HAPPY EASTER!

What does Easter/Resurrection Sunday mean to you?

By Pastor Walter Owens

Pastor Owens

Easter, also known as 'Resurrection Sunday,' is the annual celebration of Christ's Rebirth to life after His crucifixion and death.

The word Easter is related to the word east, which points us to the sunrise, new beginnings, and new days.

What is the meaning of Easter to a 'New Beginning'? I just love when the Lord stated "this is the day that I made for you to rejoice in."

As we are celebrating Easter, please allow Jesus to be a part of it. Let this day become a new and better relationship with Christ and our Families ending all bad memories.

Resurrection Sunday is the opportunity for us to enjoy life, breathe freely, and think about the goodness of the Lord. Be grateful for this beautiful day.

For some, Easter is the time to dye eggs, hide them, and send their children in search of them. This year let's teach our children how to search for our Lord and Savior.

When you go out this week and purchase a new outfit for yourself and the kids, find a place for you to worship with the Lord.

On this holy day, let Resurrection, Sunday be an example for your children. Let us all celebrate what God has done for us.

This Sunday is for all of us to focus on the true meaning of Easter. Know that Jesus had a passion for our life.

The word passion is from the Latin (pati) which simply means "to endure" or "suffer." The book of Mathew-26:36 states when Jesus came with them to a place called Gethsemane

As children Oliver, Bella and Madison look on, and wife Dominique holds the bible, Cavalier Johnson took the oath of office to become the first elected African American to be mayor of Milwaukee, Wednesday.

First Black MKE Mayor Takes the Oath of Office!

History was made (again) Wednesday, April 13 at the Harley Davidson Museum, located on Canal Street, with the Inauguration of Mayor Cavalier Johnson.

The auditorium on the museum campus was packed with notables such as U. S. Senator Tammy Baldwin, Gov. Tony Evers, U.S. Congresswoman Gwen Moore, and Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley.

Bishop Sedgwick Daniels gave the invocation, and the mayor's son led the Pledge of Allegiance. The mayor's wife, Dominique Johnson, introduced 'his honor, the mayor.'

The gospel group 'Praise Motivated' put a nice touch on the 'National Anthem' and the Black National Anthem, 'Lift Every Voice and Sing.'

The new Mayor touched on all the things he wants to see done in the city, from Infrastructure repair to crime prevention. Read Mayor Johnson's entire inauguration speech on page five.

"I strongly believe the most important ingredient needed for neighborhood stability, safety, and hope is a strong economy. That means good jobs, good pay, and increased opportunity."

From Mayor Cavalier Johnson's inaugural speech.

As the American population becomes more diverse, so does the population of school-aged children.

According to 2020 data from the U.S. Census Bureau, 51% of students are not white. In comparison, non-White teachers account for less than 30% of teachers nationally.

The teacher diversity gap—the percentage point difference between the share of students that are non-White and the share of teachers that are non-White—is nearly 22 percentage points.

For example, 12.5% of students in the U.S. are African American, but only 9.6% of teachers are.

This finding shows that teacher diversity is not keeping up with the diversity of students, and this diversity gap between students and teachers continues to widen.

In Milwaukee, the analysis found in the metro area of Wisconsin's largest city, that 16.8% of teachers are non-White, while 51.3% of students are non-White.

Here is a summary of the data for the Milwaukee-Waukesha-West Allis, WI metro area:

- Percentage of teachers that are non-white: 16.8%

REPORT: Less than eighteen percent of MKE teachers are 'non-White,' below U.S. average

- Percentage of students that are non-White: 51.3%

- Teacher diversity gap (percentage points): 34.5

- Total non-White teachers: 4,779

- Total non-White students: 130,822

For reference, here are the statistics for the entire United States:

- Percentage of teachers that are non-White: 29.5%

- Percentage of students that are non-White: 51.1%

- Teacher diversity gap (percentage points): 21.7

- Total non-White teachers: 1,856,728

- Total non-White students:

New York Lt. Gov. Brian Benjamin, whose seven months in that role has been overshadowed by probes into a previous campaign, was arrested Tuesday in a federal corruption investigation. He has since resigned. The U.S. Attorney's office said Benjamin was arrested for alleged bribery, wire fraud and falsifying of records. Benjamin, formerly a state senator from Harlem, joined Gov. Kathy Hochul's administration in September. She chose him to fill her former job two weeks after becoming governor when former Gov. Andrew Cuomo resigned over sexual harassment allegations. But just over two months later, a real estate developer who steered

The footage shows Pinkett Smith looking at her husband as he yelled at Rock, "Keep my wife's name out your f--- mouth."

Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren and policy advocates recently told the Grio.com that $50,000 debt forgiveness could close the racial wealth gap and relieve millions of Black borrowers. The debate over canceling student loan debt is getting louder as an impasse continues in Washington about how many thousands of dollars in student debt to cancel. But there are also arguments that debt forgiveness could change the financial outlook for Black borrowers, particularly Black women. PROMISE MADE PROMISE KEPT

The Democratic National Committee Congratulates The Honorable Ketanji Brown Jackson

President Biden, Vice President Harris, and Democrats are keeping their promises to the Black community because Black voices matter and they make the difference.

Our president helped get America back to work, provided funding to support families and small businesses, got kids back to school, and made historic investments in HBCUs.

And he's creating a government that looks like us...

- ✓ He appointed more Black women judges to the U.S. Court of Appeals than any other president.
- ✓ He placed Black men at the helm of our country's Defense Department and Environmental Protection Agency, and in senior advisor positions in the West Wing.
- ✓ And he nominated the FIRST Black female U.S. Supreme Court justice – Ketanji Brown Jackson.

Judge Jackson has exceptional credentials, impeccable character, and an unwavering dedication to the rule of law, the Constitution, and we the people. She has outstanding qualifications to sit on the Supreme Court.

Republicans disrespectfully tried to block her at every turn, and they continue to stand in the way of progress for the American people. But for Democrats, voters are valued, and a promise made is a promise kept.

Congratulations to the Honorable Ketanji Brown Jackson on her historic confirmation!

and said to his disciples, sit here while I go and pray over there.”

Then, the Lord said to them “my soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even to death. Stay here and watch with me.” There will be a time on this Easter Sunday where the enemy will come to bring betrayal and try to arrest you. Be very careful who you allow at your table.

Mathew 26-21:23 states “now as they were eating Jesus said assuredly, I say to you, one will betray me.”

All were exceedingly sorrowful and each of them began to say to him, “Lord is it I?” Jesus answered and said, “He who dipped his hand with me in the dish will betray me.”

If there is anything I would love for you to receive this Resurrection Sunday is to please be watchful and keep your faith in Christ. If there is any doubt just know how much Jesus loves YOU.

Some may be asking, “Why do you say Jesus loves me?” You must remember when Jesus gave his only begotten son, he experienced genuine excruciating pain and suffering to pay for all of our sins. That’s how I can confidently say that Jesus loves us all.

He has risen and we need to rise up and follow Him!!!

BIBLICAL COUNSELING FOR TODAY'S CHRISTIAN FAMILY

By Rev. Judith T. Lester, B.Min., M.Th.

"He is not here; he has risen! Remember how he told you, while he was still with you in Galilee: 'The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, be crucified and on the third day be raised again.'"

-Luke 24:6-7

Jesus died in Jerusalem when the procurator of Judea was Pontius Pilate; at the same time Caiaphas was the high priest (see John 11:49; 18:13) and Herod Antipas was the tetrarch of Galilee and Perea (Luke 23:7ff). A "tetrarch" in Greco-Roman antiquity, is the ruler of a principality; originally the ruler of one-quarter of a region or province.

