WISCONSIN'S LARGEST AFRICAN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

THERE'S A NEW CHIEF IN THE BREW CITY!

Jeffery Norman recently became the 22nd chief of Wisconsin's largest city, and the second African American in the position, replacing former Chief Alfonso Morales. The swearing-in ceremony took place at city hall and drew family, friends, lawmakers and law enforcement officials from around the state. During his brief remarks, Norman said his tenure as Milwaukee's top cop marks a new chapter for the department and the city. In a statement, Milwaukee County Sheriff Earnell Lucas called Norman a "forward-thinking leader. We have someone who will deliver a safer Milwaukee for all—for his family, for my family, for your family for all of us."—Photos by Yvonne Kemp

U.S. President Joe Biden speaks about the recently passed $1.2 trillion Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act at the Port of Baltimore on November 10, in Baltimore, Maryland.

Black leaders applaud Biden's infrastructure signing, but make clear there's more work to be done!

By April Ryan, courtesy of theGrio.com

President Joe Biden has a major victory under his belt after he signed into law the $1.2 trillion bipartisan Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act.

Reverend Al Sharpton attended the White House signing ceremony on a cold Monday afternoon located on the South Lawn, where theGrio was also in attendance. After the event, Sharpton told theGrio that this moment is "important and it is a deposit on the first part" of President Biden's physical and human infrastructure legislative agenda.

But the civil rights activist also emphasized that "we are not paid in full until" Biden and Democrats are able to pass critical voting rights legislation. As for the infrastructure bill that was just passed into law, Sharpton noted that there is a need to "make sure some of these contracts go to Black communities." He added, "broadband is good but we need to keep going further."

Taking the stage at the signing ceremony before President Biden, Vice President Kamala Harris said there is indeed more to come from the Biden-Harris administration. Clad in her staple pant suit, Vice President Harris said "this bill is one of two," the second half of the bill being the social infrastructure component to include extended tax credits for children, significant climate investment, among other things, is expected to be voted on in Congress at the end of the week or sometime next week.

U.S. Senator Chuck Schumer of New York, who also spoke at the

"You just have to get up, dress yourself and make the struggle look good!"

YOUNG, GIFTED, AND BLACK

BY MICHAEL BROX

Editor's Note: A recently retired MPS teacher, Michael Brox is no stranger to the community or the Milwaukee Community Journal, having contributed in the past as a writer. Brox, who founded 'Afro Fest' a number of years ago, returns to the MCJ to write articles focusing on—and showcasing—young and upcoming Black entrepreneurs, as well as other talented youth in Milwaukee. This is the first of what will be many articles giving them the spotlight they so richly deserve.

I recently talked to Lucretia McNutt, president and founder of Belle Flores. According to McNutt, "Belle Flores" is French for 'Beautiful Flower,' which seems very appropriate as her company conducts modeling classes as well as professional etiquette and other instruction in 'social techniques' that increases the confidence of young adults going into the work force or pursuing other endeavors.

A model since 2007, McNutt has been featured in such magazines as, 'Miracle on The Runway.' She's also done an 'Urban Street Ware' commercial in which she served as creative director. She added the experience helped her in the development of her clothing line, 'The Greatness Collection.'

The 29-year-old fashion veteran said while she is happy to be able to employ a number of models for photo shoots, she also enjoys giving younger upcoming models the opportunity to gain the experience they will need to walk a runway or get through a photo-shoot.

In addition to her numerous responsibilities with Belle Flores, McNutt is also a full-time employee at the Milwaukee V.A. Hospital where she's worked since 2019. She's recently completed her associate degree in business administration in health services.

McNutt stressed her success didn't come easy. Hers is another life-story of one who came up 'from the mud,' having had to deal with abuse in the home, as well as not having the benefit of a normal childhood due to having to take care of younger siblings, whom she loves very much.

McNutt shared with me she has recently lost her uncle, as well as a sister whom she could not see due COVID-19 restrictions. She was also involved in a serious car accident which she barely U.S. Vice President Kamala Harris hugs President Joe Biden as he prepares to deliver remarks during the signing ceremony for the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act on the South Lawn at the White House on November 15.

Black leaders applaud Biden’s infrastructure signing, but make clear there’s more work to be done!

White House signing ceremony, drew some laughs from the audience as he quoted Biden’s now famous statement when speaking to former President Barack Obama at another historic event — the passing of the Affordable Care Act. The infrastructure bill, Schumer said on Monday, was a “big F-ing deal” as it is about J-O-B-S.

Former New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu is tasked as the Implementation Coordinator for this new law. President Biden said Landrieu will make sure the federal dollars are dispersed as expected in the structure laid out for each line item in the bill from roads, to lead pipe removal to money for Amtrak to fix dilapidated infrastructure.

