JUSTICE FOR JACOB BLAKE!- JACOB SPEAKS!

"I just want to say man to all of the young cats out there, even the older ones—older than me—there's a lot more life to live out here man. Your life, and not only just your life...your legs, something that you need to move around and move forward with in life, can be taken from you (snapping his fingers) like this man. And I promise you, the type of (bleep) that you go through...I got staples in my back, staples in my damn stomach...you do not want to have to deal with this (bleep) man. Twenty-four hours, every 24 hours, this pain...there's nothing...there's nothing but pain. It hurts to breath, it hurts to sleep, it hurts to move from side-to-side, it hurts to eat. Please, I'm telling you, change your lives out there. We can stick together, make some money, make everything easier for our people out here man, because there's so much time that has been wasted..."

Milwaukee activist Frank Nitty captured the nation's attention recently when he passionately spoke at the 2020 March on Washington, after walking 750 miles from his hometown to the nation's capital.

Claiming he was "tired," and asking the overflow gathering if they were tired too, Nitty declared the current protests against police violence against Black and Brown Americans, sparked by the killing of George Floyd in Minneapolis several months ago, is a "revolution."

Last week's edition of your Milwaukee Community Journal, with the front page proclaiming 'Black Lives Matter' and the names of those African Americans who have died at the hands of police officers across the nation, was a huge hit!

To paraphrase an old saying: copies of the MCJ flew off our racks like hot cakes at several area food and drug stores! And that's a good thing, especially in these challenging times for print media—especially for Black print media—which faced challenges even before the coronavirus.

While many applauded our bold front page—via emails, text messages, and (smart) phone calls—there were the expected critics who weren't shy in sharing with us their displeasure.

The critics never disappoint; using the usual anonymous racial vitriol laced with the 'N'-word, reverences to watermelons, socialism, Marxism (Communism), being dumb and racist (racist?...really?).

SUPPORT LOCAL NEWS

SUBSCRIBE. DONATE. ADVERTISE.

During times of crisis, crucial information about your community comes from local reporters.

Access to high quality information is essential. Especially local information. And especially now. What's happening in our communities? What's the impact? How are our local leaders responding? For answers to these questions, we rely on the hard work of our local reporters. As a result, readership of local news outlets has reached record highs.

But due to COVID-19, most local news publications are losing money, fast. Advertising has plummeted during the crisis and readers aren't subscribing fast enough to fill the void. This has led to thousands of local reporters being laid off. Just as our society faces numerous, urgent challenges.

Millions of people are in danger of losing access to the authoritative local information they need to stay informed.

That's why the National Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Association of Hispanic Publications are working with local news providers to build a strong future for local journalism. And that's why our long-time partner Google is purchasing ads like this in local publications across the country, as well as providing a Relief Fund to help struggling local news outlets. But those actions alone aren't enough. Please consider supporting the local news organizations you rely on. Subscribe to them. Donate to them. And if you have a business that's able to, advertise with them. Your support is critical to sustaining the dedicated journalists serving your communities.

Our local news outlets help keep us safer. Let's help keep them open.

Ascension St. Joseph Opens Emergency Department for Pregnant Women

Beginning this week, Ascension St. Joseph, 5000 W. Chambers St., will become the first hospital in Milwaukee to offer a new 24-hour OB Emergency Department (OBED) dedicated to pregnant women.

The four-bed OBED is staffed with seven board-certified OB/GYNs through the OB Hospitalist Group to provide care for pregnancy-related emergencies and to diagnose labor.

“This represents a significant investment in our hospital to provide an elevated standard of care for our patients and positively impact the lives of women, their babies and the families we are privileged to serve,” said Dr. Matthew Lee, Medical Director, Women and Families, Ascension Wisconsin.

The team of physicians' goal is to improve patient care for moms-to-be and reduce wait times at one of the state's busiest emergency departments.

“We care for women from throughout the area, and that includes many high-risk moms-to-be who face both physical and socioeconomic challenges,” said Kevin Kluesner, Chief Administrative Officer, Ascension St. Joseph.

“We are dedicating time, energy, and resources to improve birth outcomes, reduce health disparities and improve maternal and infant health. The OBED is another step forward in this important work.”

Pregnancy emergencies can happen at any hour and can range from miscarriages or threat of a miscarriage, to elevated blood pressure or more serious issues that require immediate surgery. Conditions commonly treated in an OBED include:

- Abnormal vaginal bleeding
- Complications associated with high-risk pregnancy
- Decreased fetal movement
- Increased blood pressure
- Preterm labor
- Ruptured membranes

The OBED program does not replace a woman's regular obstetrician; instead, it serves as an extension of the patient's regular doctor. Hospitalists are physicians who specialize solely in caring for patients who are hospitalized, rather than those in a clinical or outpatient setting. OB hospitalists have additional training such as advanced fetal assessment and monitoring.