After the death of Herod, the Great, his realm was shared among his three sons: the chief part, including Judaea, Samaria, fell to Archelaus; Philip received the northeast of the realm and was called tetrarch; and Galilee was given to

RELIGION

An Easter Meditation: JESUS IS RISEN!

Luke 24:1-12

Herod Antipas, who also was called tetrarch. (Source: Britannica Encyclopedia).

All four gospels attest to the importance of the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus and all four gospels record the resurrection and the women at the tomb. (See Matthew 28:1-8; Mark 16:1-8; Luke 24:1-12 and John 20:1-13.)

On the third day after Jesus' death, the women came to Jesus' tomb with spices to anoint Jesus' body.

The women were stunned to see the stone in front of Jesus' tomb had been rolled away.

Upon entering, they realized that Jesus' body was not there. While wondering the meaning of these things, there was an angelic visitation in the form of two men who appeared.

Angelic visitations in Scripture alert the reader to a profound event taking place in Scripture.

Frightened, the women bowed down to the ground, but the angelic men asked them why they were looking for the living among the dead.

In Scripture, people often reacted with fear to the unknown or unfamiliar.

The angelic beings confirmed the story that Jesus had risen: "He is not here; he has risen! Remember how he told you, while he was still with you in Galilee..." (Luke 24:6.)

When the women returned from the tomb, they reported Jesus' resurrection to the disciples (minus Judas who had hung himself, see Matthew 27:3-5), of what had happened.

After hearing the extraordinary events that took place at the tomb, the disciples did not believe the women and thought the women's story was something they perhaps made up.

Peter, one of the earliest and most prominent disciples of Jesus, ran to the tomb of Jesus and saw the grave clothes that once encircled the body of Jesus lying there.

Peter left the tomb perhaps thinking within himself "what just happened?" The crucifixion of Christ demonstrated God's love and holiness.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ – or the miracle that occurred at Easter, is at the heart of the Christian message and faith.

Reflection: Take time to praise God for the amazing grace of God of offering His Son as our sacrifice and the miracle of His resurrection! Then, pray for opportunities to share the miracle of Jesus' resurrection with someone.

Happy A Happy Easter!!

The gap between Hispanic students and teachers is even wider, with the proportion of Hispanic students (25.5%) more than double that of Hispanic teachers (12.0%).

Minority teachers can benefit minority students in multiple ways.

Research shows that minority students do better in school when they have at least one teacher of the same race.

Minority teachers not only act as role models for minority students, but they also have higher expectations for minority students.

Additionally, minority teachers are likely to have a better cultural understanding of minority students, which experts argue can be beneficial in more effectively connecting and forming relationships with students.

According to research from the Urban Institute, the diversity gap between students and teachers is not because people of color are less likely to choose to become teachers. Instead, it stems from young minority adults being less likely to attend and graduate from college.

While a similar share of Hispanics, Blacks, and White college graduates go on to become teachers, whites are over twice as likely to be college graduates as Blacks or Hispanics.

Teacher diversity is restricted due to the still relatively small pool of diverse college graduates.

On a geographic basis, the share of minority teachers and students varies depending on local demographics.

That said, there is not a strong correlation between the share of non-White teachers and the teacher diversity gap.

For example, the Southwest has the greatest share of non-white teachers and also large diversity gaps.

The Great Plains, Midwest, and New England states generally report lower proportions of non-white teachers, but diversity gaps vary widely.

At the state level, Hawaii boasts the highest share of non-White teachers at nearly 75%.

The student population in Hawaii is even more diverse with non-White students accounting for 89% of all students.

On the other hand, North Dakota has the lowest share of non-white teachers at just 3.6%.

To find the metropolitan areas with the most minority teachers, researchers at Smartest Dollar analyzed the latest data from the U.S. Census Bureau.

The researchers ranked metros according to the percentage of teachers that are non-White.

Researchers also calculated the percentage of students that are non-White, the teacher diversity gap, and the total number of non-White students and teachers.

