Up Close and Personal Memories of World Trade Center Terrorism

By Richard G. Carter

“Send not to know for whom the bell tolls, it tolls for thee...”

From Ernest Hemingway's
1940 novel, 'For Whom the Bell Tolls'

As a Black Milwaukeean who spent the first 30 years of my working life here, it's still hard to believe that work in New York brought me so close to both deadly terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center -- Feb. 26, 1993 and Sept. 11, 2001.

With the 20th anniversary of 9/11 upon us, my vivid memories of those sights and sounds seem like yesterday, when the 110-story Twin Towers were attacked.

The first killed six New Yorkers and wounded more than 1,000. Eight years later as the towers fell, 2,606 died -- including many people of color -- and more than 6,000 were wounded.

At 12:30 p.m., Feb. 26, 1993 -- as Director of Public Affairs at NYU's nearby Stern School of Business -- a huge explosion rattled windows in my fourth floor office.

Startled, I could clearly see heavy black smoke rising from the magnificent towers, less than a mile away.

Running outside, I joined a growing crowd of people on the sidewalk and street. And as did all, I wondered aloud what had happened.

Eight years later, at 8:45 a.m. on Sept. 11, 2001, I was at home in New York when terrorist high-jackers flew the first airliner, with 92 passengers and crew, into the WTC's north tower.

But I didn't learn of the deliberate act -- or that of the second airliner with 65 aboard, or the third, carrying 64, or the fourth carrying 45 -- until minutes later.

Ironically, the news came in a frantic call from my wife, Susan, who was visiting in California.

Live music returned to the lakefront last weekend as various national, international, and local musicians took to multiple stages, including the totally redesigned main Summerfest stage, to reboot Milwaukee's annual summertime party (abeit, a little bit late this year). Photographer Francesca Johnson again captured the spirit of the festival via her camera, focusing on some of the biggest names in Hip-Hop! That included one of the 'biggest' NBA stars of all time, Shaquille O'Neal behind the turntable as 'DJ Diesel' (pictured below and on page three). Ald. Chantia Lewis removed from council committees after being charged with taking campaign funds

Compiled by MCJ

Milwaukee Common Council President Cavalier Johnson has relieved Alderwoman Chantia Lewis of all her council committee assignment duties after she was charged with five felony counts accusing her of taking over $20,000 in campaign funds and filing false travel reimbursements from the city.

“Make no mistake that our judicial system presumes that every individual is considered innocent until proven guilty in court,” Johnson said in a statement Tuesday almost immediately after the charges were announced.

“However, until this matter is resolved, I am moving without hesitation to protect the institution of the Milwaukee Common Council, as well as the city of Milwaukee.”

According to a news source, Lewis, who is running for the U.S. Senate, is accused—in a 43-page complaint filed by Milwaukee County prosecutors—of taking money from her campaign account and using it to attend a Florida worship conference, pay tuition for classes at Agape Love Bible College and go on a family trip to the Wisconsin Dells.

She also allegedly used campaign funds for basic expenses, such as car and credit card payments, vehicle repairs and rent on a Milwaukee apartment, according to the criminal complaint.

On top of that, the complaint accuses Lewis of making more than 20 inappropriate cash withdrawals from ATMs totaling $5,590.50 from 2016 to 2020.

Wisconsin's Department of Health Services Releases New and Updated Resources for Schools to Keep Students Safe

Resources include updated guidance on outbreaks and new testing communications toolkit

To help keep students and teachers safe during the 2021-2022 school year, the Department of Health Services (DHS) launched a K-12 School Testing Program communications toolkit.

This toolkit will support school districts and school administrators' efforts to connect with school staff, families, and communities about the COVID-19 testing opportunities available to them through the schools participating in this program.

DHS has also released an updated version of the Guidelines for the Prevention, Investigation, and Control of COVID-19 Outbreaks in K-12 Schools in Wisconsin, a resource for school administrators and local and tribal health departments to use as they work together to make decisions about layered prevention strategies and to prevent and control COVID-19 outbreaks.

"It is important to remember that the most effective tool in our toolbox is vaccination.

Masking up inside and getting tested if you have COVID-19 symptoms are additional, important steps we can take to help protect ourselves, our families, our kids, and our teachers and school staff," said DHS Secretary-designee Karen Timberlake.

"That is why I am so grateful to see districts and schools collaborating with their public health officials, consulting this guidance, and enrolling in our testing program.