President Biden will begin his victory lap on Tuesday as he travels with Landrieu to New Hampshire and the site of a “broken down bridge,” according to White House Press Secretary Jen Psaki. The presidential spokesperson said it is all “in efforts to help people understand how the infrastructure bill will impact their lives.”

Ultimately, Psaki said, President Biden and Vice President Harris will be crisscrossing America to educate the nation on the infrastructure law and how Americans stand to benefit from its investments.

U.S. Congressman G.K. Butterfield of North Carolina, who was in the audience at Monday’s ceremony, told theGrio “this is physical infrastructure, which is something North Carolina needs desperately.”

He said at the top of the list of necessary investments is rural broadband followed by roads and bridges.

The congressman also vowed that next up on the agenda for him and his Democratic colleagues is passing the second arm of Biden’s infrastructure agenda in the Build Back Better Act.

The signing event drew a swarm of recognizable faces and names like U.S. Senator Joe Man-chin of West Virginia and U.S. Senator Mitt Romney of Utah along with Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot, Congressional Black Caucus Chair U.S. Rep. Joyce Beatty, U.S. Congresswoman Val Demings of Florida along with a contingent of Republican and Democratic members of Congress, Republican and Democratic governors, civil rights leaders, union leaders, clergy and others who traveled for this moment.

However, there were some dark clouds hovering over Monday’s signing with President Biden’s recent approval rating at its lowest levels. In response to Biden’s approval rating, Press Secretary Psaki said, “this is an opportunity” amid COVID fatigue for the administration to get to work and to help Americans on various domestic issues.

The other cloud is the news report from CNN detailing an alleged rift between the White House and Vice President Harris’s office.

The story even raised questions as to Harris’s viability as Biden’s running mate if he decides to seek reelection in 2024.

Democratic strategist and former DNC Chair Donna Brazile told theGrio, “As long as the president of the United States has her back, Kamala will overcome all of the disdain from the right-wing media and the contempt inside the beltway press.”

Brazile said that the most important role in American politics, or as she described the “backup quarterback,” is to understand the job of the president and to ensure she doesn’t drop the ball when it’s her chance to do the same. “Vice President Harris will rise. That’s simply what women must do,” Brazile added.

“Can they do better? Of course. That is why we are out here protesting everyday,” said Melanie Campbell of the Black Women’s Roundtable in response to public criticisms over the job performance of both Biden and Harris. Campbell will be marching Tuesday from the headquarters of the National Council of Negro Women to the U.S. Capitol building to push for passage of voting rights legislation.

“[It] has to get done and it needs to get done,” said Campbell, who has the ear of both President Biden and Vice President Harris. “The administration needs to get the filibuster reform done so they can pass legislation that is important to all of us.”

Campbell was also in attendance at the bill signing. She and Rev. Sharpton are of one mind on voting rights and this administration. Sharpton contends, “I think we had to be here to insist that we also move forward on the voting rights bill. In the great spirit of bipartisanship I hope they also include the John Lewis [Voting Rights] Advancement bill.”

Leaning in on reports of a divided Biden-Harris administration, Campbell told theGrio, “I think that this administration is one administration. The success or failure of it is one administration, it is not two administrations. That administration as one team will be successful or won’t be successful.”

survived but by the "Grace of God.”

McNutt’s philosophy on life is: “You just have to get up, dress yourself and make the struggle look good.”

Asked to share her vision for Milwaukee, McNutt said she’d like to see more unity in the community because “there is power in numbers.

“We can collaborate together so that we may walk together in purpose. Many people lack the guidance to conduct themselves in a manner which is conducive for success.”

McNutt added she’d also like to see the community return to a ‘It Takes a Village’ mindset (but this time really mean it!). “Meaning: ‘what can I do to help my neighbor (i.e.: passing on generational knowledge as well as wealth) which, she feels, will provide hope for our youth.

Soon, McNutt will add another title before her name—that of author. She is currently writing her life story, which is titled, ‘Enough is Enough.’ (Trust me, at 29, her life is just beginning.)

After all, “To Be Young Gifted And Black, Is Where It’s At, And That’s A Fact.”

National Day of Giving

#Giving Tuesday is a time to give! November 30

What is the history of #GivingTuesday? GivingTuesday was created in 2012 to encourage people to do good. GivingTuesday was born and incubated at the 92nd Street Y and its Belfer Center for Innovation & Social Impact in New York City.

GivingTuesday is now an independent nonprofit and a global movement that inspires hundreds of millions of people to give, collaborate, and celebrate generosity. The initiative was the brainchild of Henry Timms at the 92nd Street Y in New York. The co-founding organization was the United Nations Foundation.

National Day of Giving encourages giving back. It takes place the Tuesday after Thanksgiving. National Day Calendar says after we've spent the weekend shopping and looking for the best deals possible, this day reminds us to give to those less fortunate. How To Observe #GivingTuesday GivingTuesday.org encourages you to show your generosity:

1. Give to the organizations that you love most – no amount is too little and nonprofits need your support.
2. Support your local community fridge or pantry by volunteering or donating goods.
3. Help out small businesses by buying gift cards or writing an online review.

