QUESTION OF THE WEEK: "WHY IS 'DATE NIGHT' (DADDY/DAUGHTER DANCE) IMPORTANT TO YOU?"

James Austin (with daughters Aniya Austin, 14; Sarai Byrd, 8; Mariya Austin, 9): "This is important simply to show dad's that being with your daughters and showing them what they should expect when dating is valuable. Having this night gives me a deliberate chance to show my daughters just that."

Rickey Grandberry (with daughter Journee Grandberry, 6): "It's a time where fathers can come together in support of one another. To show our daughters how a man can support these princesses and to make them feel special."

Dr. Keith P. Posley-Superintendent of Milwaukee Public Schools (with granddaughter Haleish Ford, 7): "This is a special evening for girls to spend the evening dedicated to them with a father, grandfather, uncle, and any supportive male in their lives. The involvement and relationship with girls is important to their development and growth. The confidence these young ladies experience will stay with them for life."

Kermiath McClendon (with daughter Essence McClendon, 10): "The Daddy/Daughter Dance is extremely important because it creates memories and opportunities to bond as a family. Dads are the model for the future boyfriend, the future husband. So as a father, I must show my daughter how a gentleman should treat a lady. This is a positive narrative for fathers, especially Black fathers."

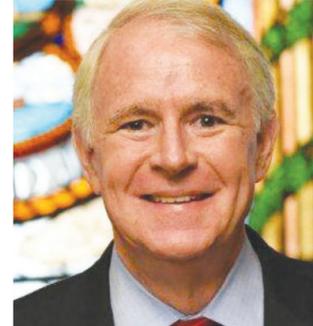

17TH ANNUAL DADDY/DAUGHTER DANCE!

Fathers, grandfathers and their daughters and granddaughters enjoyed a great post-Valentine's Day evening of fun and bonding recently at North Division High School at the annual affair co-sponsored by Milwaukee Recreation, Social Development Commission, and the Milwaukee Fatherhood Initiative. The Daddy/Daughter Dance provides a great way for young women to strengthen their relationship with their fathers. More photos in this week's Weekend Edition. —Photos by Yvonne Kemp

UWM coach Pat Baldwin writes about the process of overcoming adversity

By Pat Baldwin
Men's basketball coach
University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

UWM men's basketball coach Pat Baldwin believes that maintaining the right process is the key to getting through difficult times.

One of the more popular catchphrases in sports today – you hear it all the time from coaches and athletes – is “trust the process.” As in, “We’ve just got to trust the process and we’ll get through this adversity,” or “I’m trusting the process and seeing improvement.”

What does it mean, exactly, and how can it be applied in jobs or occupations that have nothing to do with bouncing, hitting or throwing a ball?

Trusting the process simply means trying to do what you believe is right, every single time. I think it's easy, as we go through struggles or adversity, to get off track. The trust comes from knowing you're moving in the right direction, doing it the right way and not compromising your belief system.

In January, we had a stretch where we won five out of six games and beat some good teams, including Green Bay and Youngstown State (in overtime). Then we lost three in a row, though we had a chance to upset Horizon League-leading Wright State.

Every team is going to go through lulls, periods of cold shooting and tough losses. That's when it's important to trust the process. How do you handle adversity? Do you

Dear Reader,

Thank you for taking the time to learn about The Greenwood Initiative.

As someone who has been very lucky in life, I often say my story would only have been possible in America – and that's true. But I also know that because of the artificial barriers of discrimination, my story likely would have turned out very differently if I had been Black, and that more Black Americans of my generation would have ended up with far more wealth, had they been white.

Building Generational Wealth for Black Families is Critical. That's why I launched The Greenwood Initiative in Tulsa last month. I visited the site of the Black Wall Street Massacre, where a white mob decimated the prosperous community of Greenwood. It is to the memory of the lost lives and promise of Greenwood that we've dedicated The Greenwood Initiative: a plan to address the systematic bias that has kept Black Americans from building wealth.

THE GREENWOOD PLAN WILL:

- Create 1 million new Black homeowners
- Double the number of new Black-owned businesses
- Invest $70 billion in the country's 100 most disadvantaged neighborhoods

Fixing the System for Black Families. When I was mayor of New York, I was proud to take on the systematic inequality that held back too many New Yorkers. We increased education funding, built 650 new schools and raised Black graduation rates to record highs. We led an ambitious effort to reduce poverty and managed the largest amount of affordable housing in the nation. And as President, I will work even more aggressively to combat inequality nationwide.

