BRONZEVILLE SLEEPOVER FOR EDUCATION

State Senator Lena Taylor (second from left next to activist Tracey Dent) was joined by volunteers handing out book bags during the recent Bronzeville Sleepover for Education. The event took place on the corner of MLK Dr. and North Ave. in front of Pete's Fruit Market. School supplies were donated and will go directly to a Milwaukee Public School in need. Monetary donations were also accepted.

ASHANTI HAMILTON

PICKED TO BE THE NEW DIRECTOR OF CITY'S OFFICE OF VIOLENCE PREVENTION

Amidst a tsunami of gun violence in the streets of Milwaukee that is reaching historic proportions, alderman and former Common Council President Ashanti Hamilton has been chosen to lead the embattled Office of Violence Prevention (OVP).

Mayor Cavalier Johnson recently made the selection after firing Arnitta Holliman from the position for the office's lack of effectiveness. She had been the target of mounting criticism for the rise in homicides this year, particularly in the city's Black community.

So far this year, at least 140 people have died due to violence—the majority a result of gun violence—a 33% increase from this same period last year.

Holliman was appointed OVP director by former Mayor Tom Barrett in 2021, succeeding Reggie Moore. Created in 2008 and housed within the city's Health Department, the office has grown from a one person operation focusing on gun policy issues, to a staff of 15 and a budget of over $4 million. It coordinates community-based organizations and efforts addressing the root causes of violence.

Beginning in 2016, Moore concentrated on addressing gun violence as a health issue, focusing on family violence, youth programming and addressing trauma to stop cycles of violence.

Johnson's choice of Hamilton has been met with 'some' criticism given his lack of experience as an administrator, although his predecessors didn't have experience in that area either.

Some of have suggested the appointment was politically motivated in that Hamilton didn't support Johnson in his bid for mayor. Several Black leaders expressed concern that Hamilton's selection will leave a void on the council that will be impossible to fill.

But the mayor has countered the criticism by pointing to Hamilton's leadership as common council president, his connection with city residents, his law degree and creation of "Safe Zones" in 2015, an initiative that relied on local 'ambassadors,' residents who were identified as leaders or having strong influence in their neighborhoods.

It was an early example of Milwaukee supporting residents who were trying to de-escalate and mediate disputes.

However, the effort 'fizzled' within a year amid funding problems and questions about whether the residents had received evidence-based training.

HARAMBEE BACK-TO-SCHOOL BLOCK PARTY

Wright Street, from 6th to Vel Phillips Avenue, was the site for the Harambee Back-to-School Block Party last weekend. Children, youth and the young-at-heart enjoyed food, music, played games, took pony rides, and received book bags, school supplies, and books. The event was sponsored by Northcott Neighborhood House, Bader Philanthropies, Dr. MLK Center, the King Advisory Inc., and Bronzeville Week event organizers.

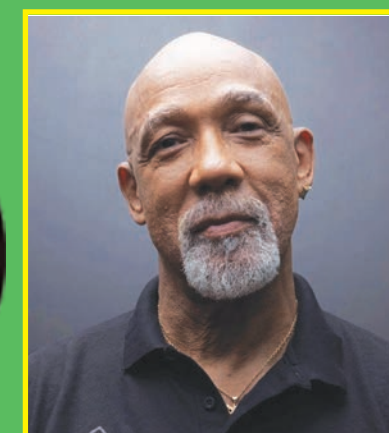

CELEBRATING NATIONAL HEALTH CENTER WEEK

Outreach Community Health Centers celebrated National Health Center Week recently with its Annual Health and Resource Fair. Over 500 adults and children participated in family activities and received book bags and school supplies, free fresh produce, health screenings and resource information.

Sam Gooden, founding member of The Impressions, dies at 87

NASHVILLE— Sam Gooden, one of the original members of the Chicago soul group The Impressions and a member of the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame, has died. He was 87.

His daughter, Gina Griffin, said Gooden died Thursday, a month shy of his 88th birthday, in his hometown of Chattanooga, Tennessee, surrounded by his family. His death was first reported by WRCB-TV in Chattanooga.

The Impressions formed in the 1950s after Gooden and brothers Richard and Arthur Brooks met Curtis Mayfield and Jerry Butler in Chicago. Butler sang baritone lead on their breakthrough record in 1958, the classic ballad “For Your Precious Love,” although many of their hits featured Mayfield’s tenor, with Gooden singing bass behind him.