Only the 100 most populous metro areas were included in the analysis.

The slap seen around the world is a teachable moment about Black men and mental health

By Paula Penebaker

Being a Black man in America often means being your brother's keeper. Yet, when it comes to mental health, many Black men still struggle to tackle this important issue.

Today, this topic is being discussed more openly since actor Will Smith slapped comedian Chris Rock at the Academy Awards. Just moments later, Smith received his first-ever Oscar win, a milestone overshadowed by his earlier confrontation with Rock.

Viewers watched Smith experience a rollercoaster of emotions, including happiness, anger and remorse, within the span of one award show.

Dr. Rahn Bailey, a psychiatrist with the W. Montague Cobb/NMA Health Institute and Department Head of Psychiatry at LSU's School of Medicine, believes this moment highlights the mental health struggles many Black men are grappling with in America.

"Part of the issue is that Black men are not respected and valued at the same level as some other human beings in our society," Dr. Bailey said.

"I don't think that would have happened if the comedian was not a Black male. Had he been a woman, I don't think that would have happened. And perhaps had he been a white male, that may not have happened either. It could certainly be those roles are valued more."

Depression remains one of the most common, yet under-recognized and undertreated mental illnesses among Black men, according to the National Institute of Health.

Their mental health is more complex than statistics or clinical diagnoses indicate, as they are forced to balance many unspoken pressures, unrealistic expectations and unfair stereotypes.

"Depression remains one of the most common, yet underrecognized and undertreated mental illnesses among Black men, according to the National Institute of Health. Their mental health is more complex than statistics or clinical diagnoses indicate, as they are forced to balance many unspoken pressures, unrealistic expectations and unfair stereotypes."

"But violence, in any form, does more harm than good 99% of the time — other than self-defense," Dr. Bailey said. "And we should be very cautious, initially, when we quickly run to the defense of violence."

The COVID-19 pandemic has only made matters worse. People are facing new and challenging realities: working from home, unemployment, virtual schooling, lack of in-person interactions. Mental health, especially for Black men, is more important today than ever before.

"As far as COVID, I think the misinformation our society is exposed to now in the healthcare domain is frightening," Dr. Bailey said. "We have to keep our eye on the ball."

Worrying about COVID-19, coupled with the devastating loss of loved ones, continues to be a mental health stressor.

Whether Black men are on stage, in the board room or on the block, their emotions and state of mind need to be taken seriously. Their mental health matters.

FIRST PERSON

Milwaukee Mayor Cavalier Johnson Inaugural Address Wednesday, April 13, 2022

"Thank you, Dominique. It's your love, your grace and your boundless patience — patience I have tested — that have allowed me to stand on this stage. Yes, with a beautiful family and a smile on my face, I am indebted to you more than you'll ever know. While my name appears in the history books, your name will ring constantly in my heart and mind. My dear, thank you..

Senator Baldwin, Governor Evers, Congresswoman Moore, County Executive Crowley, Chairwoman Nicholson, thank you for the kind words and for sharing this day with me. Bishop Daniels, Makda Fessahaye, Jim Owczarski, and Carolyn Neumann, I so appreciate your contributions to this ceremony.

Today, we open a new chapter in Milwaukee's history. We open it with appreciation of the significance of this moment. This is a generational transition and a departure from Milwaukee's long custom of deriving executive leadership only from men of European background. We are a diverse city. I embrace that diversity and the change that has arrived in Milwaukee.

I am also humbled — humbled by the support voters across Milwaukee have provided. From every district — from every ward — people cast ballots for me. Yes, I will always have a special place in my heart for my now-former aldermanic district and the people who elected and reelected me to the Common Council. Now, I extend my loyalty and appreciation to residents city-wide — from south to north, east to west. I proudly accept my role as Mayor of every corner of our great city.

