Dylan Roof is appealing his death sentence related to the 2015 fatal shooting of nine Black parishioners inside a historic Charleston, S.C. Black church. His lawyers say the White Supremacist was suffering from mental illness at the time of the fatal shooting at Mother Emanuel AME Church. The attorneys allege Roof "believed his sentence didn't matter because White nationalists would free him from prison after an impending race war." During a competency hearing before his 2017 trial, a judge ruled Roof was competent and had an extremely high IQ. Roof represented himself at trial and was convicted of 33 federal charges. He was prosecuted under the federal Shepard/Byrd Hate Crimes Act and is the first person to be ordered executed for a federal hate crime. He's on death row at a federal prison in Terre Haute, Indiana. — TheGrio.com

Maybe money can't buy love, but President Donald Trump is counting on it buying the votes of Black Americans. Allies of the president are organizing events in Black communities, where they praise Trump... and hand out tens of thousands of dollars to those who show up, according to Politico. The first such event was last month in Cleveland, where raffle winners were bestowed case gifts of several hundred dollars each. An organization called the Urban Revitalization Coalition is doing the cash giveaways. More are scheduled. Political experts have predicted this year's White House race will draw a record Black voter turnout—especially Black women. The Trump campaign is spending a lot of time and money influencing Black voters. Last year, the president spoke at an HBCU touting his record of exonerating Black inmates. — TheGrio.com

A Prince George's County police officer shot and killed a man who was handcuffed and strapped in a seatbelt in the front seat of a squad car recently. The officer wasn't wearing a bodycamera. The incident happened in Temple Hills, Maryland where police responded to a 911 call about an erratic driver who struck multiple vehicles in the Silver Hill area. Police say officers found the suspect on Winston Street and believe they smelled PCP. The officer was in the car with the suspect waiting for a drug recognition expert when the shooting occurred. The suspect hasn't been identified pending family notification. The officer was also unidentified at the time of this writing) and is on administrative duty. — TheGrio.com

Milwaukee Community Journal Associate Publisher Mikel Holt (far right) was one of five local Black community stakeholders who spoke on the importance of the Black vote and the Democratic Party's continuing ambivalence towards Black issues, and what must be done to improve the Black voter turnout from the abysmal 2016 showing that allowed President Trump to narrowly win Wisconsin and other Mid-West "battleground" states.

Community Meets the Press!

Local Black stakeholders express disappointment with the lack of attention by presidential candidates on "bread and butter" Black issues

Article compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

The absence of a "minority" Democratic Party presidential candidate and the unwillingness of the remaining aspirants to address issues of importance to African American voters may impede the Black voter turnout next fall.

Such was the consensus of a panel of five local African American community leaders and political activists who were quizzed about the upcoming elections on the nationally televised "Meet the Press" talk show last week as part of its "County to County" project.

The "County to County" project involves on-going discussions with voters and stakeholders in five "battleground states" that significantly influenced the 2016 presidential elections: Wisconsin, Arizona, Florida, Pennsylvania, and Michigan.

President Donald Trump surprisingly won Wisconsin in 2016 by 23,000 votes. A drop-off in Black voter participation in Milwaukee was a critical factor in Trump's victory.

Many analysts surmised lukewarm support for Democratic Party candidate Hillary Clinton and the unwillingness of the Democratic Party to address issues of importance to Black voters contributed to smaller voter turnout.

Ironically, most participants in the televised panel discussion believe a similar paradigm may be playing out this year.

The local panel, interviewed by Meet the Press's Dante Chinni, included County Supervisor Marcella Nicholson, Ruben Hopkins, president of the Wisconsin Black Chamber of Commerce; award-winning radio talk show host Sherwin Hughes, Rev. Donna Childs, pastor of Tabernacle Community Baptist Church; and Mikel Holt, associate publisher of your Milwaukee Community Journal.

While only six minutes of the 25-minute discussion was aired on last week's Meet the Press, the nearly 30-minute discussion provided a more detailed analysis of the upcoming elections from an African American perspective.

The full interview has gone viral and has attracted the attention of Black stakeholders nationwide. Most social media responses have been supportive of the views presented by the panelists.

Back Into Our Neighborhoods

By Vince Bobot

The downtown of Milwaukee has undergone a radical transformation during the last ten years.

We now have a world class company in Northwestern Mutual with a new headquarters, a championship basketball team with a top-notch venue, the Calatrava, a vibrant nightlife, and top-end residential housing.