In addition to handling deliveries, OB hospitalists assist with any issues and emergencies that may arise and provide several services including:

Care in times of emergency prior to the arrival of a patient's physician

Support the care of high-risk pregnancy patients

Deliver babies for patients who don't have an obstetrician

Pregnant women in need of emergency care will continue to use the main ED entrance at Ascension St. Joseph off Burleigh Street and be escorted to the OBED located in the Labor and Delivery Unit.

PERSPECTIVES

A MANTRA, A MOMENT, AND A MOVEMENT

come accustomed to the venom spewed by clueless individuals who don't understand—nor want to understand—what it means to be Black in America, let alone what 'living while Black' means.

Contrary to what the current occupant of the White House, hard right-wing conservative radio 'fire-breathers'...and FOX News says, 'BLACK LIVES MATTER' is not a terrorist organization.

'BLACK LIVES MATTER' is a mantra embraced by every Black person who has—or knows a family member, relative, and friend who has—been profiled, stopped, questioned, falsely accused, charged, sentenced, and yes KILLED because they had the audacity to live while Black in America.

The MCJ's front page declaration last week was not anti-police or anti-law and order. We value and applaud the 'good work' done by the police officers and detectives of Milwaukee's police department—and police departments across the nation, who take seriously the oath of many law enforcement agencies to 'protect and serve.'

Nor did our declaration mean we want to see the de-funding of police departments. What we want—what Black America wants, what ALL America wants—is fairness, equity and equality when it comes to the exercise of justice, not only on the streets by police, but in all areas of our lives. As does every law-abiding citizen.

We want a 'de-escalation' of confrontations with police. We want to see a 'reform' of police procedures and protocols that require police officers to treat Black people the same way they would want to be treated: with respect! To be assumed not guilty until proven guilty by a legitimate court of law.

For that to happen, there must also be reform...no, make that dismantling...of the current 'police culture' that condones and encourages the lethal behavior of some police officers, shown in recent videos. They are the reasons for the resultant protests that have followed.

These three words: BLACK LIVES MATTER, now carries the same iconic weight enjoyed by Dr. Martin Luther King's 'I Have a Dream.' It is not a slogan of defiance; it is another way of saying 'ENOUGH.' It's also the name of an organization born out of the blood of Trayvon, George, Breonna, and others.

BLACK LIVES MATTER, the non-profit organization, boldly speaks truth-to-power and the conscious of America, challenging the nation that values 'liberty and justice for all' to live up to those vaunted words with long-over-due action.

Unfortunately, BLACK LIVES MATTER is unfairly and inaccurately being blamed for the actions of a few individuals (frustrated, no doubt, by the lack of racial and social progress in the face of the continuing murders of their Black brothers and sisters) who want to 'burn it down,' yet offer no real plan after it's burned down!

Such actions jeopardize the BLM movement and risks handing the president a platform on which to launch a reelection victory.

The movement and its followers must be careful not to hand Trump such triumph. To do so would render meaningless the cause for justice and peace Black America seeks, and make meaningless the names on the front page of the September 2, 2020 Milwaukee Community Journal.

Mamie "Peanut" Johnson

The Mighty "Peanut" gets her just due!

(Author's note: This summer marked the centennial anniversary of the famed Negro Baseball League.

Several American cities that hosted a Negro League team had plans to commemorate that auspicious occasion with major galas.

Milwaukee was among them. In conjunction with the Milwaukee Brewers, Holy Redeemer C.O.G.I.C. had planned to bring dozens of surviving members of the Negro Leagues to Brewtown as part of its annual 'Negro League Tribute' event. Led by former Negro Leaguer Dennis Biddle, an event's team had worked since last year's tribute to coordinate a gala commensurate to the historic occasion.

The Covid19 pandemic necessitated the cancellation of those national tributes. I never had the opportunity to watch a Negro League game, but I have been privileged to relive those glory days as a Brewers' consultant for the last 15 years. My primary focus was to coordinate the annual Brewers' tribute and serve as a host for the honorees who were enshrined in Holy Redeemer's Negro League Hall of Fame. As such, I had the unique opportunity to escort and dine with dozens of Negro League greats. Their shared stories were often featured on these pages. Following is one of particular interest and relevancy.)

Mamie 'Peanut' Johnson recalls 'the game' as if it were played yesterday, even though it was a half-century ago.

It was her inaugural game. Before her first pitch, the opposing team's batter stared in utter disbelief at what he saw on the mound.

Not only was the pitcher small in stature—weighing less than 110 pounds--but 'she' was a woman!