I am honored to have my family here today. To my wife and my children, Oliver, Bella and Madison, a special thank you. And thanks to so many others who have helped to make my election possible. I see many of you here in the audience, and I want all of you to know how appreciative I am.

To our hosts this morning, Harley Davidson and the Harley Davidson Museum, again, thank you. This company's long history in Milwaukee, and its iconic brand, so closely identified with this city, are reasons I selected this site for my inauguration. There are other reasons, too. We are along a major waterway — and water is why this city was founded here. We are at a location that is neither north nor south; it's at a bridge between the two. And, we are on a parcel of land that was redeveloped, remarkably, from a barren public works yard, transformed to an amazing entertainment and tourist destination.

We will see transformation throughout Milwaukee in the coming years. I'm not talking just about landmarks and high-rise buildings. I'm talking about the addition of good paying jobs, new investments in city neighborhoods, improvements in public infrastructure, and a transformation in spirit — a sense of optimism that we can solve problems, we can build on Milwaukee's quality of life, and we can give our children and grandchildren a future that we will all be proud of.

So, how do we get there? We start with partnerships. The work ahead will be more successful, more productive, when we work together. That means finding common interests between city government and community groups, reinforcing relationships that can advance projects, bringing businesses together to help remedy our biggest challenges. It's that and so much more.

With every major challenge Milwaukee faces, whether it's a matter of safety, a government fiscal issue, or a concern about Milwaukee's children, co-operation is the best path forward.

This is particularly true as we address public safety. No one in Milwaukee wants violence erupting in their neighborhood. No one wants reckless drivers careening through traffic.

The Milwaukee Police Department plays a critical role in making the city safer. I want that department to be sufficiently staffed, and I want officers to be in the community providing effective, respectful and Constitutional community policing.

I also want police officers to know, they are not alone. The city's Office of Violence Prevention joins the work to increase public safety with a focus on prevention and intervention. The criminal justice system, including prosecutors, courts and corrections, must function well. I also expect residents in Milwaukee to realize their roles and take active steps to improve safety.

If we are to make our city safer, we all need to do more. And an excellent example of that is the Milwaukee Fire Department. Yes, they are superb at extinguishing fires, but they have incorporated work to prevent death and damage from fires. They are excellent at responding to medical emergencies, but they are also in the community preventing medical emergencies.

Our Department of Public Works is redesigning streets to constrain reckless driving. We're changing the rules and confiscating unregistered vehicles used by those who brazenly ignore traffic safety.

As much as we would want simple solutions to our public safety challenges, the solutions, in fact, are more complicated. The homicide numbers this year are unacceptably alarming. I have spoken to close family members of murder victims, and I have seen the impacts of killings — the senselessness and finality.

Loss and grief affect people across Milwaukee. I believe that, together, we can reduce homicide deaths. And an important step is to toughen laws to keep guns away from people who should not have them in the first place. We need our partners in state government to work with us to make gun safety a priority.

In some serious crime categories, the trends are improving. Compared to last year, robbery, burglary, and rape are down double-digit percentages in the first months of 2022. Aggravated assaults and car thefts are down, too. Let's build on those trends. If we can reduce these crimes, I am confident we can bring homicide numbers down, too.

I strongly believe the most important ingredient needed for neighborhood stability, safety, and hope is a strong economy. That means good jobs, good pay, and increased opportunity. I want fewer evictions and more homeownership; I want less hunger and more hope; I want a reduction in trauma and an increase in school attendance. All of this can occur with a stronger economy.

City government, itself, is not creating new, well-paying jobs, but we can be a partner. I look at Century City — the area from 27th and Townsend Streets to 35th Street and Capitol Drive — and I see opportunity. Let's work together to create good jobs there. And let's bring new opportunities for workers to Havenwoods, the Menomonee Valley, and around the airport.

With the right private sector proposals, my administration will deploy the financing tools we have to get deals done and make new employment a reality across our city.

