CHAMPS AGAIN!

50 years later, Milwaukee Bucks reclaim the NBA World Championship!

“What makes this championship so special is how the Bucks have embodied everything that we love about Milwaukee: passion, effort, grit, resiliency, diversity and perseverance. When a team and city connect in this way the victory feels even better.”

Congratulations MKE BUCKS!

Joint statement from members of the Milwaukee Common Council:

Like the tens of thousands of people at the Deer District Tuesday night, and the many more watching at home, we were elated to watch the Bucks win their first NBA championship in 50 years right here in Milwaukee!

We want to congratulate the team on this outstanding accomplishment. Everyone from the players, to ownership, front office staff and all those who work at the Fiserv Forum deserve recognition for what was truly a team effort all season long.

The fans also deserve applause for showing the world how passionate and dedicated our city is. From game one of the season through yesterday, our diverse fan base never stopped supporting their team.

The world saw our fans – of nearly every race and ethnicity – uniting in support of the team and filling the Deer District and the Fiserv Forum during the incredibly exciting playoff run.

In particular, we also want to give a special shout out to Senator Herb Kohl. When he sold the team years ago he made

“Change the Game!”

Lt. Governor Mandela Barnes to run for U.S. Senate

Compiled by MCJ Editorial Staff

Lt. Gov. Mandela Barnes announced Tuesday his bid to become Wisconsin’s first African American United States Senator, promising to fight for opportunity for every Wisconsinite.

Barnes, 34, made his announcement on Twitter ahead of an afternoon media event at the Sherman Phoenix, located on west Fond Du Lac Avenue where he made the official announcement.

“Hard-working families deserve every opportunity, but politicians like (incumbent) Senator Ron Johnson aren’t delivering. Instead of changing our dreams, we need to change the game. Join us,” read Barnes tweet.

Recalling growing up in the 53206 zip code, the most impoverished in the city, his father working on an assembly line for 30 years, and his mother teaching in Milwaukee Public Schools, Barnes said there is a need to “build a better America where the opportunity I found isn’t so rare.

“My career has been dedicated to leveling the playing field for everyday people in Wisconsin. Whether that’s as an organizer in Milwaukee, a state legislator, or as lieutenant governor, (continued on page 2)

I've taken on inequality and I'm going to continue that fight when I reach the U.S. Senate."

He joins six other individuals in pursuing the senate seat now occupied by Johnson. Barnes was elected lieutenant governor in 2018 alongside Gov. Tony Evers.

He is the state's first Black lieutenant governor, and the second Black person elected to statewide office.

"Mandela Barnes is a good friend and has been a great partner working to address challenges facing our state,"

Evers said in a statement supportive of Barnes, but stopped short of endorsing Barnes.

"I've always said I would support any decision Mandela made about how best to serve the people of Wisconsin," Evers continued.

"At the end of the day, Wisconsin deserves better than someone like Ron Johnson, who's chosen to embrace reckless conspiracies that have risked public health and jeopardized our state's economic recovery."

Evers stated Wisconsin is lucky to have strong Democratic candidates who are "running to send him (Johnson) packing."

"I look forward to supporting Wisconsin Democrats' choice to take on Ron Johnson in 2022."

Johnson has not yet announced if he is going to run for reelection.

Unlike the other candidates in the race, Barnes won't take any corporate Political Action Committee (PAC) money; and he can't self-fund his campaign.

Prior to serving as lieutenant governor, Barnes was a state assemblyperson from 2013 to 2017. He made a failed bid for state Senate against Lena Taylor in 2016.—Sources for this article: Wisconsin Public

Ald. Chantia Lewis Announces Candidacy for U.S. Senate in Wisconsin

One day after Lt. Gov. Mandela Barnes announced his intentions to run for the U.S. Senate, Milwaukee Alderwoman Chantia Lewis announced her candidacy for U.S. Senate in the state of Wisconsin.

Flipping the swing seat, currently held by Republican Senator Ron Johnson, is critical to holding and expanding Democrats' majority in Congress.

"As a local elected official, I've seen firsthand how decisions at the federal level impact us in Milwaukee and throughout the state," said Lewis.

"I understand the need to have a voice in Congress that speaks for regular people who are not being represented by Ron Johnson right now.

"I'm running on behalf of every working class person in Wisconsin, every parent raising their children through a pandemic and every veteran who is struggling.