I understand that undoing generations of systematic discrimination won't happen overnight, but we can make progress with a clear vision and a comprehensive plan. I've included a pamphlet along with this letter that lays out my plan. When I'm President, implementing The Greenwood Initiative: will be a top priority.

Join me in ending the systemic inequality that has held Black Americans back for too long!

Sincerely,

Mike Bloomberg

Passage of the ERA could mean “all bets are off” when it comes to men acting like gentlemen towards women

(which wouldn't really mean much since “some” of us guys already act like misogynistic pigs!)

Down in the Deeper than Deep South, where sun-blocking Trump signs adorn the dusty roads, and confederate flags hang from the steeples of evangelical churches, the announcement that the Equal Rights Amendment had finally met its two-third states' approval didn't sit well among the “Red-and Blue-necks.”

And the angst continues despite the fact the amendment is still in the reconsideration phase.

Congress first approved the ERA in 1972, but it took until recently for the necessary states—Nevada, Illinois, and finally Virginia—to ratify it.

When the amendment failed in 1977 to secure the required two-thirds states ratification, congress voted to rescind the deadline (which some scholars claim is contrary to the constitution).

Nonetheless, states inexplicably soul searched over the last three decades until finally securing the 38th vote.

And that's just in time to produce headlines on the eve of the presidential race. It's a particularly juicy issue given 45IQ's misogynistic background and his mission to “Make America Great Again,” which is a euphemism for the “good ole (boy) days.”

Which is not to assume he stands alone in his misogynistic world where men who look like him resolve all pertinent issues regarding women.

While many women's organizations, the media, and the Democratic Party could use the ERA to galvanize female voters, evangelicals and Republicans (including Mr. and Mrs. Daisy) will say it comes with unintended consequences and is contrary to biblical teachings.

While it might surprise many Millennials, some women are okay with the disingenuous and discriminatory status quo.

Don't believe me?

Apparently, you've forgotten that 54% of White women voted for Trump in 2016, even after he told the world that they (women) are nothing more than sex toys and secretaries (with the exception of his daughter, who he said he would “date” (yuck, it's creepy daddy time) if she were not related; which, I assume, means he would be attracted to her mind... yeah right!).

If you looked under the carpet in rural America, I'm sure you'll find a tired, homely, and unappreciated woman who will smile into the camera and declare how she loves to be “placed on a pedestal.”

They take the salary and status inequalities with a grain of salt as they quote biblical scripture, positing how things were so much better “back in da day” when girls took mandatory high school cooking and sewing classes and envisioned themselves as homemakers, whether that meant Granny Clampett or Harriet Nelson (both of whom were popular television characters when the ERA was introduced).

There are even female politicians pushing that paradigm.

I recall our last lieutenant governor expressing concern about the ERA, and recently West Virginia Rep. Carol Miller decried the amendment saying it would open the door for government-funded abortions.

Wisconsin Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner said in an out-of-state newspaper article last week that equaling the playing field would cost women benefits they now enjoy, like cheaper insurance rates. (Which is a controversial subject if they continue to get paid 70% of what White men bring home.)

And some say once gender equality is the law of the land, women will be forced into military combat roles.

If and when the U.S. restores the draft, daughters would be equal prey for Uncle Sam's draft selection board.

Contrarily, Black women overwhelmingly support the ERA for the same reason they supported the 13th and 15th amendments (we're in bad shape if you don't know what those entailed).

While White women are said to make 80 cents for every dollar White men make, Black people earn 10 cents less than White women!

Black women are also generally excluded from higher-paying jobs (except for government positions), and the few allowed in the boardrooms are required to wear pants or a tight dress to accent their mandatory wigs or extensions.

Since most sisters are better educated, more aggressive, and more disciplined, as soon as the door is cracked, they will enter.

Nonetheless, a sister still has to climb and/or jump higher, run faster, or adopt to a culture that's often demeaning just to be rewarded 10 cents less.

The ERA, which is supported more aggressively by professionals and college-educated sisters, will benefit all of Black America.

Particularly---drum roll here---brothers.

No longer would we have to foot the bill for movies, dinner, or hotels.

That unwritten “custom,” is particularly unfair for underemployed men, who often earn less than sisters, but have to cater to them based on antiquated rules and Eurocentric etiquette.

In fact, brothers would benefit as well from no longer having to be the aggressors, or defender.

With the ERA, the sister will think twice about starting a confrontation with some dude at the club, or the racist police officer who profiled her boyfriend. Those two scenarios have gotten a whole lot of brothers whopped.

Of course, there are some drawbacks to the ERA for Black women. Cops will beat and shoot them with the same remorselessness they use to put brothas in their place.

Just think brothers, with the ERA women would have to alternate taking out the garbage, washing the car, or filling her gas tanks on the weekend.

