ELECTION WATCH 2022

Johnson, Donovan advance to April election for mayor's office

Acting Mayor Cavalier Johnson will face-off against former Milwaukee Alderman Bob Donovan in the April general election to replace former Mayor Tom Barrett.

Both candidates were the top vote getters in Tuesday's special primary election to replace Barrett, who stepped down earlier this year to become ambassador of Luxemburg.

Johnson garnered 25,779 votes to Donovan's 13,742. State Sen.

Lena Taylor finished third with 7,887. She was closely followed by Alderwoman Marina Dimitrijevic, who collected 7,521 votes. Milwaukee County Sheriff Earnell Lucas had 5,886 votes. Tuesdays election was the first open mayor's race in the city in 18 years and the fourth since 1960.

After several failed aldermanic bids in the second district, Johnson was elected in 2016, ran unopposed in 2020 and was then tapped to serve as the Common Council president. Now acting mayor, it's a position he hopes to make permanent this spring.

Bob Donovan served four terms as alderman for District 8, announcing he would not seek re-election in 2020. Donovan ran for Milwaukee mayor in 2016, losing to Tom Barrett, who was re-elected to a fourth term.

WHY BLACK HISTORY IS IMPORTANT! PART II

By Jean Jordan Nash

Jean Jordan Nash
The critics of Critical Race Theory (CRT) claim that teaching it is divisive.

That it teaches White students to feel guilty about the past and ashamed of themselves.

Some critics also believe it teaches students of color to demonize White peers and blame them for past events.

The critics also purport it is a sort of "Crow Jim", Jim Crow in reverse.

They assert that CRT restores racial segregation by asking all students to look at the historical reality of race in this country.

Critical Race Theory actually teaches critical thinking. Everyone agrees that students "should learn how to think." Students need to think critically about every aspect of their lives.

CRT prepares students to look at issues that drive real-world situations.

Critical thinking is one of the most useful skills anyone can acquire. In my opinion, CRT could also stand for "Critics Rejecting Truth."

Through studying our history, we learn how past societies, systems, governments, cultures and technologies were built. We can study how people prospered and how they adapted.

Our rich history helps us to understand where we are today. the narrative you tell yourself becomes your identity.

As a people we are no better off financially than we were in 1865. When we were emancipated after slavery; according to Claude Anderson in his book, Black Labor/White Wealth, Following the Civil War, we had 1/2 of 1% of the wealth in the United States. Today, we have still have 1/2 of 1% of the wealth.

Gaps in wealth between Black and White households reveals the effects of inequality and discrimination, as well as differences in power and opportunity that can be traced back to this nation's inception and the legacy of slavery.

Forced integration, the civil rights movement was a mistake.

Other groups gained more than we did. We should have been fighting for our human rights, economic rights and reparations.

We lost our businesses, sense of community and our moral compass.

We are now supporting immigrants and anybody else

Neckbonology Two Point Oh!

My wife and I haven't played Scrabble in over a year. That's because she says I cheat.

No, not by miscalculating the score, slipping in an extra letter, or hypnotizing her into believing fat meat 'ain't greasy.'

Instead, she thinks I invent words that can't be verified, even though she's familiar with them.

Actually, that's not entirely true either. While I frequently use words that may not be found in Webster's Dictionary, they are, generally, of everyday use in the African American community lexicon.

For example, there's the verb 'fitna.' As in, 'I'm fitna go to the store.'

Or adding a second did (ed) at the end of a word. Like. I likeded.

Be honest: how often have you heard a brother or sister add the 'did' or extra 'ed' at the end of a word?

According to an African Proverb, "It takes a village to raise a child." I was blessed to have a village that consisted of three extraordinary women: my mother, my maternal grandmother, and my aunt.

These women were all accomplished in many ways that, in the natural realm, seemed impossible. Whatever the situation they always led with grace and integrity.

My grandmother lived a long and amazing life, 1897-1995. She instilled in her children and grandchildren the wisdom to acknowledge the sacrifices made by our ancestors who were denied access to formal education, and to honor their memories through the completion of education beyond high school.

We were also taught the importance of voting and to always remember that many gave their lives for the right to vote.

My grandmother was a business woman, an equestrian (a lover and rider of horses), a land owner, and the owner of a home that sat on a large corner lot in Memphis, Tennessee.

On this lot my grandmother had multiple fruit trees and a large garden. This was no small feat to be a homeowner as an African American woman in the 1950's.

My mother was an extraordinary woman in her own right. In high school, chemistry was her favorite class and she was a proud member of the Chemistry Club.