"There's a whole lot of people who are feeling a whole lot of hurt, and I am in this race for them."

Ald. Lewis

Lewis proudly served our country alongside heroes in the United States Air Force before returning home to keep her mother's small business afloat during her battle against cancer. In 2016, Lewis successfully ran for Milwaukee's Common Council where she has brought economic development to her district and sponsored or cosponsored over 300 pieces of legislation.

Learn more about Lewis in her launch video:

"Chantia Lewis for Wisconsin"

Lewis is building her campaign to look like her state and constituents.

She is proud to be the first Black female Senate candidate to have a Black female campaign manager and Black woman heading her consultant team.

PASSAGES

George (Buddy) Sanders -- a graphic designer and illustrator with the old Milwaukee Star, and Black Milwaukee community activist -- passed away at 90 years of age on Thursday, July 15. A memorial service with military honors will be Thursday, July 22, at Peace of Mind Funeral Home, 5325 W. Greenfield Ave. -- with visitation from 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

Personal memories of Black MKE's late, great George F. (Buddy) Sanders

By Richard G. Carter

"When other nights and other days may find us gone our separate ways, we will have these moments to remember..." The Four Lads (1955)

There was a time when Black weekly newspapers were rare in this city. In the post-war 1940s, The Milwaukee Globe -- published by my late father Sanford Carter, Vincent Bevenue, Lawrence Saunders and John Williams -- was one of the first.

On W. Walnut St. near N. Ninth, The Globe's was followed in the 1950s by the Milwaukee Recorder and Milwaukee Gazette and, in the '70s, by the Community Journal and Courier.

The iconic Mattie Belle Woods published the short-lived weekly Recorder and gave me my first newspaper job as I majored in journalism at Marquette University.

In the early 1960s, The Milwaukee Star -- touted as "The Voice of the Negro in Wisconsin -- burst upon the scene as the best Black weekly, an honor later assumed by the Community Journal. One thing that made it so was the presence of creative art director, graphics de-

PERSPECTIVES

SOME WEEKEND OBSERVATIONS ON THE POWER OF THE BLUES, BRAND CULTURE, THE CULTURE OF POVERTY AND FOOT-LONG EYELASHES

Weekend observations:

Thank God it's Friday.

Days seem to get shorter the older you get. As such, I've learned to combine activities; to optimize my time...

When I decide to cut the grass after work, I do so as a form of exercise.

Despite my disabilities, I cut our quarter-acre yard with a push mower, even though I had to stop and recover from the pain in my legs and feet several times.

I completed nearly 6,500 steps. It seemed like 65,000.

Keeping me distracted during my exercise session, I noticed two birds land at the edge of our pond. Several minutes later, another set of birds of a different variety landed a few yards away.

I continued mowing, eventually reversing my track when I noticed two ducks in the pond, one slightly larger than the other, implying different sexes. It dawned on me every animal enters a marriage of sorts, most for life.

It used to be that way in the Black community.

In fact, immediately after emancipation and the 13th Amendment, 80% of Black households were headed by a married couple.

By the 1960s, it was down to 50%. Today it is 30%.

The chains of poverty linked with welfare and sparked the evaporation of morals.

In Milwaukee, the loss of industry prompted a tripling of the unemployment rate in the Black community.

The fact that welfare required the man to leave home was also a significant factor, as was the structure of the welfare state, which 'rewarded' poor Black women for having more babies for more significant subsidies, which some called their income.

President Bill Clinton, who introduced the nation's most racist crime bill with the support of Black congressmen and the Democratic Party, has to shoulder some of the blame as well.

Clinton later carried out the rest of his neo-conservative agenda by ending welfare, shortly after Minister Louis Farrakhan appropriately explained, "Welfare spelled backward, is farewell---to human dignity and self-respect."

Blame poverty, a dysfunctional culture, or the sexual revolution for the current paradigm. Or you can blame the government.

Wherever you place the blame at this point is irrelevant. Today, 70% of Black households are headed by a woman, who is generally uneducated or undereducated, lacking a cultural or spiritual foundation, and most likely trapped in a mind-set I call the 'Culture of Poverty.'

And, as I explained several years ago, most of today's Black single-parent head of households don't know the difference between being poor and being 'po.'

African American two-parent households of my era looked at poverty as a stepping stone, a temporary condition.

We were 'po,' which was an economic—not a cultural—condition.