It is now time to take the fight back into our neighborhoods. From the North to the South to the East and to the West, we need to direct a lot of the same positive energy and attention to strengthening and rebuilding many things in our neighborhoods. It will require a house by house, block by block, neighborhood by neighborhood plan.

As your next City Attorney, I will work tirelessly to bring neighborhood development to the forefront. I pledge to be there with you, our city leaders, and community groups in making Milwaukee's neighborhoods safe and a place where you can be proud to call your home.

Much work needs to be done. The City Attorney can no longer stay on the sidelines. Recently, I wrote articles dealing with traffic enforcement, human trafficking, vacant houses, and the need for all of us to feel safe and secure in our city. In those articles and subsequent position papers, I stressed the importance of the City Attorney's office in dealing with the problems facing Milwaukee and the need to become directly involved in solving them.

As your next City Attorney, I will be relentless in finding ways to procure funding from the State, County and private foundations or grants to assist Milwaukee in improving its neighborhoods.

I will also be in your neighborhood, at community meetings, and constantly looking for ways to improve the living conditions and business environment in Milwaukee with existing revenues. We need to bring the same energy and determination from the development of our downtown into our neighborhoods.

I look forward to discussing with you ways to improve Milwaukee. Together we can implement changes that make a difference. Whether it is dealing with public safety, environmental issues, or putting an end to expensive lawsuits, as your next City Attorney I pledge to pursue solutions that get the job done!

SERVICE STAYS IN THE HEART

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority's Senior Members Partner with Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church

The Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. and the Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church are now actively demonstrating what a church congregation and a service sorority can do to support the needs of our senior citizens in the 53206 zip code area. The group of sorority members leading the way are called Delta D.E.A.R.S.

What is a Delta Dear? A Delta DEAR is a Dedicated, Energetic, Active, respected member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority. She demonstrates sisterhood and has been blessed to reach the golden age of 62 years.

A Delta DEAR upholds the ideals and traditions of their sorority. DELTA DEARS set a standard of excellence in service and scholarship. They are led by co-chairs Pinkey Buford and Karen Malone.

The project's goal is to engage Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church and Delta Sigma Theta Sorority in a meaningful community service project to support residents in the 53206 zip code area.

"Our Delta D.E.A.R.S. have been prepared to serve the 53206 community from the beginning of our sorority year. They planned over the summer and were prepared to share their vision with each of their committee members," says Dr. Anita Sparks, President of the Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. "Many more members have joined the team since they began. These sorors have given life to our chapter by giving their whole heart to service."

The Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter's Delta DEAR connection with Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church, located at 2432 N. Teutonia Ave. in the heart of the 53206 zip code, began in October with the church's senior hot meal program.

Delta DEARS have embraced this project with enthusiasm. They volunteer their time on every Tuesday and some Wednesdays at the Greater Life Community Center, which is located next door to the sanctuary.

Hot meals are served daily at the center from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. On these days, Delta Dears can be seen in action wearing t-shirts that read "Delta Dears Sistem."

On the third Wednesday of the month, Delta Dears reach extends to supporting Greater Galilee by working with Feeding America of Eastern Wisconsin and its senior food program.

This program also supports senior citizens who live in the 53206 zip code area. Delta Dears unpack, pack, and cart out food bags for the elderly. Many special requests are made such as special packing, directed carry outs, and sometimes deliveries. On one occasion, Delta Dears helped package and distribute 175 food bags to senior citizens.

Delta DEARS remind us all that when it comes to public service, it is truly a lifetime comment.

The Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. has a special group of members known as Delta D.E.A.R.S. Locally, the Delta D.E.A.R.S. partner with Greater Galilee Missionary Baptist Church to serve hot meals to seniors in the 53206 community. Modeling God's Love During Valentine's Month and Beyond!

...love Him with all of your heart, with all of your understanding and with all of your strength, and to love your neighbor as yourself is more important than all burnt offerings and sacrifices." --Mark 12:33

February is the month Valentine's Day is celebrated. According to Hallmark, approximately 145 million Valentine's Day cards are exchanged industry-wide (which does not include packaged kids' valentines for classroom exchanges). According to the National Retail Federation, the average person celebrating Valentine's Day spent $143.00 in 2018. Valentine's Day cards are second only to the number of Christmas cards that are sent yearly. On Valentine's Day, people show their love by showering their beloved with gifts, in the form of cards, flowers, candy, or a simple message of love.

For the month of February, I will use this column to celebrate God's love by pointing out ways God's people can model God's love by being an example of the love that God showers upon us every day! The following are two ways I want to share that you can be an example of God's love to others.