I know this work will help protect the health of our students, and help ensure the quality of their education and the safety of our teachers and staff."

As of mid-July, over 300 public school districts and private/independent charter schools had enrolled in the testing program, representing over 50 percent of public school districts and 10 percent of private/independent charter schools in Wisconsin.

As of current enrollment, the testing program has the potential to cover almost 60 percent of Wisconsin students.

A one-time consent form signed by a parent or guardian will allow students to participate in the testing program.

Enrollment remains open(link is external), and interested districts and schools are encouraged to learn more about the COVID-19 K-12 School Testing Program.

"As a former Wisconsin school district leader who led a school district through COVID-19 last year, I know many students and families desire in-person learning and a safe return to the classroom this fall. We want schools open for in-person instruction. And we want to keep kids, educators, and families safe," said Wisconsin State Superintendent Dr. Jill Underly.

"The joint guidance we are strongly recommending districts follow provides a roadmap for a safe return to in-person school."

The Delta variant is highly infectious and is widespread in all part so Wisconsin, as it is across the country.

As the Delta variant spread increases, so does the risk that new, potentially more dangerous variants will develop.

That is why state health officials are urging all eligible Wisconsinites to get the COVID-19 vaccine, wear a mask indoors or when gathering outside, and follow other best health practices.

The vaccine is extremely effective against serious disease, hospitalizations, and death.

While getting vaccinated remains the very best way to stop the spread of this deadly virus, we also need to have multiple layers

Supervisor Coggs-Jones Expresses Support for New Mental Health Emergency Center

Coggs-Jones

County Supervisor Priscilla E. Coggs-Jones applauds the decade-long collaboration between public and private entities which led to the establishment of a new Mental Health Emergency Center located at 1525 N 12th Street.

"The new Mental Health Emergency Center is vital to Milwaukee County's goal of becoming the healthiest county in Wisconsin. It is imperative that we ensure that county residents have access to high-quality patient-centered behavioral health services."

children, adolescents, and adults; a therapeutic environment for both voluntary and involuntary patients; extensive care management; crisis telepsychiatry services; and a national model for patient-centered, recovery-oriented, and culturally informed care.

Milwaukee County and area health systems including Ascension Wisconsin, Advocate Aurora Health, Children's Wisconsin, and Froedtert Health collaborated to bring the Mental Health Emergency Center into existence.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health 1 in 5 adults, or roughly 51.5 million adults, live with a mental illness in America.

According to the Milwaukee County Behavior Health Division the Wauwatosa Psychiatric Crisis Services (PCS) facility served more than 7,000 people in 2019.

Approximately 90% of patients come from the City of Milwaukee. The new Mental Health Emergency Center is strategically located near 70% of patients. The PCS will continue to provide mental health care until the new Mental Health Emergency Center is operational.

Milwaukee County Elections Director Julietta Henry

Julietta Henry

Selected to Advisory Board of the Election Official Legal Defense Network

Milwaukee County Elections Director Julietta Henry has been selected to serve on the advisory board of a national nonpartisan legal network created to advise and defend election officials in the performance of their official duties.

The Election Official Legal Defense Network announced the formation of the group and advisory board earlier today at a press conference in Washington, D.C., and described the organization's mission in an op-ed in the Washington Post.

"It is an honor to be selected to serve on the advisory board of the non-partisan Election Official Legal Defense Network," said Director Henry. "With the integrity of our elections being undermined by legal and physical threats to election officials, the formation of a non-partisan legal defense network is urgently needed. I look forward to providing my election expertise and being a voice for dedicated election workers in Milwaukee County, throughout the state of Wisconsin and across our great nation."

"Director Henry works tirelessly on behalf of all voters, regardless of party affiliation, to ensure our elections are conducted in a fair, transparent, efficient, and secure manner," said Milwaukee County Clerk George Christenson. "Her appointment to the advisory board of the Election Official Legal Defense Network is a recognition that she is one of the most skilled and accomplished election officials in the nation. She is a dedicated public servant of the highest integrity, and we are privileged to have her and every member of her team on our staff."

Director Henry has a distinguished 30-year career in public service. She became the Director of the Milwaukee County Elections Commission in 2014, and manages all elections in Milwaukee County. She previously served as the director of the City of Milwaukee's Board of Elections.

Last fall, Director Henry led the recount of the 2020 presidential election, a monumental undertaking that required coordination among 19 municipalities, while facilitating hundreds of citizen observers during the Covid-19 pandemic.