The Impressions remained a top group in the 1960s, known for their gospel-styled harmonies and socially conscious songs. Mayfield helped write many of their hits, including the widely covered “People Get Ready,” along with “Gypsy Woman,” “Keep on Pushing,” “It’s All Right” and “We’re A Winner.”

They were inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame in 1991. Seven years later, “People Get Ready” was voted into the Grammy

Alderman tapped to head OVP

During a news conference announcing the selection of Hamilton, Johnson said the alderman knows Milwaukee residents and those most impacted by violence and is dedicated to making a positive difference.

“He understands the need for results,” said Johnson, who declined to answer questions related to Holliman’s firing.

At the news conference, Hamilton noted his commitment to violence prevention while at city hall by sponsoring, leading and creating programs within the OVP.

“We do understand the statistics reflecting the high murder rate the city of Milwaukee is facing right now,” said Hamilton.

“Violence is a public health issue, and our approaches to solving violence in our community has to continue with that approach.”

Hamilton, who has been on the council since 2004 representing the first aldermanic district, will formally resign his office later this month to assume his new position as program director of OVP.

Hamilton’s departure will leave the council with four vacancies.

The other vacant seats belonged to Johnson, Nik Kovac

(who is now Johnson’s budget director), and Chantia Lewis (who was removed from office as part of a plea deal related to misconduct in office). Elections for two of those three seats will be on the November ballot. Lewis’ seat will reportedly be contested in April of 2023.

Dr. Anthony Fauci encourages Black Americans to get soon-to-come updated booster amid COVID-19 surge!

By Gerren Keith Gaynor, courtesy of theGrio.com

Dr. Anthony Fauci, the chief medical advisor to President Joe Biden, is encouraging Black Americans to get the updated booster when it becomes available as the country endures a summer surge and as COVID-19 racial disparities persist two and half years into the pandemic.

In a sit-down interview with theGrio, Dr. Fauci, who is also the director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said “unfortunately” Black Americans continue to experience disproportionate shares of COVID-19 infection rates, severe health outcomes and deaths compared with white Americans.

Two factors that contribute to this disparity, Fauci pointed out, are exposure because of the type of jobs generally occupied by Black Americans and underlying health conditions that become more severe when exposed to COVID-19.

“African Americans — as a group — generally are employed in jobs that put them out into society, in contact with individuals where the risk of getting infected is greater than someone who can actually do their job behind a computer screen or in front of a zoom,” Fauci told theGrio.

Once exposed, many Black Americans who have underlying health conditions like diabetes, hypertension, obesity, chronic lung disease and kidney disease, among others, are at risk of severe outcomes. “When you look at the relative risk of having a severe outcome — if in fact, you get infected — it disproportionately is against the brown and Black populations,” said Fauci.

Black people should be especially concerned now, as Dr. Fauci notes that the United States is experiencing a “summer surge.”

“If you look at the infection rate now as late into the summer as mid-August, we’re still seeing well over 100,000 documented cases every day,” Fauci said.

“And since so many people get infected and get the home test and never report that they’re infected, the actual number of infections is probably multifold, more than just 100,000 a day.”

What’s more, he said, is that COVID-19 deaths have remained around 400 per day for months — an occurrence he described as “very disturbing.”

“We would have hoped that as we got into the summer, the number of hospitalizations, deaths and overall infections were dramatically diminished, and they haven’t,” he explained.

As the nation enters the fall season with the expectation of an even riskier fall surge, Fauci said there is hope for those who wish to remain protected from the virus as the Food and Drug Administration is expected to authorize an updated booster shot, known as the bivalent BA.5 vaccine. It will more closely match the circulating Omicron variants of COVID-19. The chief medical officer said the new booster could be made available as soon as mid-September.

“If the African-American population or anybody ... want to diminish their risk of infection and severe disease, stay heads up for the availability of this updated bivalent BA.5 vaccine,” said Fauci.

For those who may wonder, “when will the pandemic be over?” Alas, Fauci said COVID-19 is a virus that will never be eradicated because of its ability to change “very rapidly.” To date, he said there has only been one virus to be eliminated in the history of public health: smallpox. “It’s pretty stable when you get infected or vaccinated. The protection is measured in decades and perhaps even for a lifetime.”

Other viruses that have been essentially eradicated, at least in the United States, are measles and polio — both of which Fauci noted, like smallpox, don’t change very much. “You don’t get a lot of different variants. And when you get infected and/or vaccinated, protection lasts — again — decades and perhaps a lifetime.” But Fauci stressed, “that’s diametrically opposite from what you see with COVID.”