A Roosevelt's worth of thoughts!

'A penny or your thoughts,' someone asked me recently. My response: 'a penny won't buy you anything these days and is not worth the copper it was made from. But I'll provide you with a dime's worth of concerns if you have a minute or two.

So, here we go, with a Roosevelt's worth of thoughts:

1. I recently received an advertisement soliciting drivers who will be paid for putting business bumper stickers on their cars.

The solicitation hit home to me. So much so that I responded with the hope of earning a few extra dollars. If accepted, I'll put a small sticker on my 25-year-old truck.

The promotion also hit home because it goes to the heart of a paradigm I've long promoted: most people are being pimped by companies when they wear brand-name clothes without compensation.

Example: Those Nike shoes are both ridiculously expensive and also a promotional and branding tool. In other words, the Nike name and logo are essentially advertising that you pay for when you purchase and wear them around town.

The same scenario applies to those brand-name t-shirts, pants, and ball caps you coordinate by color.

Several years ago, I had my wife tell the auto salesman where she was purchasing her new car not to put their corporate sticker on her vehicle unless they compensated her. Which they did.

It's called common sense.

2. Watching the Republican Party seemingly implode right before my eyes over the last five years has been as entertaining as listening to DPI Superintendent Jill Underly explain why White folks can send their children to private schools, yet, Black people are traitors if they do so.

But, the joke isn't so funny anymore. The GOP is making a comeback if the Virginia gubernatorial election is any indication. I had assumed the more former 'Emperor' Donald Trump opened his mouth, the deeper the GOP hole would be. But Trump's base hasn't yet figured out he is actually a pimp, and they have been joined by suburban white women who abandoned him in the last presidential election.

Suppose political pundits are correct and the Biden Administration continues its downward polling spiral. In that case, we might see a shift in power in 2022.

3. Maybe the transportation ills that have created a shortage of food and essential products and forced inflation to skyrocket is a blessing in disguise. Who knows, maybe those who spend their gas and rent money on toys and turkeys will instead celebrate the true meaning of Christmas.

4. Several polls show Black Americans are disappointed with President Joe Biden and the Democratic Party's inability-- or unwillingness--to address our bread and butter issues, including police reform, Black joblessness, and civil justice.

Don't be surprised if those issues will miraculously take center stage as we approach mid-term elections. The Dems need us now more than ever, particularly given the national shift to a right-wing temperament. I wouldn't be surprised if Biden starts talking about a reparations 'study' and a national holiday for Minister Louis Farrakhan.

It would help his case if he pushed for immediate passage of the anti-lynching and voting rights bills while the Dems still controlled everything.

5. I do 94.8% of my grocery shopping at Pick N Save (Kroeger), not only because the chain carries most of the products I require at competitive prices, but because it's the only major grocer for which diversity and inclusion are more than a PC slogan.

Kroeger is also the only major grocery chain with stores in the Black community. It is also the only grocery that supports the Black Media.

That said, I do occasionally stop by the far northside Woodman's as I did last weekend, as it carries the widest variety of sugar-free candies and cheeses in town.

But I noticed something during my last visit that has given me pause. As I walked through the parking lot, I observed two heavily armed and armored men emerge from a dark SUV.

I first thought they were SWAT members, but as I observed further, I discovered they were security guards who replaced two other 'guards.'

Woodman's far northside store has only been open for a few years. If memory serves me correctly, it didn't initially employ uniformed security.

Last year, I did observe several heavily armed guards, but I assumed they were hired to protect the toilet paper, which was rationed out during the pandemic. the heavily armed security are from an agency that appears to be a paramilitary enterprise--if you judge the way they deploy and their black colored, unidentified vehicles.

Why? Does it have to do with the shift from a nearly all-white customer base three years ago to a predominantly Black one today?

Did something happen to warrant this drastic change? Is Woodman's being targeted by terrorists, or maybe 'Trumpettes' who believe the store's robust sales of greens and smoked neckbone signals a betrayal of American values and mores.

6. I don't know why my FB post questioning the buying habits of many Black women hit so many nerves. I merely asked why so many sisters bypass Black-owned supply stores to purchase their wigs and weaves from Korean stores.

Are Korean wigs of better quality? Do the Koreans sell their horsehair cheaper than African American merchants?

Seriously, my central issue wasn't the quality of the wigs and weaves, although I'm not a big fan of either. Instead, my focus was on Black unity, keeping dollars in our community to create and sustain jobs.

In response to one sister, I also questioned the cultural commitment of Black women who crossed the Midtown Beauty Island picket lines back in the day. That boycott was organized to protest the mistreatment of a pregnant Black woman by the Korean store owner, who should have called her an 'n-word' instead of nigger.