Love Others in Small Ways. Love is priceless. Love can be expressed by a warm smile, a kind gesture, a call just to say hello, or a pat of encouragement on the back. Sometimes, all a person needs is to know that someone cares. This month, begin making a list of ways you can show love to others in small ways, then intentionally show that love to others not just during the month of February but every day!

Serving Others. This writer is passionate when it comes to serving others. When we sacrificially serve others, we show tangibly what God's love looks like. Our love for others should not just be shown to those in our family and friend circles, but to those even around the globe.

BIBLICAL COUNSELING FOR TODAY'S CHRISTIAN FAMILY

By Rev. Judith T. Lester, B.Min., M.Th.

While serving and sharing with others may at times involve sharing monetarily, that is not always the case. Consider the following examples:

1. Assemble a care package for a needy family by using the items in your own kitchen cabinets.
2. Offer to clean the home of an elderly person or neighbor that is disabled or physically and visually impaired.
3. Invite a single person, widow or college student for a meal with your family. The fellowship alone brings joy to a lonely heart.

It's never too early to teach children, youth and teens the joy of serving others. It is a concept that will stay with them for a lifetime! If you are looking for a resource for a small group study for your young people that includes outreach/service opportunities, I encourage you to obtain your copy of: A Gospel Generation: Bible Studies for Youth Around the Globe (Lester, Judith T., Townsend Press, Nashville, 2017). A Gospel Generation is translated in over 100 languages and is available to youth/teen groups all over the world. Order your copy at:

inspired to show godly love to others as the love you show to others reveals to the world you are a God-follower!

A Prayer For You:
Dear God, serving and loving others is the least we can do to show our love for God. Pray that God will present you opportunities to model God's love through service and loving others. Amen.

The African American Chamber of Commerce of Wisconsin continues efforts with the Legacy Campaign to raise the funding needed to complete the project in Spring 2020, a year after efforts to build out the space began.

Army of Ministers Lead House-to-House Canvass on Milwaukee's North Side

Central City religious leaders from diverse denominations mobilized voters for Nov. 6

More than 40 Ministers from City of Milwaukee churches convened at Canaan Missionary Baptist Church - 2975 North 11th Street -- to hold a press conference before they launched a massive canvass door-to-door effort.

Ministers and members of their congregations knocked on every door in an 80 square block area urging people to vote on November 6 and leaving information on where and when they can vote.

According to Rev. Greg Lewis of St. Gabriel's Church of God in Christ, "Our people must use their voice as a megaphone to call for jobs, health care, accountability, safe streets, and quality schools."

Rev. Greg Lewis (pictured above), Assistant Pastor at St. Gabriel's Church of God in Christ

"In 2018, we are going to show political leaders that our voting block matters and we better be paid on what they need to vote, helping get their phone ID, and making sure people have the tools to participate."

The canvass went south from Chambers Street to North Avenue.

South to the Parks is a network of Churches building a grassroots of voters in 2018.

Community Meets the Press!

Many viewers have also expressed shock and concern about revelations of Milwaukee's status as the worse place in the country for African Americans, as revealed on the show. The fact that Milwaukee is host to the Democratic Party national convention has fueled that fire.

It was not surprising that most of the panelists expressed disappointment that the reduced Democratic field has ignored issues of importance to the Black community, particularly in the areas of education, unemployment, economic development, and criminal justice.

It was noted, however, that dichotomy may have been by design, as neither of the two Black former candidates---Kamala Harris and Cory Booker, spoke to those issues during any of the earlier debates they participated either, prompting Nicholson to suggest the ethnicity of the candidates did not make much of a difference.

Instead, all of the candidates were swept up into discussions about immigration, the environment, and Trump policies versus more pressing issues faced by minorities and the poor.

"Most Black folks are concerned about putting food on the table," she said, adding finding livable wage paying jobs, safety, and quality education overshadow other concerns.

The fact that neither Harris nor Booker focused their campaigns on that reality probably played into their campaigns not finding traction as well, Nicholson surmised.

Holt agreed, noting the most recent debate---without anyone of color on the stage--- probably hurt Black voter enthusiasm more than it helped.

"Initially, people were excited by the wide range of (candidate choices)," said Rev. Childs. "Now, our voices have been (muted) to a degree."

Rev. Childs said her congregants are concerned about bread and butter issues and who can impact on their lives; but also who can beat Donald Trump. That latter concern seems to be a top priority.