My mother had the heart of a servant and served in multiple

Now, you might agree with my wife and say 'poor grammar' should not count.

But then again, one of my favorite college courses was Black English, as taught by my favorite instructor, the late Virginia Stamper.

She revealed the African origins of words that deserve a compromise. The absence of the 't' sound in some West African languages was solved with its replacement—'d.' That's why you'll hear tribal members saying dis and dat instead of this and that.

Black English and Ebonics is different from merely adding a different meaning to a word---homophones--which is what 'some' African Americans have tried to do with the adjective/noun/epithet 'nigger.' Which is different from 'nigga,' or the ridiculous ellipsis 'n-word.'

In fact, given that it's Black History Month, let's pause for a few minutes to provide my unique definitions or alternate meanings of three words that fit (not fitna) that profile.

The first word isn't a revised meaning, but more so a clarification: 'government.'

Several years ago, I realized we needed to redefine the word 'public' because it was incorrectly applied or restricted to traditional tax-supported schools.

The propaganda machine convinced the gullible 'public' that only schools falling under the tax-supported domain they controlled were public schools.

Public schools were a monopoly and the only prescribed venue for poor children, even if they were not good enough for middle-class families, including teachers and staff.

That paradigm ended in 1990 when the late Polly Williams' Milwaukee Parental School Choice program became a reality.

A public school was no longer exclusively operated by MPS (Milwaukee 'Public' Schools), but any entity that receives public (tax) monies and

WE CELEBRATE BLACK HISTORY

Our Black publications have been telling stories for years about historical giants such as Dr. William Drew, who pioneered a method for preserving blood plasma.

Remember George Washington Carver? He discovered hundreds of uses for the peanut and sweet potato. And Benjamin Banneker helped establish the boundaries of Washington, DC.

We have heralded the victories of Frederick Douglass and Fannie Lou Hammer, and recently reflected upon the lives of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Congressman John Lewis, Cicely Tyson, and Sidney Poitier. We celebrate the firsts of President Barack Obama and Vice President Kamala Harris. Each history-maker is a study in change, commitment, and courage. Who makes your list?

BLACK HISTORY CELEBRATES SUCCESSES, INSPIRES NEW ACHIEVEMENTS

Black History Month encourages us to trace the journeys of prominent Black Americans. On television we see a growing interest in ancestry programs. Dr. Henry Louis Gates has helped many notables find their ancestors. To learn more about your ancestry, consider becoming ONE IN A MILLION with the All of Us Research Program.

All of Us Pastoral Champion, Reverend Marilyn Miller, President of Leading for Racial Equality, LLC, decided to join All of Us because of the work of Pastor Teresa Thomas-Boyd. She stated, "As we age, we reflect upon leaving a legacy. Few of us are rich or famous but we want to make a difference. I want to do everything I can to give my children and grandchildren the family health history that will help them live well. I am honored to offer a part of myself so that my people can improve health and wellness for the seven generations to come and beyond."

ultimate consumers, not producers.

Currently, a dollar circulates 1/2 a day in the African American community, compared to 20 days in a Jewish community and 30 days in an Asian community.

There is a debate over how to solve the problem of low-dollar circulation in Black communities.

While reinvesting money by shopping in Black businesses can help, it may not be enough. Many Black businesses get their products from White-owned or foreign-owned companies. Commercial and the media have our communities brainwashed.

Tom Burrell poses the questions, in his book, Brainwashed, telling Black America to look in the mirror and ask, "Why, more than 150 years after the Emancipation Proclamation, so many of us still think like slaves?"

We aren't taught entrepreneurship or self-sufficiency. An emerging solution for reinvesting in Black communities is Black-owned banks.

Efforts by Black Americans to build wealth can be traced back throughout American history.

But these efforts have been impeded in so many ways, beginning with the Congressional mismanagement of the Freedman's Savings Bank (which left 61,144 depositors with losses of nearly $3 million in 1874).

My own great-grandmother, Adeline Higgins Wallace, was a depositor in 1871 made me proud. She must have figured out that we wouldn't be getting our forty acres and a mule.

It's a shame that her hard-earned money was stolen by the very institution she trusted.

This was preceded by events like the New York City Draft Riot (1863) and followed by the Atlanta Race Riot (1906),

The East St. Louis Massacre (1917), Chicago Race Riots

(1919), Washington, D.C. Race Riots (1919), Knoxville, Tennessee Race Riots (1919), "Bloody Summer", Greenwood, Tulsa, Oklahoma "Black Wall Street" (May 31 – June 1, 1921), Rosewood Massacre (1923) and the massacres and genocides of countless other thriving Black communities.