If sisters are offended by my questions, so be it. I stand firm in my advocacy for Black Nationalism—putting our community before special interests or false hair.

7. Heard a fascinating and revealing discussion on local radio last week in which frustration over the educational outcome of Black students led to declarations that alternatives need to be explored, including homeschooling.

Obviously, most of the 'radio revolutionaries' knew little of our 50-year fight to secure quality education for Black children. Evidence of that fact was inherent in the statement of several callers who proposed creating 'Black' schools as an alternative to the public (government) school monopoly.

Maybe they should read my book, 'Not Yet Free at Last' that detailed the failed belief that 'school desegregation' would equalize the playing field.

Or the campaign a decade later to create a 'Black school district.

Then there was the battle over North Division, which continues today as a coalition of former alumni fights the school board and teachers' union to take over the school, which is the worst in the state by several negative matrices. And of course, there is the ongoing battle over school choice, which was precisely engineered to provide the options the radio callers expressed support for.

Study history, brothers and sisters, instead of His-story.

In fact, look in the mirror, since I assume nine out of 10 callers—actually, Black Milwaukeeans in totality---, can't name their school board director.

I can make that statement because the truth is reflected in the less than 20% voter turnout for school board elections, EVERY FOUR YEARS.

If a slight majority of Black parents attended teacher conferences, monitored their children's homework, or reviewed their report cards, we could change the world.

Instead, most will probably fall in the category of the sister I wrote about last year who was upset upon learning her 18-year-old son had passed only two high school courses in four years.

If it seems as if I'm mad, I am.

Education is the last battleground in the civil rights war, and we are losing by default.

I'm mad because Black apathy and ignorance have destroyed several generations of Black children.

The reality is most of our community's ills---Black incarnation, poverty, unemployment, etc.---are the byproduct of educational apartheid and the unwillingness of Black people to do more than complain.

And then it's generally after the fact.

8. City Attorney Tearman Spencer has seemingly been under attack since taking office last year.

Now, a former deputy is asking the Common Council to remove him from office, citing a city statute allowing that body to do so.

I won't get into the media-driven complaints against Spencer.

Still, I take most with a grain of salt, given that he is replaced a former officeholder (former City Attorney Grant Langley) who opposed affirmative action and went out of his way to stop the city from maintaining a Minority Business Enterprise program.

It is also hard to ignore that Spencer is African American, the first tribal member to hold the position.

The city attorney and I talked recently at the event for 'Judge Charles Warren.' We will sit down in the future to discuss the attacks against him in detail.

In the interim, I don't expect much more than rhetoric coming from the common council, given the racial polarization among aldermen, along racial lines. The deciding vote is with Council President Chevy Johnson, who is running for mayor. Getting caught in the middle (literally) of this battle is not a winning scenario, no matter which side he falls on.

9. As I said months ago, the controversy over the so-called Critical Race Theory would be nonsensical if it were simply about the legitimacy of the argument about systemic racism in America.

But CRT isn't about history vs. His-story, but instead is a red herring, a rallying cry for racists who don't want to be overheard using another racial epithet. The CRT grew out of a symposium about the impact of racism in the judicial system.

In essence, it posited that the racial bias runs throughout the 'Just-Us' system, a fact that can't be denied by anyone with common sense.

I just completed a book entitled 'Inherently Unequal,' which examines Supreme Court decisions from 1863-1901. The scholarly research proves that racism was integrated (no pun intended) into the judicial system.

But you don't have to read that excellent book. You need only know that the U.S. Constitution included a provision that we---Africans, creators of math, science, medicine, and Christianity---are less than human.

Our ancestors were three-fifths human. That status was conferred by the founding fathers, half of whom were slave owners and White Supremacists.

Oops, can't say that, because according to opponents of CRT, it will upset--- somehow damage the psyche---of white children to learn the truth.

Thus, 'government' schools should teach only His-story, including Christopher Columbus 'discovering' America, George Washington cutting down a cherry tree and not lying about it. Abe Lincoln was a true friend of the oppressed Black non-citizens of America.

I'm sure while government school His-story will note Lincoln signed the emancipation proclamation, that version will ignore his September 19, 1858 speech when he called Africans inferior human beings who didn't deserve equal treatment or respect.

10. No one has said it, but there's another reason why professional football player Odell Beckham, Jr. chose the LA Rams over the Packers in the free-agent derby: If you were African American, would you choose to live in Green Bay over Los Angeles?

Be serious. You can't get a haircut in Green Bay if you're African American, and the only greens you can find are on the golf course (the one obviously frequented by many Packers players.

There was a run on Black players back in the day when Reggie White campaigned for them. But after he was racially profiled (a White cop thought his light-skinned wife was white), it all went by the wayside.

Hotep.
