bible (actually, an app) and let Nyame (God) lead me.

My Bible app should have been set to the “daily scripture.” But instead, it took me to Romans 12. Hmm. Coincidence?

Even without thinking it through, I ended up using the verse to put an exclamation point on last week’s column.

I talked about how my column had plagued me as I sought to write a concluding segment and how our faith can (if we block out the noise of resistance) provide an answer.

The congregation (including several youngsters) collectively analyzed the column and then sought answers by turning to the scripture.

Read it for yourself, but my interpretation is that Nyame gave each of us a task and talent. If we are serious about being Christians—being Christ-like—we must follow the assumed biblical commandments and proverbs and work to enlarge our circle by bringing the wicked and ignorant to stand with us under God’s shadow.

The premise was correct. Although I was happy, no one asked me how to convince the thugs, terrorists, and popcorn pimps to step into the light of grace.

As I told the editor Monday morning, today we are dealing with many millennials who fall into two groups—the educated who question the authenticity and interpretation of the Bible and those less educated who question its relevancy.

And, of course, there is that group that has no interest in the Bible at all, don’t believe in God (until the judge announces their sentence) and think Christianity is a scam—or is that sham.

As I once noted after I wrote a series of articles of how poverty pimp preachers exploited their congregants, the only difference between a poverty pimp and a poverty preacher is that the former provides soles for the poor (correct spelling), and the latter sells insurance for the soul.

I know a lot of brothers and sisters who say they are more spiritual than religious, and I can appreciate and understand that since most folks think I’m a deist.

But I’m not talking about an honest, intelligent discussion on theology or how Christianity was used to control and enslave us.

I’m talking about Black men who were brought up in the COP where the only God they recognized was LL Cool J’s character’s name in a Blackploitation movie.

Most of them only go to church for funerals to bury an Irrelevant Negro like themselves.

If all of the “true” Christians (a noun to some, but a verb to others) took their pledge seriously—touched the poor, the widow (most likely the “boyfriend” she told her parents she was engaged to) or the fatherless children, we could solve this problem in a few years.

Oh, hell (no pun intended)! That’s a pipe dream.

In truth, in this era of fear and frustration, the average Black Christian is not going to venture into the shooting gallery to save a soul, unless it’s their own. Nor will most ministers encourage them to, because they might make the mistake of asking the cleric to lead them.

Plus, I haven’t heard the argument—yet—that will convince the thugs and monsters that there’s something beyond their day-to-day existence, or in the next life.

A quasi-gangsta once told me that the only gray-haired white man he knows of is called Santa Claus. “And that blue-eyed, blond-haired Jesus... ‘F’ that. I’m going for what I know.”

I tried to convince him that Nyame was a spirit. Jesus was a brother and that I can attest to the power of prayer—at least in my case when my family and friends prayed me back to life in 2014.

Of course, I was a little taken aback when he asked why doesn’t “God” answer everybody’s prayers?

I won’t dwell on the rest of the conversation, but he did visit the church once or twice. I hear today he’s in prison.

While in contemplation about that story, the thought came to me; maybe this is all by design. Since Nyame is in charge, perhaps He/She (that’s how God is described in an original Aramaic text) allowed or engineered this scenario to wake us up. Or perhaps it’s so that we are forced by apartheid and racial polarization to return to our roots.

Given my limited understanding of the universality of life, I accept the posit that our lives are balanced on a pendulum. It will swing from extreme to extreme.

If that’s the case, there’s no need to worry or concern ourselves. Someday righteousness will rule the world, Black folks will recognize who we are, and our purpose and poverty and disease will be eliminated.

But not in my lifetime.—Hotep.

Detroit mom mocked for her dark complexion becomes beauty model

By Blue Telusma, article courtesy of Thegrio.com

A Detroit woman who was once mercilessly ridiculed for her dark complexion, is now serving as a muse for a Black-owned beauty brand.

According to the Daily Mail, The Lip Bar, a make-up brand launched in 2012 by Black female entrepreneurs, has chosen Joy Mohammed to be the face of their latest foundation shade, 6.04 Warm Red Ebony.