In fact, the first Black woman to pitch in the fabled Negro Leagues.

Mockingly, the batter shouted out to the mound: "What makes you think you can strike a man out? Why, you aren't any larger than a peanut!"

Johnson didn't show any emotion at the insult. Instead, she merely took the catcher's signal and, in three pitches, accomplished the seemingly impossible-- she stuck out the batter.

The year was 1953, and Johnson's pitching performance was a scenario she would repeat hundreds of times during her three-year career.

The nickname 'Peanut' stuck with her during her professional baseball career, as did her prominence on the mound. Before her short career was over, Peanut Johnson would accumulate a record of 33-8, playing against some of the best athletes in the Negro League; and the best athletes in the world.

Mamie 'Peanut' Johnson made history as one of the best pitchers in the Negro Leagues and as its only female pitcher. And equally important, she said in a recent interview, she earned the respect of opposing players, most of whom initially underestimated her. They learned the hard way that gender and size are only limitations if you allow them to stand between you and success.

"Baseball is a thinking game," she explained.

"Size and power are good to have, but you can compensate if you have the smarts."

Her smarts, physical prowess, and history-making achievements were among the unique credentials that prompted her selection to this year's Negro League Wall of Fame induction in Milwaukee this weekend.

Along with Negro League great Porter Reed, Johnson will be the honored guest when the Milwaukee Brewers play the Washington Nationals Saturday. Both legends will be available for a tailgate party preceding the 6 p.m. game and sign autographs during the early evening.

The next day, they will be inducted into the Wall of Fame at Holy Redeemer C.O.G.I.C. following church services.

The annual Tribute game has become a major Black social event, with several area churches scheduling fellowship outings around the game, and community organizations participating in special tailgating activities.

This year, the African American Chamber of Commerce is hosting a significant outing around the game.

Johnson's love for baseball extends back to her early childhood in Ridge-way, South Carolina. By age 17, her passion for the game and her unique abilities prompted her to pursue a spot in the Female Baseball League, even though she was attending nursing school in New York full time. But like Major League Baseball, the women's league was segregated, and Mamie was rejected without a full tryout.

In retrospect, Johnson said her rejection was a blessing in disguise.

"If I had played with the White girls, I would have been just another player. But now I am somebody who has done something that no other woman has done."

In the spring of 1953, Bish Tyson, a former player with the Negro Leagues, observed Johnson practicing on a field in Washington, D.C., and was immediately taken aback by her obvious talent.

He suggested Johnson try out with a Negro League team. She agreed, and soon after that, the manager of the Indianapolis Clowns gave her an audition. She was immediately signed to a contract.

Johnson wasn't thinking of becoming a pioneer when she joined the Clowns. Instead, her focus centered on competition and the chance to play professional baseball, her lifetime dream.

Imagine, if you can, a Black woman joining a male-dominated Negro League team at mid-century.

The Negro Leagues, according to some historians, got its start in 1897, when a team was formed in Galveston, Texas. The league 'officially' started in 1920 when a national schedule was organized.

Whatever its starting date, the initial challenges were not just in assembling talent, but also in acquiring fields to play on, traveling throughout the hostile south, and navigating Jim Crow, which wasn't a team slogan... or a mascot.

Though it's rarely talked about, Negro League players suffered unspeakable discrimination and hostility at White America's hands.

Players could find themselves beaten or worse if they ventured to the wrong side of town or appeared to be 'uppity' by their dress or demeanor.

It was into that dichotomous scenario that Peanut Johnson eagerly sought an opportunity.

She pushed the hardships aside and narrowed her sights exclusively on the opportunity to compete against players who are only now becoming accepted as some of the best ballplayers—of any race---in baseball history, such as Josh Gibson, Satchel Paige, Hank Aaron, and Jackie Robinson.

Some of them became household names in America as major league baseball eventually opened its doors to 'Negroes.'

But for nearly a century, most were known and idolized only in the Black communities.

Only a handful ever received an opportunity to showcase their talents on the world stage. That's the real tragedy of history and systemic racism, Johnson notes.

"These were some of the best ballplayers in history, period. And I got to compete against many of them in the latter stages of the Negro Leagues."

With that thought imbedded in her mind, Johnson said she never bragged or boosted, but instead thanked God every day for the unique opportunity.

"Nobody can ever say they ever heard me brag. I always felt if you could do it, do it. Be professional and be glad God gave you the talent to be able to do it," she philosophized.

"Plus, I always felt blessed. Here I was, a woman, but good enough to be there, playing among the greatest players. That was truly a blessing."

Johnson said her time on the road in what is now considered the dawn of the civil rights movement was not a bed of roses, even though it was far better than what her predecessors endured 30 years before.