Another way to solve our economic problems is to unite. Of the diaspora, there are 16 million people in North America, 112.65 million in Latin America, 13.56 million in the Caribbean and 3.51 million in Europe with an economic force worth trillions.

More than half of the world's population growth will be in Africa by 2050. What a difference it would make if we knew our true history.

We could work together to rebuild our countries and communities. With a fresh vision and practice centered around the first two principles of Maat, truth and justice.

What a difference it would make eliminating the lies. Enough with the empty symbolic gestures, such as Juneteenth Day, Maya Angelou on the quarter or a "Blackish" woman on the Supreme Court.

Repeating the same old pattern of split loyalties. What we need is economic empowerment, tangibles, the ballot, reparations! We need to demand what we are due!

The Asian and the European do not separate themselves from their histories.

So, neither should Africans in the diaspora separate themselves from African history. We are our ancestors.

The Asian and Native Americans did not ask for reparations, it was given to them. America should free itself from guilt.

The Sankofa Bird teaches us that we must look back to move forward. At the same time, plant the seed for the generations that come after us.

This includes everyone. Our scholars have dedicated their lives researching and revealing the truth of who we are. We must teach our history in our homes, churches, study groups and schools.

We cannot rely on anyone but ourselves to teach our children. We can't depend on the people who stole our history to acknowledge the truth without some pushback.

My final statement is that Black history is indisputably important. According to John Henrik Clarke, "History tells a people where they have been and what they have been. It also tells a people where they are and what they are. Most importantly, history tells a people where they still must go and what they still must be".

We must correct inappropriate behaviors, create strong family units, communities, countries and a better world for our children. As Frederick Douglass said, "It is easier to build a strong child, than to repair broken men."

The good news is that many of us are waking up to our true identity. We realize that our fate is in our own hands.

We also know that knowledge and unity is the answer to our future success. Contrary to the words of George Washington

"We should agree to swear an oath between ourselves to religiously and faithfully teach our children who they really are!" Everyone should know their history.

There must be a spiritual rebirth, a renewing of the mind. We must read, study and tell OUR story so the next generation and the generations after that, will know who they are.

We are divine human beings, and we must honor the divine in ourselves as well as in others.

partial control by the state.

Through that prism, a charter school is a 'public school.'

And if a charter school is defined by its funding source and state (public) regulations, isn't a private institution a public school as well?

If you didn't know, the charter school concept was started by the head of the national teacher's union and was initially restricted to unionized teachers under the governmental umbrella.

Howard Fuller, former superintendent of Milwaukee Public/Government Schools, is rightfully given credit for charter expansion in Wisconsin. But Fuller is also a strong proponent of school choice, as both are options previously denied to lower-income families and fall within the public domain.

And since private schools participating in the choice program (there is no such thing as a choice school) receive the majority of their funding from tax (our) dollars, isn't it also a 'public' school?

So how do you differentiate?

Easy. I distinguish that schools controlled by the MPS board of directors are, in fact, government 'operated' schools.

'Government' doesn't equate to being inferior or corrupt, even though Republicans and Libertarians believe we would be better off with less government intervention, while Democrats believe more is better.

Of course, the Right draws the line at individual liberties and what happens behind closed doors, while the Left leans more toward personal freedoms (which are not free). In other words, it's an absentee father vs. the nanny state--- sending your children to the school of your choice or restricting them to a monopoly.

My 'redefinition/clarification gets to the heart of another of my philosophical wish list: re-

Actor Jamie Foxx as the character 'Wanda Wayne' on the 90s show 'In Living Color' She could be the photo that accompanies the definition of a neckbone. placing a public school system with a system of public schools.

The school choice debate has essentially been about controlling the definition and the dollars vs. what's best for the children.

My second word is 'Negrocracy.'

And I'll be honest. I did not invent the term. It grew out of a conversation with Dr. Bill Rogers, and I immediately trademarked and claimed it as my own. Simply put, the Negrocracy is the Black establishment, the status quo.

I admit I've often attached a negative slant to the term, implying members are out of touch, past their primes, or myopic. But that's not entirely true.

I position the NAACP as a defining organization, and it's not just because the organization is seemingly controlled by the Democratic Party, unions, and liberal missionaries. But because the oldest civil rights organization has put those entities' platforms before the (Colored) people.