Director Henry is active in various community and faith organizations, including Christ the King Baptist Church, Delta Sigma Theta Incorporated, and the Cream City (WI) Chapter of The Links, Incorporated, one of the nation's largest volunteer service organizations.

4th annual event.

The ride will first visit the Green Tech Station, where riders will learn from NWSDC staff about that space, an outdoor classroom and testing site that is available for educational, community, and industry uses.

Next up, they will get details about Hundred Acre LLC's hydroponic farm that will be launching in the Century City building.

Riders will then arrive at The West Basin where they can offer feedback about the park space that is being constructed and discuss the storm water mitigation measures the Milwaukee Metropolitan Sewerage District (MMSD) is implementing there.

Alderman Hamilton said riders will also have the opportunity to visit Villard Avenue and see the work of the Villard Avenue BID, progress and continued work being done on the Commons project and on development throughout the neighborhood.

"Our sponsors and partners are committed to working for our community to strengthen the bonds with the people they serve through partnerships with government in Milwaukee, and in unison with the culture of our city," Alderman Hamilton said.

A final stop will hit the Institute for the Preservation of African American Music and Art located at N. 32nd and W. Hampton, where riders will learn more about what the Institute has been working on.

"The bike ride will be a family-friendly event suitable for anyone who can ride a bike and the five-mile, slow-pace ride will start and end at Garden Homes Park, per usual," Alderman Rainey said. "I strongly encourage community members to come out and enjoy the Promise Zone Bike Ride on September 18th."

Participants will have access to a free mobile repair station sponsored by DreamBikes and a limited number of bikes available to ride, free of charge, courtesy of Bublr Bikes and DreamBikes. Snacks, water, gear, and prizes will be available.

of protection including universal masking in schools, particularly to protect those who are too young to get the vaccine as well as those with compromised immune systems.

"If your child is 12 years old or older, please get them vaccinated. And make sure you get your COVID-19 vaccine, too," said Secretary-designee Timberlake.

"Each additional person who gets vaccinated helps protect their family, their community, and our entire state.

"Getting the COVID-19 vaccine is an individual action that has community-wide impact."

Schools will keep their students and staff safe by following this updated guidance and implementing testing.

The updated school outbreak guidance emphasizes the importance of safe, in-person instruction by providing layered prevention strategies, including promoting COVID-19 vaccination among staff and eligible students, universal mask-wearing regardless of vaccination status, screening testing, and others.

The new communications toolkit includes a suggested timeline, key messages, and sample internal and external messages, all of which are easy to customize to the unique needs of each district and school.

Many schools are hosting COVID-19 vaccination clinics for their staff, eligible students, family members, and in comes cases, the general public. Visit the DHS COVID-19: K-12 Schools webpage or vaccines.gov (link is external) to learn more about available vaccine providers and sites.

Parents and guardians can also learn more about the importance of testing by watching testimonials from Wisconsin parents and school administrators in the COVID-19 Testing in Schools video, and can visit the COVID-19 Healthy Kids webpage for other resources about protecting children from COVID-19.

RELIGION

Dr. Kimberly Clayton (left) with her daughter Elise

KIMBERLY K. CLAYTON

Prolific Religious Author Continues in Faith

By Patricia O'Flynn Pattillo

We met Kimberly Jones in 1999 as a beginning Freshman with the Dr. Thomas Scholarship Fund. She was a conscientious student and a fervent believer who excelled in undergraduate studies at Alverno University; followed by her Master's in Business Administration from DeVry's Keller School of Management.

As a newly wed and new mom, we followed her. She was destined to continue to grow...and indeed she has. Today, a prolific writer, she's on fire in the Word and eager to increase and influence the number of souls she desires to save.

After ten years in corporate America, she knew the door was closing and believed she was being called to a new phase in her life. "In 2016, I knew God had a calling on my life and in prayer and supplication, I knew He was speaking directly to me, through people, as they were being drawn to me for prayer and encouragement."

True to others who have been called, she said affirmations came through people's remarks after returning to church or leaning into the Word for faith; prayerful guidance and personal commitments to live the life of Christ. "As another door shut in the corporate world, prophetic people kept coming to me and anointing me with God-expressions and Scripture", she shared.