An "anyone but Trump" campaign may not be enough, Holt interjected.

Milwaukee leads the nation in seven negative social indicators, and many Black voters are growing increasingly tired of the unwillingness to even superficially address Black concerns.

During the last debate, "They (the candidates) were talking about early childhood education and free college, but most of our kids won't get that far," said Holt.

For Black Milwaukeeans, the focus is on K-12, and the inability of Black children attending government schools to read at grade level, much less graduate. Milwaukee, Holt noted, has the smallest percentage of Black children who can meet proficiency rates for reading at the fourth and eighth grades in the country.

Milwaukee is also home to the highest Black incarceration and Black male unemployment rates, along with being the most segregated city in the country.

And the fact Milwaukee is home to the nation's education revolution cannot be ignored.

On a positive note, America seems to be moving away from what Nicholson said was identity politics, where Black candidates are used to attract Black voters and female candidates are used to attach women voters, etc.

"It was not surprising that most of the panelists expressed disappointment that the reduced Democratic field has ignored issues of importance to the Black community, particularly in the areas of education, unemployment, economic development, and criminal justice. That dichotomy may have been by design, as neither of the two Black former candidates---Kamala Harris and Cory Booker---spoke to those issues during any of the earlier debates they participated either, prompting Nicholson to suggest the ethnicity of the candidates did not make much of a difference."

The issues faced by most Americans are not exclusive to ethnicities or gender.

But while "anyone other than Trump," works in theory, it is questionable whether that slogan will translate into an enthusiastic outpouring of Black voters unless it is tied to concrete solutions to a myriad of problems.

Holt said it was interesting to see the candidates in the last debate try to claim significant support from minority voters.

"Seems like each was trying to (link themselves to Black voters)" to claim support for their respective campaigns.

"And then (finally) there was Biden (who upstaged everybody) by proclaiming he had more Black support than all of the other candidates combined."

The Black Press journalist said Sanders has not significantly turned around the abysmal level of Black support that haunted him in 2016.

Warren is "being followed around the country by angry Black parents because of her attacks on educational options for the poor, and Mayor Pete (Buttigieg) doesn't even have Black support in his community," Holt said sarcastically,

While there was no consensus on who is considered the "best" candidate for Black America, most agreed Biden would probably emerge given his name recognition and association with former (and first African American) President Barack Obama, whose support could energize the Black vote.

Hughes said he is leaning toward Biden but was fearful he would turn off progressives. "I'm nervous that if Biden becomes the nominee, which it appears he will be, there's going to be a lot of people that are going to stay home."

The former talk show host, who is the head of the organization "Leaders for a Better Community," also suggested it may not be as crucial for a candidate to provide political rhetoric about Black concerns but be open to us. "instead of someone who speaks to our issues, we need someone who listens to us when we speak," Hughes theorized.

He also noted that unless voters can flip the Senate, the question of who the next president is may be moot.

"If we (continue to) have a Republican-controlled Senate, it doesn't matter," he said.

Thus, Democratic Party voters should focus on the importance of electing four additional Democrats to the senate, which would provide them the majority.

Hopkins interposed, noting among his organization's top concerns, is a president who gives more than lip service to reinvesting in central cities across the country.

Using Milwaukee as an example, Hopkins noted, "Look at our community, it is void of economic investment," he said, despite African Americans being the largest ethnic group, representing 200,000 people.

Yet, "If we want to go to a movie, we have to leave the central city. If we want to go to a roller rink, we have to leave our community. If we want to go to a (four-star) restaurant, we have to leave our community."

That paradigm is at the root of many of Milwaukee's negative social indicators---poverty, unemployment and segregation.

"We deserve the same quality of life in the central city (as Whites enjoy in the suburbs), the Black business advocate proclaimed.

Hopkins said historically, presidential politics have been viewed through a wide lens, what is best for Americans in general.

But it is time now that our focus is on what is best for us because there continues to be an unequal playing field.

"If we don't prioritize what is best for (the Black community) we are going to get the same thing you got last time."

Investment in central cities, including Milwaukee, would result in a revitalization that would lead to the creation of jobs, a robust economy, and a significant reduction in the Black poverty rate.

Nicholson noted that her support of Sanders was rooted in his campaign platform of addressing issues directly impacting the lives of millennials and Black professionals.

Sanders, she said, has a comprehensive platform that will improve the quality of life for all Americans, a fact that has drawn new voters to the campaign.

By prioritizing the reduction of student debt, and universal health, he is speaking to a new and energized voting bloc that transcends ethnicity and age.