In the 1950s, Negro League players found themselves subjected to racial scorn and hostilities, even in northern cities like Chicago, New York, and, yes, Milwaukee, home of the Negro League team, Milwaukee Bears.

Like internationally honored Black entertainers including Duke Ellington and Sammy Davis, Jr., the Negro Leaguers were not allowed to eat at many restaurants in the cities where they played, much less stay at top-flight hotels.

The female players in the Negro Leagues--- Connie Morgan, Toni Stone, and Johnson—were afforded a few privileges that male players were not, including being chaperoned by local families while on the road. But beyond that perk, they were treated the same as the African American men.

But it was all worth it in the final analysis, she reflects.

Both in terms of having an opportunity to showcase their talents and pushing open the doors of equality, even if it was only a few inches.

"Those were the greatest three years of my life," Johnson recalls today. "Not only playing with the best ballplayers in history---and that's what they were---but earning their respect and love."

"There's no doubt that Satchel Paige was the greatest pitcher in the history of baseball. And he took a liking to me. He gave me advice, pointers."

Competition among teams was intense, but the Negro Leagues was also a fraternity, she revealed; a large extended family.

The major leagues today don't hold a candle to the Negro Leagues in many respects, she theorized.

"It's all business today. We played for the love of the game, to provide entertainment to our people. Baseball, Negro League games were an event back then."

Johnson said she has always had a fondness for the Washington Nationals because it was in Washington, D.C. that she got her start.

But she said she would be rooting for the Brewers this weekend because her favorite player is Najer Morgan.

"He plays the game with passion. You can see to him it's fun; he would have fit right in with the Negro Leagues players of yesteryear."

Johnson is aware that being a history maker, much of the media attention will be on her this weekend, but she said she is proud to share the spotlight with Porter Reed.

Reed played for eight different Negro League teams and alongside such stars as Robinson, Paige, and Roy Campanella.

He played in his first professional game at age 15.

While in the army during WWII, he was one of the top players with a military team. After the military, he moved to Canada, where he started his professional career with the Los Angeles Lincoln All-Stars.

As a Negro Leaguer, he holds the record for most inside the park home runs and prided himself on never being tagged out while stealing a base.

Both Johnson and Reed are among two dozen Negro League players who have been inducted onto the Negro League Wall of Fame, the brainchild of former Brewers' owner, and former MLB commissioner Bud Selig.

The Wall of Fame was initially showcased at the old County Stadium. Holy Redeemer purchased the wall during the construction of Miller Park. The Brewers revived the tribute game several years ago, in conjunction with Yesterday's Negro League, a nonprofit group started by Dennis Biddle, a former Negro Leaguer.

Biddle has become a Negro League historian who strives to keep alive those Black history pages that seem to be fading along with other significant Black professional sports endeavors.

That history also brought to light the tremendous loss to society and American culture of exceptional athletes who were denied their place in the spotlight because of institutional racism.

Said Johnson: "My short paragraph in the history book may not amount to much, but it's important because it can open our eyes to another world, to the contributions of other unsung heroes, to an era that shaped America today."

Dr. Benjamin Chavis, president of the National Newspaper Publishers Association-Black Press Usa

"COVID-19 IS TEACHING US THAT WE CAN GET THE TRUTH OUT (ABOUT THE VIRUS) IN A TIMELY MANNER...THE LAST THING THE BLACK COMMUNITY NEEDS (AT THIS TIME) FROM THE BLACK PRESS IS SILENCE."

Despite the pandemic, YOUR Milwaukee Community Journal, is still getting ads from companies and businesses considered "essential" such as food stores. We've even highlighted Black businesses (especially restaurants) that are still "open for business." Like other businesses, the Milwaukee Community Journal is an “ESSENTIAL” business that is the Milwaukee Black community’s main source of news, information, education and inspiration about and for us!

BIDEN HARRIS

BUILD BACK BETTER BLACK ECONOMIC POWER

Joe Biden's jobs and economic recovery agenda is built on the proposition that we must build our economy back better than it was before the COVID-19 crisis.

Biden has been laying out his vision for a stronger, resilient, and inclusive economy. He believes in an economy where every American enjoys a fair return for their work and an equal chance to get ahead.

The Biden-Harris Plan for Black America will:

- ✓ Advance the economic mobility of African Americans and close the racial wealth and income gaps.
- ✓ Expand access to high-quality education and tackle racial inequity in our education system.
- ✓ Make far-reaching investments in ending health disparities by race.
- ✓ Strengthen America's commitment to justice.
- ✓ Make the right to vote and the right to equal protection real for African Americans.
- ✓ Address environmental justice.