A shy person, one who preferred accounting to public speaking, Dr. Clayton, paused, prayed and listened and watched. "Things were changing all around me, she said, not just in my immediate surroundings but around the world. In prayer, I knew the time for preparation was upon me, because new leaders had to rise to give the old leaders rest."

Her original mentor, the late Mother Rose Mary Blackwell of Faith Temple COGIC Church in Chicago, taught Dr. Clayton how to make flyers, create commercials, and fine-tune her messages. Side by side, she taught her excellence in presentation and total adherence to the Bible.

This led her to begin classes in theology; and her theological journey mirrors her accounting journey, laborious, methodical and intensely observant.

Dr. Clayton has her Associates and Bachelors Biblical Studies from Midwest Bible College. She has a Masters in Biblical Studies, certificate in Christian Counseling, Community Chaplain License and Honorary Doctorate in Prayer & Intercession, through the Ecclesia Leadership Institute. She is also an Ordained & Licensed Minister through School of the Prophet.

Daily, she ministers to readers and followers under It's Praying Time Ministries. All of this while she continues to follow the Master's bidding as a budding religious author.

Moved to write, under the divine anointing of Apostle Linda Shearrill, Senior Pastor of International Deliverance Outreach Ministries (IDOM) of Chicago, she started writing, "It's Praying Time!! What You Need to Know About Prayer Intercession," in August 2020 in the heat of the Covid-19 pandemic. Apostle Shearrill came to her again and shared that God said, "She should write books back to back, which she was guided to call the second book: "It's Praying Time & Soul Winning Time." That book was written in four weeks. "I stayed in God's presence," she shared.

Then book three was created in prayerful dreams and devotions, "It's Praying Time & Humility is Required", written in six weeks. Then book four came, "It's Praying Time and No More Idols", was completed from start to finish in three weeks. All four books are available through Amazon.com, under the name of Dr. Kimberly K. Clayton. The fifth book is soon to be available on Amazon.com as well titled, "It's Praying Time & Obedience Is Required", please be on the lookout for that book around the end of September 2021!

For one seeking clarity in direction, affirmation of salvation; and the wonder and joy of prayer as a daily regimen of faith and guidance, you must visit Dr. Kimberly K. Clayton's library of divinely inspired religious readings and prayers.

"God has inspired my writing and my life. I have an active 10 year old daughter, Elise who learned at home, last year, and did very well. So we are exercising that option again this year. We learned that we must work as a unit for our family to work smoothly. Finishing the books this year now permits focus on her studies, her needs, and the things our followers will need as this variant continues to challenge us."

Dr. Kimberly K. Clayton, Author, religious leader, devoted parent and community thought leader, following God's providence and protection; and seeking His affirming presence for deliverance and peace. To God be the Glory...Amen!

Ald. Chantia Lewis charged with taking campaign funds

The complaint also states she filed campaign finance reports in which she provided inaccurate information about her account balances, contributions and disbursements.

"Lewis defrauded the city of Milwaukee and her campaign, collectively, of at least $21,666.70," states the complaint. Lewis, the vice-chair of the Public Safety and Health Committee, makes a base salary of $73,222 a year as an alderwoman.

The charges against Lewis, 41, are misconduct in public office, embezzlement of more than $10,000, theft by fraud of less than $2,500, intentionally filing a false campaign finance report, and intentionally accepting an unlawful campaign finance disbursement.

Lewis' attorney, Jason D. Luczak, reportedly told media representatives that the alderwoman is innocent of the charges and that he would be filing a motion to dismiss before her Sept. 29 initial appearance. The defense believes the issues are better categorized as accounting errors.

However the compliant states Lewis "misappropriated funds belonging to her campaign by depositing campaign contributions into her personal bank accounts, as well as using campaign funds to pay for personal expenses."

"Lewis further falsely represented to the City of Milwaukee that she was owed reimbursement for expenses incurred on City-travel, when in fact she paid for those expenses out of her campaign account."

The complaint also accuses Lewis of structuring a campaign contribution to avoid the contribution limit requirements and misappropriating campaign funds by using them for personal reasons.

COMMENTARY: The New Multiracial America

By Julianne Malveaux, NNPA Newswire Contributor

So, you are sitting on a park bench, just enjoying the weather. What is the likelihood that the next person that walks by you is of a different race than you? In 2010 the probability of another race person walking by was 54.9 percent, and it rose to 61.1 percent by 2020. We are more likely to see people who are different than us in the classroom, the boardroom, or the sidewalk, and from what we see these days, our nation is not ready for this change.