(Actually, I should probably explain my definition of 'missionary' as well, even though it's not among the top three.

As I generally use it, a missionary is a White liberal who knows what's best for Black America. They want to pick our leaders, tell us who to vote for, and more often than not, run the social service organizations that pacify instead of empowering.

FIRST PERSON: A CULTURAL JOURNEY LEADING TO A LIFE OF SERVICE

ministries in church. My mother provided care for more people than I can count that were sick in their homes. My mother served in a quiet manner and referred to her service as her "Ministry" a term that I did not really understand until many years later.

My aunt was an extraordinary woman in that she believed there was nothing she could not accomplish as she quoted my grandmother: "Nothing beats a failure but a try!" My aunt worked in factories and bakeries for most of her career.

However she lived a life that defied her employment status. My aunt travelled to Israel, loved fashion, fine dining, and for numerous years prepared many delicious meals in the church kitchen as her calling of service.

In addition, like the other two extraordinary women, my aunt could balance her checkbook in her head to the penny.

Over the years our home was a place of refuge for many family members and family through relationship, for those who may have been sick, challenged in their finances and/or temporarily unable to secure housing. Our home was not an unusually large home, however the hearts of the three extraordinary women were large beyond measure!

There were other relatives that would come from various states and stay with us over the summer months while working to earn money for college expenses. When I think back over those years, I realize that the spirit of community, volunteering, sharing, and caring about people not only in your family, but in the community became a part of my DNA.

I am grateful for my village, life lessons, the spirit of giving, and serving the community that I continue to embrace in my professional and personal life.

"Instead, when I note a Neckbone is wearing make-up, or in the soul food vernacular, hot sauce, it is indeed a reference to our tribal sisters. But Neckbone is gender-neutral. The sperm donors who proudly make, but don't raise their children, are Neckbones."

Missionaries are poverty pimps, working hand in glove with the Democratic Party to hand feed us, provide and cash the voucher checks, and then erect barriers so we can't live among them.

The Negrocracy gave them the keys to the Freedom Bus, but now, paradoxically, they can't figure out why they keep passing the same street signs over and over again.

Hint: it's because they are driving us in circles since they have a vested interest in keeping us on the poverty plantation.

Last but certainly not least is my favorite, most comprehensive, and often misunderstood invented adjective/noun/verb: 'Neckbone.' And I'm not talking about the meat. Well, actually, I am.

Visualize a neckbone. It has ragged edges like shark teeth and deep grooves where the most favorable meat rests.

You have to suck or slurp out the meat in between the ridges, hoping you don't also bite into gristle or fat, both of which will either add unnecessary pounds, raise your blood pressure, or if eaten too often, send you to the hospital, if not the morgue.

Boiled, baked, or stewed, neckbones (or at least they did) give off a soul food aroma that my father, born in the backwoods of Georgia, said was a cure for ED.

But what smells good to you doesn't mean it's good for you.

Several decades ago, I wrote a column with the headline 'Neckbonology 101.'

At the time, I had replaced the n-word (nigger) with Neckbone since I detested the former.

Some thought I had applied the new epithet solely to women since it was the conduct of a sister that prompted my 'name-calling.'

But that wasn't the case.

Even though the term appropriately applied to the twin siblings who punched and then shot a George Webb Restaurant employee in the face last week because he supposedly shorted them on a take-out hamburger. Those Neckbones will spend the next quarter-century in jail trying to remember what neck-bones smell like.

Instead, when I note a Neckbone is wearing make-up, or in the soul food vernacular, hot sauce, it is indeed a reference to our tribal sisters.

But Neckbone is gender-neutral. The sperm donors who proudly make, but don't raise their children, are Neckbones.

As are the terrorists who hold our community hostage, the men who abuse their mates, and the punks who throw garbage out their car windows while recklessly driving through our streets. Likewise, for the parents who don't have enough time to attend a parent/teacher conference and who share a joint with their 14-year-old child.

Some conduct among African Americans is the byproduct of systemic racism, just as the inability of an 18-year-old high school senior to read is the byproduct of educracy control by the state. But you don't need 20/20 vision to see the difference.

Ghetto, another word that has taken on a different meaning since Jews left urban America, fits that profile. We used to refer to 'being country,' 'illiterate' or 'Hoodish' as being 'Mississippi.' But now we simply say, 'Ghetto.' As in you can take the person out of the ghetto, but it's much harder to take the 'ghetto' out of them.

Which is where I'll leave this column---discourse, homily, dissertation. In other words, Signifiyin', which is another word for....

Hotep.