Downtown development is wonderful, and I want that to continue. Even so, my priority is investment — buildings and jobs — in city neighborhoods. We have not seen enough of that.

And I will continue my efforts to make sure hard-working people are paid a fair wage. I am not asking the private sector to do anything we, at city government haven't done. Fifteen dollars per hour is a minimum for city workers. It's the minimum wage we insisted Milwaukee Tool pay at its new office at 5th and Michigan Streets. It's what the new, 62-million-dollar Milwaukee Athletic Club is paying, as well. And all employers should be paying at least fifteen dollars an hour. Fair wages — dollars in people's pockets — make our neighborhoods stable. Stability leads to healthier neighborhoods. And, healthier neighborhoods are safer neighborhoods.

All levels of government must be more than plodding bureaucracies. I will not allow that at City Hall. My approach will bring goals, accountability, and results to the work of municipal government. Routinely, I will be out from behind my desk — at city departments and in the field. I am not a micromanager. I am, however, a listener, a planner, and a champion for positive change.

Positive change — I know that's what my colleagues on the Common Council want for Milwaukee, too. I look forward to working with them to make that change happen.

There are many good people working in the ranks of city government. They are knowledgeable and conscientious. I will be bolstering their ranks; as vacancies occur, we are filling them with top-notch additions.

I have very little patience for the dishonest accusations, baseless innuendos, and outright threats leveled at city workers. Whether the targets are health officials dealing with the COVID pandemic or election workers operating with accuracy and integrity, I will vigorously defend them. Disingenuous, politically motivated falsehoods are wrong, and together, we need to stand against such bullying.

As I have pledged, I am taking steps to prevent the impending fiscal problems looming for city government. Milwaukee is extraordinarily constrained when it comes to raising tax revenue.

The Inaugural Address of Mayor Cavalier Johnson

Think about this: when retail prices rise and sales increase, the State of Wisconsin collects more sales tax revenue. When salaries increase and capital gains are realized, the State collects more income tax. In contrast, the City of Milwaukee’s only tax revenue is the property tax which does not bring in more revenue as real estate prices go up. Compounding the problem, State Shared Revenue – a major source of funds to pay for city operations – is stuck at levels from twenty years ago. Milwaukee is not alone, the system for funding local government is broken in Wisconsin. I have heard that from mayors from other parts of the state.

We must have sufficient revenue to pay for the salaries, pensions, equipment, and material needed to provide the basic services our residents expect and deserve.

The only way to solve this problem is to work collaboratively with leaders in Madison to get Milwaukee’s fiscal house in order. I have initiated those discussions, and I am hopeful legislative leaders will join in a solution.

Neighboring municipalities in Milwaukee County and in our adjacent counties know, this city’s vibrancy in important to them. When our economy is strong, our city is safe, and quality of life is high, the entire region benefits. Wisconsin benefits.

Without this city, there’s no Major League Baseball in Wisconsin, and no NBA world champion Bucks. Think of this: We may live in a politically competitive purple state, but there is no way the national Republican party would even consider a convention in Wisconsin without Milwaukee. Milwaukee is good for the state, economically and culturally. Our city is a tremendous value-added for the entire state of Wisconsin.

I was raised in Milwaukee neighborhoods with some of the deepest challenges that exist here. My family moved frequently; we were far from wealthy; crime and violence were never far away; for most of my early education, it was a different school each year.

What I had was people who cared. It was my father who told me early on to “get off the block.” At first, I thought that advice was literal – that I needed to travel a couple of blocks away. But as I got older I understood, he was speaking figuratively, that I needed to see and experience more. I followed that advice.

And I followed my mother’s advice; “Never give up,” she said. I had guidance from people at the YMCA who gave me opportunities and instilled a passion for service. That’s where Y president Jack Lund encouraged me not to chase dollars, but, instead, to chase purpose in life. That’s where my friend Victor showed me that wherever you’re from, however you look or speak, we can come together.