The 2020 Census data, released a few weeks ago, reinforces what we already knew. The white population, still our nation's largest, is dwindling, down by 8.6 percent from a decade ago.

The Latino population, which includes people of any race (yes, there are Black Latinos), rose by 23 percent. It is the fastest-growing population in the country.

The Black population rocks steady at around 13 percent. And the population that identifies itself as "multiracial" has grown by a factor of three.

The multiracial population, which was 9 million in 2010 and grew to 33.8 million by 2020, reflects two things. First, the rate of racial intermarriage has increased, leading to an increase of mixed-race children. Equally importantly, the number of people who are willing to self-identify as mixed race has grown. People who once hid their mixed-race identity or felt pressured to choose one identity or the other, now feel free to embrace the totality of their identity.

The increase in the number of people who identify as multiracial is both a blessing and an illusion. It's a blessing because the accursed "one drop" rule was an oppressive way of managing racial classification. But the new multiculturalism is an illusion because it should not inspire "fear of a Black Planet."

As Richard Alba writes in his book, Th Great Demographic Illusion: Majority, Minority and the Expanding American Mainstream (Princeton University Press 2020), everybody brown ain't down. In other words, many who identify as multiracial take on the identity and politics of their white parent, not their Latino or Asian parent. They embrace their multiracial identity, but not necessarily multiracial politics. Many young people whose multiracialism are partly Black do "get" Black issues and speak up for them. Some, though, are conflicted and want to see "both sides." There are no two sides in the face of the outrageous police killings of Black men and women, but some who identify with their white parents are not as ready as others to take a strong stand.

Still, young voices are driving our reality. On August 28, young Tamika Mallory called the "Good Trouble"

Rally that drew thousands to the Lincoln Memorial on the 58th Anniversary of the March on Washington. In the tradition of Dr. King, who was but 34 when he delivered the "I Have A Dream Speech," Mallory called people out and took them to task. She asserted her leadership role and said she would take it, come what may. More importantly, she told Democrats to do their job, do their work, end the filibuster, and implement the voting rights agenda. Tamika is powerful, fierce, and surrounded by a multiracial team that supports her.

This is the future of our nation—young, bold, bodacious, multiracial energy. There are too many who would throwback to the past, too many who would deny the demographics, too many who are frightened about what comes next, who insist on humming, singing and swaying plaintively, "We Shall Overcome." In this multiracial world, there will be less singing and swaying, and more demanding.

Those of us who watch the demographics know that numbers don't mean solidarity (otherwise, how could we explain South Carolina Senator Tim Scott and the unhinged radio talk show host Larry Elder) and that we will have to work to get the coalitions that we want. And we must also know that no matter how the demographics shift, our nation still owes Black folks.

"We have come to the nation's capital to cash a check," thundered Martin Luther King, Jr. "And the check has been marked insufficient funds." The funds are still insufficient, and the debt is no less pressing. Shifting demographics don't cancel the debt. Tamika Mallory, with her inspired leadership, reminds us to hold those we voted for accountable.

PERSPECTIVES

I turned on TV and we watched, 3,000 miles apart, with millions. We saw video tape of huge, high-speed airliners smashing into both towers. We saw people jumping from windows to escape raging fire, and the towers crumble, as many below ran for their lives.

During our amazing five hours on the phone, I had an unrestricted view from my ninth floor apartment of countless hospital ambulances -- red lights flashing and sirens screaming -- roaring down a close-by expressway on their way to Lower Manhattan.

A week later -- using my New York Amsterdam News press credentials -- I visited the site where the Twin Towers stood, and was stung by the ruins and lingering odor. Hundreds of signs, posters and photos of loved ones and missing friends adorned fences.

On that day, the military air defense of the United States mainland was made up of only 14 fighter planes. It developed that United Flight 93's targets were the White House, or Air Force One at Andrews Field, with President George W. Bush possibly aboard.

Bush reluctantly ordered a shoot-down. On Sept. 14, he said: "I gave our military the orders necessary to protect Americans, and of course that's difficult." He added he had no choice "when informed an unidentified aircraft was headed to the heart of the capital." This casts doubts on the story of UA 93 passengers overpowering the terrorists and helping to bring the plane down.

In a TV news interview Sept. 16, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld did a tap dance when asked about rumors that UA 93 was obliterated mid-air by a missile from one of those fighter planes.