She can get out there and shovel the snow with you, cut the grass and chase that mouse, beetle, or drug dealer.

And when she hears the noise in the middle of the night, you can say, “your turn!”

Eventually, all bathrooms will be labeled as “family,” meaning we wouldn't have to complain about our bathrooms are being neglected while the women bathrooms are sparkling clean.

Brothers should also start demanding a wedding ring of equal carat weight to what we shell out for sisters.

Parenting would be an equal activity, so we'll be more in tune with our children. And that attempted hair braiding by a Milwaukee brother for his daughter that sparked an Academy Award wouldn't be a novelty. Once the ERA becomes “da official law,” brothers will have to start using lotion on their rough hands and learn to braid, because equal rights will mean equal parenting.

Of course, that problem will not be widespread in the central city since Black marriage is on the endangered species list.

And most young sisters have never had a door opened for them since these young brothers already treat them like another dude.

Common courtesy and gentlemanly behavior were rooted in a culture that seemingly gave way to the culture of gangsta rap, drugs, and dysfunctional Black families where there is no one to pass on our cultural nuances, including the principles of basic civility.

The result?

People driving through funeral processions, putting their butts down on bus seats while an elderly person struggles to stand and even referring to Jesus as 'my nigga' (n-word).

I recently observed a “man” allow the door he walked through to slam into his mother's face because he doesn't realize he's supposed to hold it for her.

What was worse is that she didn't say anything!

The ERA could eventually lead to a new paradigm in which men no longer walk on the outside nearest to the streets, but who cares?

Equal means equal as much as illegal aliens really means illegal alien.

Those customs may disappear around the country. But not at my house.

Or among my children.

My boys have been taught to be gentlemen, and that applies whether they are with a lady, a woman, or a Neckbone.

And when I mentioned this concept of “equality” to my wife, she have the mechanisms, people and support in place to push through it?

It starts at the top. It starts with leadership, whether it's me or my staff. We always try to figure out what's the best way to get through a period of struggle. We don't try to reinvent the wheel. We try to stay the course. And then it's the leadership on your team. We're dealing with 19- to 23-year-old men. Are your older guys able to stay strong during periods of adversity?

I had breakfast with our seniors recently, just to make sure they're relaxed and not putting too much pressure on themselves. What I want them concentrating on is having fun and playing as hard as they can.

You look for guys that are resilient in times of stress. When I played, my coach used to say, “How do you respond to chaos?” Recently, we experienced chaos from the standpoint of not getting the wins that we wanted and expected. So, can you be resilient, can you fight through it? But also, can you remain calm during the storm? That's trusting the process.

I think basketball is a metaphor for life. You have to persevere. If you're a salesman, there may be times when you make 25 calls and hear “no” 25 times. Or, you're in a board meeting or a sales meeting with your colleagues and you're comparing what other companies are doing vs. what you're doing. You just have to believe in your product, you have to believe in your co-workers. And there has to be a strength in the core in order to get through slumps or sales lulls.

I believe strongly in the vision for our program here. I believe we have the capabilities and resources to build a championship program, but it takes time. If I show any doubt, or if there's any wavering on my part, our guys will recognize that right away. If I don't trust the process, how can I expect my players to buy in?

We talk constantly about the fight that you have to have and the importance of maintaining an eagerness to want to win. I will always have that, no matter what.

Community must turn anger into action to stop domestic violence

It was Sunday, February 16, one day after an amber alert was issued, news swept social media that the bodies of Amarah "Jerica" Banks, 26, and her daughters Zaniya R. Ivery, 5; and Camaria Banks, 4 were found in a garage on West Burleigh Street. They were the victims of domestic violence.

Banks and her children had been missing for a week prior to the alert. During a brief news conference Sunday at the scene of the crime, Milwaukee Police Chief Alfonso Morales explained the alert wasn't done earlier because foul play was not an initial piece of the investigation, noting it was a missing investigation that escalated.

On Monday, Bank's boyfriend, Arzel J. Ivery, 25, was arraigned initially on a fugitive from justice warrant in Memphis where he fled after allegedly committing the crime, reportedly strangling to death the mother and children. Ivery is the father of Zaniya. He has been charged with three counts of first-degree intentional homicide.

Several days before their disappearance, Banks had just buried her infant son who died from complications of asthma.

Now her family must gather again to grieve over more losses.

Two days prior to Banks and her children being found, on the early morning of Valentine's Day, Javaunte Jefferson set his girlfriend on fire as she slept in the 1500 block of North 8th Street. The woman, Savannah Bailey, suffered third-degree burns on 60% of her body as her two children—ages four and one—followed her out of the house as she rolled in the snow to put out the flames. The temperature was minus one degree.