“I was completely overwhelmed to be asked — absolutely blown away,” the mother of five told the publication.

“I couldn’t get over the fact I was tapped to represent a foundation shade that was unavailable when I was in need of make-up for senior photos and dance recitals, because my skin tone was so “undesirable” to the masses,” she admitted.

Mohammed, who was always the darkest student in her classes recalled having her skin tone described as “black-ety-black,” and has had a life steeped in the after effects of colorism.

Mohammed, 31, says the otherness she was made to feel in her childhood still followed her into adulthood, sharing, “I remember putting on make-up and trying to make it work [even though it was too light]. I looked horrible, just ghastly.”

She goes on to say that coming across The Lip Bar, also based in Detroit, allowed her to finally feel comfortable in her skin while putting on make-up, which makes this new partnership serendipitous.

“I was drawn to this brand not only because it was also Detroit-owned, black-owned, and women-owned, but because it worked so well and showed up on my skin so well,” she said.

So when the make up brand’s product developer Kori Fields invited Mohammed to their studio to model for their new shade she wanted her to see that what we consider beauty diversity to be normal for her, and that beauty comes in all shapes and sizes,” Mohammed said. “I didn’t want to tell her about it or show her pictures, I wanted her to see it.

CAREGIVING: Know Your Rights!

- Know Your RIGHTS! Workplace Laws as a Working Caregiver – ADA and FMLA
- Caregiver self-care: Caregivers should get counseling and make sure they take care their own physical health. But what about taking care of your professional workplace health and rights if you are a working caregiver?
- Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Family Medical Leave Acts (FMLA)
- If you are a working caregiver and need to take time off to care for yourself and or your loved ones, Research your rights and the rights of your loved ones under these federal laws: The Family Medical Leave Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act.
- The Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Employees must work for an employer for 1 year and 1,250 hours to be eligible to take time off to care for yourself or a loved one. Qualifying loved ones are your immediate family: parents, spouse, children. Additional rules may apply. Employers can require employees to use all their paid time off (PTO – sick time and/or vacation time) before taking time FMLA time.

You can take FMLA leave to care for loved ones on an intermittent (day by day) or continuous off basis (everyday up to 1,250 hours) to care for yourself and your loved one.

Talk to your human resources department to find out about the rules in your organization.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) The Americans with Disabilities Act was enacted in 1990 to protect against discrimination, perceived discrimination and any history of discrimination against those with disabilities in the workplace. ADA may also provide additional time off for medical leave, personal leave and or job reassignment options for your own healthcare condition.

Many hear the word “disability” and think “old person”. Know this - Disabilities are not age related but can happen any time and at any age for various reasons: workplace or at home accidents, heredity, and age are just a few of the causes of disability.

Employers can accommodate your disability or terminate employees under the Americans with Disabilities Act. Accommodation under ADA is based on qualifications, not disability nor time on job. Stay qualified.

Check with your Human Resources Office, Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC), and do your own research on these laws. Find out how they may apply to you.

If you feel you have been discriminated against or denied your rights under either of these laws, you can file a complaint with the EEOC and/or contact an attorney. If you have a Legal Aid Society in your town and meet income requirements, you may be eligible to call Legal Aid. Contact them to see if you qualify.

Rest and Recover – Recovering from Caregiving – Time Out for YOU

After caregiving is over, give yourself time to recover. Do not volunteer too quickly to help surviving family members, friends. You’ve spent your time caring for the loved one, now have some fun; take time for yourself.

Rest and relax physically and mentally, return to work (if you were a working caregiver outside the home). Recover from the rewarding but stressful time of caregiving for your loved one and yourself.

Milwaukee PBS’s Everett Mashburn to be inducted into Media Hall of Fame

- Tim Cuprisin, (deceased), Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

"This year's group of inductees made, in their own unique ways, immeasurable contributions to local journalism.

"They helped to inform and educate their readers, listeners and viewers while making our community a better place, all while helping to inspire a new generation to follow their professional example," said Gene Mueller, press club president and host of Wisconsin's Morning News on WTMJ Radio 620.

For more information about the Media Hall of Fame event, contact Joette Richards at 1-262-894-2224.