Why? Because all found at the crash site in Shanksville, PA, was a hole in the ground. No debris field, no airplane fragments, no bodies, no body parts.

To review the Feb. 26, 1993 terrorist attack, I suggest the stunning 1997 film "Path to Paradise." For Sept. 11, 2001, I recommend ABC's "The Path to 9/11" -- a two-part 2006 commercial-free movie -- with Penny Johnson Jerald in a key role as Condoleezza Rice.

Because I never want to forget where I was on those fateful days, I watch, with a heavy heart, "Path to Paradise" every Feb. 26, and "The Path to 9/11," every Sept. 11.

Council President Cavalier Johnson's Labor Day message

Friends,

As many of us enjoyed a long weekend with friends and family, it's important that we took a moment to pay tribute to the working Americans who are the backbone of our economy.

The labor movement was founded on the principle of unity among working people. We must renew our commitment to fighting for livable wages, equal pay, safe and inclusive workplaces, and an economy that works for everyone.

We must also put our words into action, and so this week I'm sending a letter to the Wisconsin Congressional delegation, calling on them each to support the PRO Act so every worker who wants to can join a union and access the benefits of collective bargaining.

This weekend and every day, I remain eternally grateful for all the hard-working people whose sacrifices make our community great and our nation stronger.

Happy Labor Day!
In Solidarity,
Cavalier

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"Money is numbers and numbers never end. If it takes money to be happy, your search for happiness will never end." —Ragge great Bob Marley

Maybe it isn't 'Big T's' fault after all!

There is a lot of blame to be distributed to a lot of people in government, the school system, and community-based organizations!

'If nothing changes, nothing changes.'

'The more things change, the more things remain the same.'

Which of those platforms you stand on will probably determine who you'll support as a successor to Mayor Tom Barrett, who was recently nominated for an ambassadorship to Luxembourg? Given the nature of political partisanship these days, Big T's approval by the U.S. Senate may take a minute or two (or three), giving you ample opportunity to ponder whether you embrace the probability that little, or nothing, will change for the Black community regardless of who next occupies the mayor's office.

And that's even if you operate on CP time.

Of course, some eternal optimists believe an infusion of youth, Black nationalistic philosophy, and political independence will overcome history and political impotence and move Milwaukee from its status as the worst city for African Americans to a few steps up the socioeconomic ladder.

Yet, even the most predatory among us can't envision Milwaukee morphing into a Charlotte, N.C., considered the best city for Black folks.

But, hey, if we can move past Anchorage, Alaska, that would be a step in the right direction.

This leaves me with the ominous task of assuming my secondary role as the Ghetto 'Negrodemus': The first Black mayor will come with high expectations, but will soon discover, as Barack Obama and his administration did on the federal level, the system is set up to negate fundamental change that benefits those on the bottom.

As such, the only hope of our seeing a complete reversal of the 'Black Plight' would be if the next mayor---who I assume will be an African American---takes the oath of office wearing a dashiki, surrounded by the 'Fruit of Islam' and reading from the '42 Negative Confessions.'

Or, there's divine intervention that turns Sodom into Wakanda.

Like most pundits, I've spent the past weeks discussing Big T's legacy and the pending opportunity to elect our first African American mayor.

For the most part, the conversations followed a familiar script: Everybody loves Tom Barrett. He's a good guy, a true friend of the Black community. If he pastored a church, it would be integrated.

But...he was a better legislator than city administrator; he is too nice; lacks vision for a Black renaissance; much less resolving the myriad of problems hindering the Black community.

I've known Big T since he was first elected to the state assembly. I endorsed him at every step of his political career---until his first bid for mayor, 17 years ago, during which I threw my name and energy behind Marvin Pratt, then the acting mayor.

During his legislative career, I repeatedly praised Big T for tackling issues that should be important to our community, including insurance redlining.

He was admired and respected as a congressman and earned honorary membership in the Congressional Black Caucus.

In fact, one of the highlights of my career was being selected by then-Representative Barrett to attend the first official White House visit of South African patriot Nelson Mandela.

Big T attended my wedding, numerous social events and even designated a Mikel Holt Day in Milwaukee.

I was told that he jumped at the opportunity to offer remarks when I was honored by the Wisconsin Black Media Association with its first 'Saluting Our Own' lifetime achievement recognition.

I had recently emerged from a 12-round Kumite with death that required six months of hospitalization, so I viewed the tribute as somewhat of a memorial service.