The single most significant indicator is the absence of males in the household, or more specifically, marriage as the cornerstone, which not only provides a cultural foundation but two incomes. At least the animals are getting it right.

As I was cutting the lawn, my mind scanned back a couple of years

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

“When you focus on the past, that’s your ego. When I focus on the future, that’s my pride. I try to focus on the moment. That’s humility.”

Giannis Antetokounmpo during a recent interview before game six of the NBA Finals

Common Council congratulates Milwaukee Bucks for winning 2021 NBA World Championship

(continued from front page) keeping the Bucks in Milwaukee a priority, and even contributed $100 million toward what is now the Fiserv Forum. We would not be celebrating today without his efforts.

What makes this championship so special is how the Bucks have embodied everything that we love about Milwaukee: passion, effort, grit, resiliency, diversity and perseverance. When a team and city connect in this way the victory feels even better.

As we celebrate this tremendous victory, and are inspired by the work the players did on the court, we stand ready to continue to collaboratively do the necessary work off the court to improve this city.

We look forward to the forthcoming parade and continuing the celebration in the days ahead. Congrats Bucks!

to a young teen my son mentored. He would come out to the house regularly to do odd chores for a few dollars. He would stay to enjoy a meal, converse or play board games.

I recall the first time my son brought him to our house. We live in a neighborhood bordering the city. Where families take pride in maintaining their yards and property, where you won't find litter on the streets, and there's a mutual concern for the neighborhood.

The then-14-year-old had never been outside the boundaries of the central city, and his eyes grew large. His mouth dropped open as he took in the neighborhood and our home in particular.

He said he had never been in such a nice house, and the large backyard seemed like something out of a movie. We must be rich, he asserted.

Far from it, I explained. We made the decision to build and dedicated ourselves to that venture.

My wife worked in the financial community for a couple of decades. As such, I commandeered our finances to create a savings program that eventually allowed us to purchase the land and provide something for our children.

The money I made from the sale of my book, 'Not Yet Free at Last,' went into the savings. And I sacrificed the emotional 'high' of driving a new car, so I wouldn't have a note.

In fact, I've never owned a new car, but my 2006 Z has served the purpose, along with my 1995 truck. Yeah, 1995!

The young brother, who was always respectful, well-mannered, and perceptive, had had several runs in with the law and, as a result, found himself stigmatized and placed in a youth rehabilitation program.

He was an authentic 'product of his environment.'

My son was his program supervisor; but took a particular interest in the kid and took him under his wing. Mykel became his surrogate father, filling a void far too many young Black men never see filled.

Under my son's tutelage, the young brother's grades improved, and his hostility and distrust evaporated. He was on the right path, and I had high hopes for him.

He enjoyed visiting and learning and had become a member of our family.

His only mistake was attending the funeral of a neighborhood friend—a junior gangster-in-training--- last year.

Standing outside the funeral home, a car sped by, firing several shots. One took the young brother's life. He was 16 years old. Sixteen!

Stupid, nonsensical violence. Urban terrorism. Another lost life.

Frequently, when I sit on our porch overseeing my property, images of that young man come to mind.

Had to make a run to Walmart after cutting the grass. I decided to go to the one in Germantown, along the Appleton Ave. bus line.

Nearly all of the Black patrons chose to bypass two central city Walmarts because they feel safer and find a more extensive selection of merchandise in Germantown.

We hate to acknowledge it, but the facts don't lie: The two urban Walmarts run neck and neck as the most victimized by thieves in the city.

And who would be at fault? Community leaders and politicians would blame the corporation, attack their commitment to the community. But we would know, if not accept, the truth. Who's to blame? Yep, the Neckbones.

As I was exiting my truck on the Walmart lot, I observed a young sister crossing the parking area leading to the main entrance. With her was a child of about five-years-old who was playfully running around her.

As they approached a stop sign several yards from the entrance, a car pulled up and stopped, its tires making a loud screeching sound.

The sound startled the woman, who in turn turned toward her 'son' screaming in a loud voice, “Get ya mudder forking, black ass out of the mudder forking street!”

The child, who was not in danger, stopped suddenly as the woman grabbed him by the collar drawing him to her.

She uttered a couple of other 'biblical' words, including 'little nigger' (n-word), drawing the attention of the half dozen White and Black folks who were either entering or leaving the store.

To be honest, I was embarrassed.