"(Many) Black businesses can't afford health care." "Look at (Sander's) base; he has the largest percentage of supporters of color, and more individual donors than anyone.

"While (Elizabeth) Warren supporters tend to be more affluent and educated," Sanders' growing base better reflects the emerging younger, grassroots progressives.

Another option presented to energize the Black vote could be the selection of a Black running mate for what appears certain to be a White nominee.

Holt said the symbolism of a person of color on the ticket could convey to Black voters that their issues will be spoken of in the back room.

And if not an African American, a progressive like Julian Castro would be a progressive favorite, Holt suggested.

"He was the only candidate to talk about Black issues like police brutality" and education outside the failing status quo.

"Milwaukee is home to the educational revolution, yet none of the candidates touched on (the abysmal state) of urban education. Some of the candidates came out looking like elitists," Holt proclaimed, noting how Black leaders have attacked Warren and Sanders because of their opposition to school choice, which revealed how the Democratic Party in general values the union vote and agenda over that of its most loyal and powerful bloc: Black voters.

But, "we will vote for whoever emerges as the Democratic Party candidate (if for no other reason than) we have no other option."

When the veteran journalist mentioned the potential emergence of former New York Mayor Mikel Bloomberg as an option, Hughes responded, "He's trying to buy the election," a potentially disingenuous paradigm.

From all indications, the church community," will (also) get behind whoever" the candidate will be, Rev. Childs explained.

As the most consistent voting bloc of African Americans, Black church congregants look at the upcoming elections as a mandate to defeat Trump.

"We can fix the other things later," she said, which seems to be the rallying cry.

To a question by Chinni about the level of Black support for Trump, Hughes explained it might be larger than most pundits assume.

A strong economy is a nightmare for Democrats, Hughes explained and is hard to beat.

The economy, which Trump misleadingly takes credit for, "hasn't worked for everybody, but, in the last four years a lot of folks have bought a house or gotten a raise, and they will attribute that to the economy," he theorized, a factor Trump will exploit.

This summer's DNC convention could, but probably won't, be a catalyst for the recognition of the dire state of Black America in general and Black Milwaukee in particular, the panelist agreed.

Ironically, while Milwaukee has taken on the label of being the "worst city for African Americans in the country," that paradigm has not been addressed by the party or any of the candidates, nor is it expected to be discussed at the convention.

Yet, as Black Milwaukeeans realize the historic nature of that dichotomy, it could have an adverse impact on the fall elections.

Thus, Hopkins said our voices need to be heard.

"This is an opportunity for those of us who can get in the room, because you know what they say, if you're not at the table, you're on the menu."

Rev. Childs said it was equally important that local Black politicians use this unique opportunity to press our issues within the DNC.

Likewise, "it is the role of the church to stand up, to make a difference," to provide a voice.

As the Bible explains, "Whenever God sent a king, he also sent a prophet; to tell the truth, to make them do what is right, to speak up when they did wrong."

Lipscomb Proposes Additional Resources for Voter Registration and Education

County Board Chairman Theodore Lipscomb, Sr., is proposing that Milwaukee County supplement voter registration and education efforts in the wake of recent attempts to purge approximately 200,000 Wisconsin voters from election rolls.

"We must do everything we can to protect the right to vote, especially in the wake of ongoing voter suppression efforts in Wisconsin and Milwaukee County.

By providing these funds we can help ensure that voters know their rights and are registered to vote," said Lipscomb.

In advance of the 2020 elections, the Milwaukee County Clerk and the Election Commission plan to encourage voter participation and educate voters about registration requirements via advertisements on county buses and bus shelters, in movie theaters, local newspapers, and on broadcast radio.

The City of Milwaukee and Milwaukee County are also collaborating on the placement of voter registration kiosks at public facilities throughout the county, which potential voters can use to print registration forms and receive instructions on how to submit the required documents.

Lipscomb's resolution directs the County Clerk and Elections Commission to report to the Board of Supervisors in advance of the 2020 elections regarding additional efforts that could be made to improve voter registration and education.

Additional efforts could include direct mailings to potentially purged voters with instructions on how to update their voter status, additional voter registration kiosks, partnerships with voter outreach groups, and voter registration drives.

Milwaukee County Board Chairman Theodore Lipscomb, Sr.

If Lipscomb's proposal is adopted, $50,000 would be provided to boost these efforts.

The Finance and Audit Committee will consider Lipscomb's proposal on January 30. The Board of Supervisors is expected to vote on the item on February 6.