If nothing else, I was blessed to hear my obituary on this side of the dirt and felt honored and privileged. Big T applauded this 'Black cat's' seven lives.

I was doubly appreciative since while we remained friends and friendly, we found ourselves in conflict over the direction of the city.

I was impatient and frustrated with the lack of attention given to the plight of the city's Black population.

And I expressed my concerns repeatedly in print and on television.

The mayor's emphasis on revitalizing downtown was encapsulated when he proposed using millions in federal funds on the 'streetcar named undesired.'

I did not see how the streetcar benefitted the Black community, much less how it should be prioritized above the myriad of negative social indicators which have combined to earn Milwaukee a reputation as the worst city in America for African Americans.

That designation is determined by accommodating seven nation-leading negative social indicators, including Black male unemployment, 40% poverty rate, a 44% high school dropout rate, and the lowest Black reading proficiency rates for African American fourth and eighth-graders.

Oh yes, let's not forget we're the second most segregated city in the country with the highest infant mortality rate.

The fact that I consistently reminded folks of those statistics incensed several Barrett staff members, special interests (that benefit from our plight), and the state Democratic Party as they were attempting to tout Milwaukee as the great city on the great lake.

But in retrospect, maybe my frustration and assertions of apathy were misdirected.

As several pundits reminded me, by focusing on the mayor's office, I had provided a 'get out of jail free card' to Black elected officials, who we supposedly elected to represent our interests.

After all, half of the common council is African American. We control the county board, and both its chair and the county executive are African Americans. The city attorney, treasurer, and chief of police are tribal members.

If I used a similar accountability standard for them, who would be left? Along those lines, should we fire Chief Jeffrey Norman since crime---murder, carjacking's, and street terrorism---is out of control?

Or is the election of Black politicians simply about symbolism? We got all of these brothers and sisters in office, including a lieutenant governor, and we're in the same predicament we thought we evolved out of 30 years ago.

Likewise, how much of the blame for that dichotomy should be placed on our shoulders?

As I asked several people during my week-long musings, what exactly do you want them to do?

I helped construct the Black Agenda. The unresolved question was how to carry it out?

How do we reverse our position in Milwaukee?

Seriously. Be specific.

Where are the thousands of jobs needed to cut the Black unemployment rate? How many of our brothers and sisters are qualified for those technological jobs that do exist?

Of course, there is an alternate pathway.

If a 'dollar' touches three Black hands before exiting our community, we could cut the Black jobless rate in half.

But, how do we accomplish that Herculean task amid so much self-hatred and distrust?

Seems like the only Black institutions we support are the churches, barbershops, and the dope man.

Since we've been brainwashed not to support our own, how do you force White businesses to invest in the Black community?

You can also cut the Black poverty rate in half if we could restore the Black nuclear family. (For those of this generation who don't know what the term implies, it's a couple who 'marry,' with the plan to create comfortable lives for themselves and scenarios to ensure their children have hope and opportunity.

Most of the problems we face as a community --- aside from our cultural impotence and self-hatred--- can be traced to educational apartheid.

Or, more specifically, the unwillingness of the Democratic Party and its White and Black agents and members to address the most severe pandemic on Black lives.

Whether you support school choice or not is not the issue.

Black Milwaukee has been asking, begging, and protesting for a half-century to be provided with an equitable and comprehensive government education system.

We made the mistake of assuming that would come with the 1976 desegregation order. It did not. In fact, that federal order only obscured the walls of educational apartheid that were constructed right under our noses.

And the Democratic Party distracted us with promises and false demons called privatization and attacks on government schools by enemies of democracy.

But the truth is that these 'progressives and liberals' placed the interests of adults over that of our children. They have helped block the schoolhouse door and derailed much-needed reforms to ensure 'public' means 'teacher' and 'monopoly money.'

Meanwhile, we have lost four generations of Black children, whose numbers fuel the poverty, unemployment, and criminal ranks.

Oh, and let's not forget: That resulting paradigm becomes the catalyst for thousands of missionary organizations, who subsidize the 'Culture of Poverty.'

Unfortunately, most Democrats, including those of color, deny their complicity in this subterfuge. Yet, they offer no plan to tear down the apartheid walls.

But to his credit, Tom Barrett did.
In fact, he went so far as to publicly acknowledge the link between educational apartheid and social negatives. And to the surprise of his colleagues, he