According to news reports, Jefferson and Bailey had an argument earlier in the night about work, taxes and finances. Baily told Jefferson she planned to move out of the apartment they'd shared for about a year.

While homicides in Milwaukee have decreased 33% in the last five years, domestic violence incidents increased. According to 2017 Wisconsin justice department statistics, there were 9,423 domestic violence incidents involving 9,756 victims in Milwaukee County. That's an increase of 24% from 2016 (7,326 incidents involving 7,512 victims).

Maybe the anger and frustration expressed at the Banks crime scene should be levied against an aspect of American culture where the increase in domestic violence has become--sadly (based on the statistics)--a part of life; indicative of a violent nation that has grown somewhat "comfortable" with the idea that it's okay to commit violent acts against women—and children.

According to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, one in three women and one in four men have experienced some form of physical violence from a domestic partner, with one quarter of women being victims of severe (strangling, beating, burning) physical violence.

Domestic violence is not a new phenomenon--something that's been around for 50-plus years. Far from it!

“It is our priority to ensure that our 15,000-

“The 50,000 visitors coming into town for the convention will need services of all types, and it’s critical that local business owners know not just that they can get involved, but how they can get involved.”

“There is no substitute or affordable alternatives to the local weekly newspaper of, by, and for the African American community. Our papers are the lifeblood for our communities.”

SUPPORT THE BLACK PRESS IN MILWAUKEE!

didn't hesitate to give me a look that clearly denoted: "don't EVEN venture down that road!"

Black women have never been allowed to stand on the pedestal unless they were cleaning it for Mrs. Daisy.

Throughout our history, only a small percentage have been traditional housewives. More often than not, they worked a job and returned home to care for their children, husband (if they still had one) to clean and cook.

And she still made half of what Whites earned.

Since the establishment of the welfare state (with regulations that kept men out of the home), Black women have assumed the additional responsibility of being the head of the family.

That dichotomous paradigm screwed up (in the Black community) the entire socio-cultural ecosystem, creating a culture of poverty that should have solidified Africentric gender customs as they did following slavery, but instead helped to eliminate it.

Now that I remember, while my mother set the standards for my siblings and me, it was my father who reinforced them through his actions.

And since most Black boys today don't have a full-time father to emulate... well, you fill in the blank.

Helping to fill that void are gangsta rappers who refer to sisters as bitches (b-word) and ho's (T.H.O.T), and you have a culture far removed from what I grew up in.

As a young teen, I remember hearing of a program started by community icon Marie Gains, who started what you might call a "finishing" or etiquette school for illiterate southern families who had migrated to Milwaukee from the Deeper than Deep South.

Maybe we need a similar program today.

Or maybe another Million Man March where we can discuss the importance of respecting our women, placing them on the throne beside us; serving, respecting, and defending them.

We would commit before our brothers and Nyame to pay tribute to the sisters, for their sacrifices and responsibilities. For being the mothers of our nappy haired nation. They deserve to be treated with reverence.

They should stand beside us, not behind or in front.

Most bibles refer to them as helpmates, although because of the chauvinistic culture of the time men treated them as slaves or second-class citizens, a status many men would like to continue to this day.

Actually, the bible I was brought up on is different from what they preached from in the Confederate south. Mine was about liberation and love, while their version endorses misogyny in the same chapters where God supposedly endorsed slavery.

But that's another story.

From my perspective, the most critical and knowledgeable disciple was Mary Magdalene, who was not only Jesus/Yeshua's most loyal and trusted confidant, but also a liaison between heaven and earth.

And while she couldn't be equal to Him; she was paid far more than the other disciples and stood in His shadow.

Town hall meeting to explore ways census, elections, and economic development can impact community

The Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. is hosting the "Communities Making a Difference" Town Hall Meeting on Saturday, March 14, 2020 at North Division High School, 1011 W. Center St., from 10:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. This free and open event will feature a panel discussion with local and state elected officials as well as local service agencies. There will be a moderator for the panel and include questions from the audience.

The meeting's goal is to inform and increase the awareness and importance of participation in the 2020 Census, voter registration and the Milwaukee elections, as well as focusing on housing help and sustainability for the "53206" community in Milwaukee.

According to the City of Milwaukee Mayor's office,

Wisconsin receives approximately $12.6 billion annually in federal funding based on census data alone.