We constantly talk about perceptions of our tribe, about prejudice and segregation.

I could only wonder what the Whites customers were thinking, what prejudices were solidified.

I also pondered on what circumstances the child was living under and what his future held.

I didn't intercede because I traveled that route before, only to be cussed out by the offending Neckbone.

I could only pray the child had a responsible father or extended family in this life to balance what I concluded was child abuse.

My wife and I had gone to the Blues Fest on Brown Deer on Thursday. It was an enjoyable experience. Ran into many old friends, as the fest seemed to attract an older crowd.

I'm not a big blues fan, but the artists were jammin', and the atmosphere was electric.

No violence; not even a hint of weed in the air.

The security was made up of young brothers who were obviously trained to be polite and accommodating. I did notice an undercover brother, but there was not a single member of Milwaukee's finest wearing a uniform at the festival.

The event reminded me of the good ole days when the community could have fun without violence.

On Friday, we took my 88-year-old mother-in-law (MaDear). She was walking gingerly on her cane up until the music hit her. As soon as she heard the blues...it was a different story. To my surprise, she was up and jammin'.

Our music has a way of regenerating a person's soul. Such was the effect on my mother-in-law.

I was attracted to one of the booths surrounding the tent and music stage.

The booth was owned by a brother from Senegal, West Africa, and included Africentric jewelry and Motherland clothing.

The brother, Moustapha Drame, and I talked at length about his country, which I had visited with my late son and a group of other individuals a couple of decades ago. The conversation brought back positive memories I wished more of us could share.

I long to go back to the Motherland. I want to take my family to the Ivory Coast, where our ancestors came from before some were captured and sent here on slave ships.

I have had two DNA tests, the second pro bono by African Ancestry after I expressed my disappointment on social media with my 23 and Me test results.

Combining the two, I have in my veins the blood of Rameses III of Kemet. Both sides of my ancestry migrated southwest through Nigeria and ultimately to the Ivory Coast.

I am Fula and Mende. The latter being the tribe made famous by their escape from the slave ship Amistad.

After spending Saturday morning doing household stuff, I took my grandson to the Blues Fest. He met several people who recognized him as his father's son. It was an awkward but meaningful experience.

We stopped by the Khepra Jewelers' booth to talk with Brother Manuel about making a ring for my grandson that he saw my late son wearing in a photo taken before his death in an auto accident 13 years ago.

Ah'meer was in town to attend the Bucks' game on Thursday. He said he purchased his $400 ticket early in the playoff season. When he could not get a commitment from a cousin to go with him, he decided to go by himself.

I like the Bucks, but $400? I don't like them that much! Particularly given he could have gotten $1,500 for that ticket on game day.

We root for players who earn more than the average township and are unaffected by the life concerns we face.

But I don't refer to them as 'my' team because I don't have ownership in it. I don't own stock.

Ah'meer was visiting from Atlanta—the new Harlem. He observed his former hometown was much more diverse—albeit segregated.

Lots of new buildings and downtown renovations.

But every time he comes to 'visit,' he recognizes why Kareem Abdul Jabbar wanted to leave even after the Bucks won their first champion 50 years ago.

Culturally, for African Americans, Milwaukee is still in the stone age.

I confirmed what my grandson surmised with a recent report that declared Milwaukee is the best city in the country...for White people.

It is the worst for African Americans, based on seven negative indicators, including the highest Black male unemployment, infant mortality, segregation, and poverty rates.

I wish my grandson lived closer. My son, like I, was a single parent. His mother 'stole' him after my son died and moved him to Atlanta. I miss him dearly. But I can understand why he and my brother chose to live in Atlanta. For Black folks, it's like night and day.

Ah'meer enjoyed himself while at the festival, even though he couldn't relate to the music. We returned home in time to see the last three-quarters of the Bucks game. I didn't charge my grandson for the experience, and we had a delightful time.

After an inspiring House of Grace Kingdom Ministry virtual church service Sunday morning, I headed to the paper to finish up some work.

I had a half dozen near-accidents heading to the paper as I drove down Fond du Lac Avenue. Can't believe cops don't line that 'highway' street to stop the terrorists.

One car that zoomed around me and others on Fond du Lac and Hampton Avenues traveled at the speed of light and barely avoided vehicles that had the right of way. It seemed to be the exact car I ran into a mile further south involved in an auto accident.