Though Fauci believes that public health officials will likely never be able to eliminate COVID-19 and all its variants, he said there is hope to decrease infections to such a low level in society that we reach a population immunity and the virus “doesn’t have a significant impact on our lifestyle the way COVID has over the last two and a half years.” The goal is also to reach a point where those who are infected with COVID-19 only experience mild illness.

Combined with that goal, Fauci said, is to see COVID-related death rates reach a “very, very low” level and to see an uptick in vaccination rates. “If we get to that point, it will be at such a low level [that] it would not dominate us the way it is right now,” he said.

Supervisor Martin Applauds Arrival of 73 New Clean Diesel Buses

Praises hard work of local and federal leaders

Milwaukee County Supervisor Felesia A. Martin praised the announcement that Milwaukee County Transit System (MCTS) is continuing to modernize public transit in Milwaukee County by adding 73 new clean diesel buses.

Hall of Fame.

Mayfield left the group in 1970 for a solo career, although he continued to write and help produce for The Impressions. Gooden and fellow Chattanooga Fred Cash continued to sing as The Impressions along with other lead singers, including Leroy Hutson. They toured until 2018.

“These new clean diesel buses will play a key role in improving air quality for Milwaukee County residents and aligns directly with our goal of becoming the healthiest county in Wisconsin,” said Supervisor Martin.

All 334 buses in the MCTS fleet are now clean diesel, resulting in more reliable rides, reduced emissions, and improved health outcomes for residents.

The 73 new clean diesel buses are designed to comply with all federal emission regulations.

In comparison to the outdated vehicles they will be replacing, the new buses are specially designed to remove hazardous materials from exhaust emissions.

This improvement will reduce the exposure of Milwaukee County residents to particulate pollution and other harmful toxins in the air.

Investment by MCTS in new clean diesel buses was made possible due to a combination of funding sources.

Supervisor Martin celebrated the collaboration of federal and local leaders in securing formula grants.

“This would not have happened without the hard work of U.S. Senator Tammy Baldwin, Congresswoman Gwen Moore, and the Southeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission,” said Supervisor Martin. “We are grateful for their dedication to this effort.”

The 73 new clean diesel buses will join the MCTS fleet and begin serving riders by this Autumn.

Feedback from 'the Signified'

Every once-in-a while, a column will spark an unusual volume of feedback.

With a fan base in the millions (not including my intergalactic readers), it is hard for me to respond to everyone. However, I make an exception for those who email or lambast me on social media.

My recent two-part series on 'fiscal year' thoughts provided such an opportunity.

Fortunately, most criticism is generally borne out of a misunderstanding or misinterpretation of my writing style. I am known to be blunt, frequently sarcastic, and generally cynical and sardonic, which is a result of my lifetime working on the plantation with slaves whom Harriet Tubman would've left behind.

One reader (actually several over the last few months) took issue with my frequent use of uncommon (big) words, or those with more than three syllables. A 'friend' accused me of trying to show off or look down at illiterate or otherwise uneducated Black folks.

Let me put that theory to rest once and for all: I am a high school dropout who fought to overcome my educational deficits through personal study.

I learned a precious lesson while in the military when I excelled in a technical school at a base in Norfolk, VA. I was in the top 5% of my class when I discovered I didn't have a high school diploma. I was reassigned even though I was at the top of my class.

I vowed ignorance would never be the roadblock, so I began reading everything I could get a hold of—at one point reading most books in a small library.

As a result, four years later, I was admitted to UW-Milwaukee, and the rest is history.

I also learned that education (knowledge) is a lifelong process. So even as a sub-chief (I'm old and have experiences and wisdom to share), I always try to improve myself, using this column as homework.

Every week I research new words and find a way to use them in 'Signifyin'.

This week I added the word 'dimorphic.'

Look it up, or figure it out from the website Q&A where I discovered it: 'are Black men more dimorphic than White men?'

That's worthy of exploration. But I digress. The following are some of the questions and comments I received about my columns. If you didn't read them, you could visit Milwaukeecommunityjournal.com, Signifyin' archives:

Female reader: 'I don't know if your 'statement' about linking abortion to a chicken egg is insulting, ignorant, or just stupid. I hope you were being facetious....'

Nope...I wasn't. A young person asked me what a fetus was, and I said to envision a fresh chicken egg. If you look closely, that red dot is the heart.