Therefore, it's important to have dialogue in our communities to make sure that everyone is counted in Milwaukee in the 2020 Census including the undercounted populations of people of color, low-income individuals, homeless individuals, single parent households, and LGBTQ individuals, just to name a few. The census data is also used to determine the number of seats each state will have in the U. S. House of Representatives and helps define districts at the national and state level.

Beginning in March 2020, the U. S. Census Bureau will mail invitations to homes across the country to complete the 2020 Census one of three ways: online, by

Action, not anger, by community needed to stop the scourge of domestic violence

is as old as civilization--if not before there was such a thing--and committed all over the world by all races, religions, ethnic groups, nationalities, social classes, both genders, and--yes--even in the LGBTQ community.

Despite greater visibility and public awareness of the problem, along with increased education, prosecution, victim empowerment, and safe sanctuaries like Milwaukee's Sojourner Family Peace Center, it's a crime that is still underreported.

That has to change. While it's the anger and frustration of the residents at the crime scene—and across the community—is justified, it must be turned into action. That action shouldn't be solely focused on the MPD. It must be focused on those men (and even some women) in our community who commit acts of intimate partner violence.

We, as a community, must act to reduce domestic violence and drive its numbers down! If we see women being assaulted on the street or at a venue, or know someone in a violent relationship, you...we...MUST ACT! (Helping a woman who is being assaulted on the street is risky; but sometimes just being there urging the assailant to stop and witnessing the assault may make him break off the attack and leave. It's then you can get the victim to safety or be with her until the police arrive).

We must encourage the victim to seek help for herself and her children; encourage and accompany them to sanctuaries like Sojourner Family Center so they can seek refuge; get the victim's or potential victim's family involved (they may not be aware of the abuse); encourage and help the victim seek a restraining order against the assailant or, better yet, push for higher bails by working with local and state lawmakers to increase the bail amounts so it will be harder for the abuser to get out of jail and seek revenge against their partner).

As Ald. Khalif Rainey said the day after the grim discovery of Banks and her children, we as a community MUST do a better job of working together to protect our women, and to protect our girls from the physical and psychological abuse that can wreck lives and tear families apart.

Below are organizations that will help:
24-hour helplines and agencies that are available on the city's website at city.milwaukee.gov/health/safety/health/directory.

The Sojourner Family Peace Center in Milwaukee operates a 24-hour confidential hotline at (414) 933-2722. The Milwaukee Women's Center also offers a hotline at (414) 671-6140.

IMPACT 211 hotline (dial 2-1-1).

Milwaukee Women's Center, 728 N. James Lovell St. It's a division of Community Advocates and serves survivors of domestic violence. (414) 449-4777

Joy House, 830 N. 19th St. (414) 344-3774

The Women's Center in Waukesha, which serves victims of domestic violence, child abuse, sexual assault, and trafficking. Additional help and resources can be accessed by calling its 24-hour hotline at (262) 542-3828.

For Waukesha County resources, The Women's Center offers a hotline at (262) 542-3828.

The National Domestic Violence Hotline can be reached at (800) 799-7233. For a list of domestic violence resources in the Milwaukee area.

As Rainey said in his press statement: "You may be the person who ends up saving someone's life or helping a person escape a relationship rife with abuse and manipulation (and not love)."

phone, or by mail.

It's critical for Milwaukee residents to respond to ensure there is an accurate count of everyone in your household to help shape the future. Responses will inform how billions of dollars will be allocated to our state, county and city for community services, housing assistance, public safety, health clinics, education, public transportation, and much more.

Also, the City of Milwaukee has had ambitious plans to fix its housing woes over the years. Where are we now? Milwaukee is a thriving city with historic architecture and unique neighborhoods. However, the city is still dealing with foreclosure and eviction problems that were revealed in the 2016 book Evicted, by Pulitzer-winning author, Matthew Desmond, especially in the city's 53206 area. Recently, Milwaukee has had a surge in development and luxury housing that has mostly impacted the city's downtown area. What has this done to alleviate the lack of housing for the lower-income residents of our communities? What has this done to restore the city's housing programs and eviction crisis that still exist today?

The Milwaukee Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, Inc. will be asking all participants and guests to make a commitment to action regarding these challenges in hopes of greater participation in our communities and improved quality of life.

Milwaukee Community Journal has been the #1 source for news and information about our community for over 40 years and now we would like to honor the families and individuals who have contributed, supported, and helped build our Black community within Milwaukee. From politicians to factory workers, educators to bus drivers, postal workers to college professors, businesspeople to health professionals, parents to clergy. Our community has come from this amalgamate of thought leaders who deserve to be honored!

If you feel your family has contributed to the Black legacy of Milwaukee....

Please submit photos, documents and any other pieces of history you would like to share with the community to our front desk located at
