St. Mark AME Church joins community groups in MLK Day food giveaway and COVID testing

The Lovell Johnson Quality of Life Center (LJQLC) of St. Mark AME Church was the site of a food giveaway and COVID-19 testing in honor of the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King.

The volunteer led community event was sponsored by the LJQLC, Jump at the Sun LLC, Health Connections, Inc. and Im-power.

All are members of the Milwaukee Unified Emergency Operations Center's Community Resilience Response Team and were joined by St. Mark Church.

The event was held to support Milwaukee residents during the pandemic by helping them restock their cabinets, get tested and get additional information and support to help reduce their exposure to COVID-19.

CAN SCHOOLS FINISH THE YEAR NORMALLY?

How To Keep Them Open And Safer

COVID-19 cases are surging across the U.S., a harsh reality that students, parents, teachers and staff feared would happen when many schools opened for fall sessions.

As a result, schools throughout the nation have closed and shifted to remote learning in recent weeks.

What will it take to return kids to the classroom and keep schools open? Though vaccines have been approved, it may be months before children, their families, and school personnel are vaccinated. Until then, implementing a plan that includes processes for virus detection and response is paramount, says Dr. Jonathan Spero (www.inhousephysi- cians.com), an expert on pandemic preparedness whose company is delivering COVID-19 testing to K-12 schools in New York City.

CAN SCHOOLS FINISH THE YEAR NORMALLY?

"The problem that schools are facing is there is still a significant prevalence of COVID in many communities," Spero says. "Schools need to do everything they can to prevent student outbreaks; otherwise it's going to continue shutting down schools."

"But on top of that you have to deal with a tremendous amount of anxiety."

"The students, parents, faculty, and staff are all on pins and needles because they are feeling insecure about their health."

"The only way to address all of this is through a comprehensive health security strategy that can work when so many variables are in play."

Spero offers these suggestions to safely open schools while navigating the continuing COVID-19 crisis:

Daily temperature checks. "They're not a fool-proof way to see if someone has COVID," Spero says.

"A significant number are asymptomatic, but fever is a common symptom, and because it is, temperature checks should be a fundamental daily procedure."

Spero suggests two ways to organize the temperature-checking process at schools: designate some staff members, who can each scan 200-300 students an hour; 2) use thermal scanners, a device that can scan 400-600 per hour.

Screening for symptoms and close contacts. This starts at home, where parents can help prevent the spread at schools by keeping children home who are showing COVID-like symptoms or have been in close contact with someone with COVID.

"At schools, everyone returning should be screened on a range of symptoms," Spero says. "Those with symptoms should be sent home and referred for testing."

COVID surveillance testing. Though this is rarely being done in K-12 schools, Spero says, "Frequent asymptomatic testing of the student population is a very effective way to limit the spread of the virus in the school."

Positive test results necessitate the immediate need to perform contact tracing with the goal of identifying everyone who was in close contact with the infected student.

Daily prevention protocols. Spero says, "Prevention measures include mask-wearing by all students and staff throughout the school day, frequent disinfection of surfaces, the availability of hand sanitizers in classrooms, frequent reminders to wash hands, and as much social distancing as possible in classrooms."

"Positivity rates in the community need to be held to a reasonable level for schools in an area to be open," Spero says.

"And when they are open, there are a lot of moving parts for school officials to deal with in order to avoid an outbreak. But if they're not dealt with, ultimately your school could be closing again."

President Biden Issues Executive Orders on Racial Equity

Pres. Joe Biden

By Stacy M. Brown, NNPA
Newswire Senior National Correspondent

@StacyBrownMedia

After taking the oath of office, President Joe Biden immediately went to work.

In his first hours in the White House, the Democrat picked up a pen and signed 17 executive orders to begin undoing some of the damage inflicted by Donald Trump's administration.

Among the first actions was President Biden's order to advance racial equity and support for underserved communities.

The 46th president had pledged to do his part in the fight against systemic racism in America.

The President said he wants all federal agencies to review equity in their programs and actions.

With the executive order, President Biden demanded that the Office of Management and Budget analyze whether federal dollars are equitably distributed in communities of color.

Last month, the new President's team told the Black Press that Biden intended to follow through on legislation put forth by Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-D.C.).

Congresswoman Norton's bill mandates that all federal agencies provide a line item in their budget for money spent with Black and Latino-owned newspapers and businesses.

Congresswoman Norton's bill would reject any agency budget that did not demonstrate "substantial" advertising and other spending with minority-owned businesses.

The executive action also disbands the former administration's "1776 Commission," an 18-member board Trump put together presumably to study his stated concern about the education system being too liberal when it comes to American history.

"The [president's] equity agenda is grounded in advancing racial justice and building back better for communities who have been underserved, including people of color and Americans with disabilities, LGBTQ+ Americans, religious minorities, and rural and urban communities facing persistent poverty," the Biden White House wrote in a statement.
