BLACK HISTORY: Critical and Factual, Not Theory!

Study finds 41.6% of Milwaukee workers at high risk of automation

IN THE BLACK

In the last few years, it has become more common to order food from a kiosk, see machines cleaning airport floors, and talk to a chatbot instead of a customer service agent.

The COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the adoption of these technologies as well as others, many of which can be used to perform tasks that humans used to do.

Machines do not call out sick or spread disease and can replace workers to aid in social distancing.

While some jobs and tasks, especially those that require creativity and interpersonal skills, are not conducive to automation, many others are. According to data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and Oxford University, 42% of U.S. workers are at high risk of automation.

Lower skilled jobs, especially those that involve repetition, are more likely to be automated.

A Brookings study on automation's impact on people finds that jobs in office administration, production, transportation, and food preparation are the most at risk of automation.

These jobs are more conducive to automation because they involve either routine, physical labor, or information collection and processing activities.

Often these types of jobs are lower-paying, but some jobs at low risk of automation include low-paying personal care and domestic service work.

Data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics combined with automation risk data from a University of Oxford study shows a correlation between risk of automation and annual median wages. Gambling Dealers, who have a probability of automation of 96%, earn a median annual wage of less than $24,000.

On the opposite end of the spectrum, Chief Executives have just a 1.5% risk of automation and earn a median annual wage of $186,000. Most occupations fall somewhere between these extremes.

While automation will happen everywhere, its impacts will be felt more heavily in some parts of the country than others due to local industry makeup and worker skill set.

The Brookings automation study finds that rural communities tend to have a much larger share of tasks that are susceptible to automation than do more populated areas.

At the state level, Nevada and South Dakota have the highest share of workers at high risk of automation—defined here as occupations with automation risks of 0.7 or higher—at 48.4% and 46.9%, respectively.

Nevada is one of just two states where casino-style gambling is legal state-wide, and gambling dealers are at very high risk of automation.

To determine the U.S. metropolitan areas with the most workers at risk of automation, researchers at Commodity.com analyzed the latest data from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and the University of Oxford.

The researchers ranked metros according to the share of workers at high risk of automation, the total number of workers at high risk of automation, the share of workers at medium risk of automation, and the share of workers at low risk of automation.

To improve relevance, only metropolitan areas with at least 100,000 people were included in the

The analysis found that 41.6% of Milwaukee metro area workers are at high risk of becoming automated.

An additional 21.4% are at medium risk, while 36.9% are deemed low risk. Here is a summary of the data for the Milwaukee-Waukesha-West Allis, WI metro area:

Share of workers at high risk of automation: 41.6%

Total workers at high risk of automation: 221,180

Share of workers at medium risk of automation: 21.4%

Share of workers at low risk of automation: 36.9%

For reference, here are the statistics for the entire United States:

Share of workers at high risk of automation: 41.9%

Total workers at high risk of automation: 40,440,800

Share of workers at medium risk of automation: 21.2%

Share of workers at low risk of automation: 37.0%

OP-ED: Black History — Critical and Factual, Not Theory

By Congressman James E. Clyburn (D-SC), House Majority Whip

Focus on the history-making contributions of Blacks in America began when Carter G. Woodson and the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History successfully lobbied for the creation of Negro History Week in 1926.

They chose a week in February that could embrace the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass.

Civil Rights activities on colleges campuses in the 1960s agitated for expanding the week to the entire month of February.

President Gerald Ford formalized Black History Month in 1976, and every President since has followed suit.

Black history has taken on new meaning in this polarized political era. Education Week reports that since January 2021, 14 Republican-led states (Florida, Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Utah, Oklahoma, Texas, Iowa, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Montana, and Idaho) have imposed bans or restrictions on teaching about racial issues, and similar legislation is currently pending in another 23 states.

These states claim to be protecting primary and secondary school students from being taught critical race theory or "things that → Because COVID-19 can be serious for kids, too.

Getting COVID-19 can have real consequences for a child's health, from a hospital stay to living with "long COVID" symptoms. Taking simple steps as a family—like wearing a mask in class or getting kids the free COVID-19 vaccine for ages 5 and up—can help kids stay safe and in school.

OP-ED: Black History — Critical and Factual, Not Theory

make white children uncomfortable.”

Theory is part of the higher education experience; not the K-12 curriculum. While no one will deny the significant accomplishments of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks, and Harriett Tubman to our nation’s history; telling their stories has nothing to do with “critical race theory.”

Their contributions and those of many others, are some critical race facts that are missing from most of our textbooks and many of our discussions.

For example, I often tell the story of Thomas Edison and Lewis Latimer.

Thomas Edison’s invention of the incandescent light bulb is found in all our history books, and we are all comfortable with his story.

What is not found in all our history books is the critical fact that he could not keep his bulb from overheating and burning out.

It was not until Edison collaborated with Lewis Latimer, the son of escaped slaves, that he got his bulb to work.

Latimer had invented a long-lasting, carbon filament. The fact that it was Latimer’s invention that made the light bulb functional, seems to be uncomfortable for some to read in our history books.