After leaving the office, I ventured to my sister-in-law's house to help her move items into storage. She, too, is leaving Milwaukee, joining an ever-growing line of folks who decided life was better elsewhere.

Talking with my cousin-in-law as she sorted through boxes of old items, I learned of a women's hat show her church was hosting in a few weeks. I asked if wigs and weaves would be included since I've grown to accept them as hats.

I have wondered, however, about the new eyelash fad. I recall a sister coming out of a Pick N Save on Good Hope Road whose eyelashes were seemingly a foot long. I turned around, and she was gone. I assume she used the lashes to fly home.

After finishing helping my sister-in-law pack (actually, I primarily just supervised), I headed back home to start this column.

All of the aforementioned thoughts were filling my head, and I needed an outlet. Signifyin' is my mental orgasm.

Hotep.

Memories of George Sanders

signer, satirical cartoonist and layout genius, George F. (Buddy) Sanders.

I clearly recall the day in 1962 George -- who on July 16 passed away at age 90 -- walked into The Star offices at 2334 N. Third St. -- happily joining Jay Anderson (editor), Reuben Harpole (advertising manager) and myself (associate editor and sports editor), after he had just been hired by publisher Ken Coulter.

We got word about the assassination in a phone call from Harpole's wife, Mildred, who'd seen a television news bulletin. We had no TV in the office and were in total shock.

He also laid out our coverage -- with a famous Bill Stitt photo -- of our memorable January 1964 staff interview of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., at the downtown Schoeder Hotel..

In addition, George designed our popular tavern section -- two full pages of on-scene photos I took of patrons on Friday and Saturday nights at many of the Black inner city's crowded drinking establishments, such as The Savoy Lounge, 700 Tap and 711 on W. Walnut Street.

Over the years, his other creative art-work originals included a large poster for my 1986 Marquette University By-Line Award at the Wisconsin Club downtown, also displayed at an after-party at the palatial 519 W. Brown St. home of my uncle, Calvin C. Moody, ex-police detective and first Black Milwaukee County Supervisor, and a poster signed by many people at my 1987 Milwaukee Journal farewell party at the downtown Press Club prior to my leaving for the New York Daily News.

One of George's famous parties was in September 1986 -- a crowded picnic in Kern Park on N. Humboldt Ave. Joining my wife, Janice and I in attendance, was Milwaukee Alderwoman Vel Phillips (wearing a tee-shirt emblazoned "Brown Sugar"); Lincoln High football legend Jake Beason; journalist Bill Kurtz and wife, Marge; Milwaukee Journal editorial page editor Dave Behrendt; activist John Givens and family; original Black rhythm and blues historian Richard Berry, and my close pal, long-time New Yorker, Joe Dolan.

Another was his November 1986 Star staff reunion at Jay's Northridge Lakes apartment, which Harpole and I attended with our wives -- Mildred and Janice. And as dancing flowed to the sounds of 1950s-'60s Black doo-wop and R&B, so did the liquor -- courtesy of George.

In June 1992, George and I collaborated on presenting a wildly successful downtown Varsity Theater "Father's Day Eve" concert by the original Spaniels, of "Goodnight Sweetheart, Goodnight" fame. This was preceded by an impromptu gathering of the group, their wives and local Spaniels' fans, in the lobby of the Park East Hotel on E. State St.

The concert was followed by a wonderful after-party buffet we all attended at the Givens' family N. Grant Blvd. home.

In 1994 -- years after Coulter's original Star folded -- George's creative artwork again made its mark when he designed billboard displays, envelopes, stationery and business cards for WNOV-AM radio's popular, top-rated "Carter-McGee Report" that I co-hosted with Michael McGee Sr., controversial ex-Alderman. George often was an in-studio and telephone call guest.

George expressed strong views on the news via e-mail to confidantes. Meanwhile, he and my wife, Susan Orr -- former host of "Jazz in the Afternoon" on WYMS-FM radio -- became fast friends.

After Lincoln High School -- which he and I attended years apart -- George was drafted into the U.S. Army and served in combat as a tank machine gunner in the Korean War, in 1950-52, earning medals for bravery.

Now, my long-time, great good friend -- George (Buddy) Sanders -- has left us. He passed away in hospice care at the E. Lafayette Place home where he resided since 2017 with his long-time friend, Carol Hase. So rest in peace, Buddy. You now belong to the ages. —Milwaukee native Richard G.