There are many other similar facts. Thomas Savery, a white man, is known as the inventor of the steam engine; one of the most important inventions during the Industrial Revolution.

However, the steam engine was very inefficient because it had to be constantly shut down for lubrication, a very dangerous and time-consuming task.

A critical and not very well-known fact is that Elijah McCoy, also the son of escaped slaves, invented an automatic oil cup, which allowed engines to be lubricated mechanically while continuing to run.

His invention saved the limbs of many “oilers” and created a more efficient and cost-effective means of keeping steam trains running.

It is reported in many places that Elijah McCoy’s genius as an inventor is what gave rise to the very well used question that everybody seems comfortable using; “Is that a real McCoy?”

John Haldane, a Scottish inventor is often credited with having invented the gas mask during World War I, which began in 1914 and ended in 1918.

The fact is Garrett Morgan, a Black man, invented the earliest gas mask after the 1911 New York Triangle Shirtwaist Company fire that killed 146 garment workers.

Morgan patented his “breathing hood” in 1914, and he and his brother used the gas mask invention in 1916 to successfully rescue workers trapped by an explosion in sewer tunnels in Morgan’s hometown of Cleveland. However, due to their race, white men were credited with the rescue.

Morgan also met resistance when trying to sell the gas masks. He hired a white actor to pose as the inventor, while he disguised himself by wearing the hood during presentations. Despite these challenges,

Morgan went on to invent the three-position traffic light and sold the patent to General Electric for $40,000.

What all these inventors have in common is that these critical facts about Black Americans have been overlooked and forgotten by history.

In fact, when the Lemelson-MIT Invention Index was released in 2012, of the 1,000 young people between 16 and 25 were asked who was the greatest inventor of all time, 52 percent said Thomas Edison.

There were no Black inventors on the list, which illustrates how we are failing our students by perpetrating false equivalences like critical race theory verses critical race facts.

This Black History Month, we must raise our voices and fight against the false, politically motivated, narrative about schools teaching critical race theory.

Our history is what it is and no amount of white-washing or book banning will change it. But with enlightened leadership, we can learn its lessons.

Dr. Woodson wrote of his Negro History Week creation that,

“If a race has no history, it has no worthwhile tradition, it becomes a negligible factor in the thought of the world, and it stands in danger of being exterminated.”

There are so many African Americans in all walks of life who have been trailblazers.

If we don’t tell their stories and teach future generations of their contributions, our history is erased. And that is a critical fact.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE CITY OF MILWAUKEE:

Notice is hereby given of special and spring primary elections to be held in the City of Milwaukee on February 15, 2022, at which the officers named below shall be nominated. The names of the candidates for each office, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of the office, each in its proper column, in the sample ballot below.

- state their name and address
- show an acceptable form of photo identification*
- sign the poll book

*If the voter is unable to sign the poll book due to disability, a poll worker may write the word "exempt."

Where ballots are distributed to voters, the initials of two inspectors must appear on the ballot.

Upon being permitted to vote, the voter shall enter a voting booth or go to a machine and cast their ballot. The vote should not be cast in any manner other than specified here. Sample ballots or other materials to assist the voter in marking their ballot may be taken into the booth and copied. The sample ballot shall not be shown to anyone so as to reveal how the ballot is marked.

An election official may inform the voter of the proper manner for casting a vote but the official may not advise or indicate a particular voting choice.

A voter may select an individual to assist in casting their vote if the voter declares to the presiding official that they are unable to read, have difficulty reading, writing, or understanding English, or that due to disability are unable to cast their ballot. The selected individual rendering assistance may not be the voter's employer or an agent of that employer or an officer or agent of a labor organization which represents the voter.

The voter shall fill in the oval or connect the arrow next to the name of the candidate of their choice for each office for which they intend to vote. To vote for a person whose name does not

When using an electronic ballot marking device (“Automark” or “ExpressVote”) to mark an optical scan ballot, the voter shall touch the screen or use the tactile pad to select the name of the candidate of his or her choice for each office for which he or she intends to vote. To vote for a person whose name does not appear on the ballot, the voter shall type in the name of the person of his or her choice in the space provided for a write-in vote.

After an official optical scan ballot is marked, it shall be inserted in the security sleeve, so the marks do not show. The voter may insert the ballot in the voting device and discard the sleeve or deliver the ballot to an inspector for deposit. If a central count system is used, the voter shall insert the ballot in the ballot box and discard the sleeve or deliver the ballot to an inspector for deposit. The voter shall leave the polling place promptly.

The following is a sample of the official ballot.

Wards 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 141, 156, 158, 162, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 185, 223, and 230 will have the following County Supervisor, District 3 contest on their ballot in addition to the contest shown on the sample ballot.

Wards 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 224, 248, 249, 250, 251, 253, 271, 272, 305, 306, 311, and 312 will have the following County Supervisor, District 12 contest on their ballot in addition to the contest shown on the sample ballot.

Court Commissioner.

(2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order
under sec. 767.59 or 767.451:
(a) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall, with or without charge, provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:
1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.
2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.
3. Community resources and family court counseling services available
to assist the parties.
4. The procedure for setting, modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.
(b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase, with a copy of the stat-