Another reader named Tasha was upset about my revealing statistical data showing the limited possibility of sisters with two or more children by two or more men ever marrying.

Maybe my being a product of a different era when we had a real community taints my worldview.

But, I believe the institution of marriage is a cornerstone of our cultural foundation. Today's 'normal' not only 'Signifies' a dysfunctional culture, but it rests upon a foundation of Jello.

Facts are facts, and one verity (another new word) is that marriage is on the endangered species list in the Black community, and I don't think that paradigm bodes well for our future.

Tasha lambasted me for hanging our dirty laundry out in public and apparently not accepting the fatherless, multi-sperm donor as the new normal.

Seventy percent of Black households are headed by single women, most of whom are adherents to the 'culture of poverty.'

In most cases, the 'baby daddy' is not involved enough to make a difference, allowing their child(ren) to go without the essential benefit of leadership and maturation.

Tasha made the ridiculous claim that the sisters don't have much to choose from. She also said many Black men make promises they don't keep, or take advantage of naïve young sisters. Blah, blah, blah!

I found her comments disingenuous and insulting to sisters.

Anyone who tells a man, "I wanna be your baby mama," is shortchanging herself and the 'products' (pawns) of that relationship.

And let's be honest: there are many good men out there, but as I heard Sherwin Hughes say on his radio show recently, 'they (the good men) are not interested in 'you' (the woman seeking to build a relationship around 'baby ma-maism' (another new word)).

Sherwin also noted there is little reason for professional men to 'reach down.'

They are looking for a wife

And in truth, many brothers feel they can bounce from woman to woman—Neckbone to Neckbone—assuming they are desperate and easy.

Additional honesty: Women are in control. If they don't want a baby, they won't have one. Accidents do happen, but there are options beyond abortion, including the 'morning-after pill.'

Intelligent, motivated sisters see themselves as more than baby mamas. The culturally attuned and professional sisters will say, if you want a child, 'put a ring on it.'

A brother, whom most know but didn't give me permission to use his name, wanted to elaborate on my question about education.

In my column, I asked why teachers today don't correct poor grammar or insist on proper writing skills, which will determine students' future careers.

"Brother, you know the answer to that," he asserted. "This entire educational system (public schools) is corrupt and is controlled but people who don't want Black children to learn."

"This goes beyond (Carter G.) Woodson's theory on miseducating the Negro. We are in a period when middle-class jobs and technology are reducing the need for many professionals. The pool is reduced by allowing our children to fail, and the white suburbanites get the jobs."

The village chief quoted various Black leaders who posited that those who have historically oppressed Black Americans have no vested interest in advancing our cause of equality.

Systemic racism runs through

"Fortunately, most criticism is generally borne out of a misunderstanding or misinterpretation of my writing style. I am known to be blunt, frequently sarcastic, and generally cynical and sardonic, which is a result of my lifetime working on the plantation with slaves whom Harriet Tubman would've left behind."

try), and shortage of Black teachers.

"I'm not a great supporter of vouchers as a cure-all, but given what MPS is offering, I would not put my children in those schools," he said. "If nothing else, the system proves having Blacks in leadership is meaningless unless you change the structure."

Well, said...

A white cleric (in a private message) decried my position in support of Harriet Tubman's assessment that John Brown was the 'greatest White' man of his era.

system. He frequently said the evil of slavery could only be erased through a blood transfusion.

Said Rev. Don L: 'your comments go against biblical tenets and the teachings of Jesus. John Brown was an anarchist. He was not following the teachings of Jesus, who called for humanity and brotherhood.'

"To elevate someone like Brown—despite the merits of his cause—as a hero to Afro-Americans (his exact word) is to dismiss and pollute the bible and the Christian faith...."

I'll end on that ridiculous and redundant comment.

The Bible is full of 'bloodletting,' supposedly condoned or even advocated by God. If you take the Bible literally, you must accept that God told Moses and Joshua to murder innocent women, children, and even animals along the Hebrew path to reach the 'promised land.'

You also have to accept that He (or She) condoned slavery and became so upset with His/Her 'creation' that Nyame (West African word for God) killed every being on the planet, leaving only Noah and his family.

Slavery would have eventually ended in America. But it would have ended with bloodshed through the uncivil war or armed revolt.

And from my perspective, those who maintained and profited from the worst form of slavery known to mankind were evil 'devils' who should have suffered the fate of those encountered by Nat Turner (a minister) and others who led recorded and unrecorded revolts.

Last point: Black Americans, and those who were not allowed citizenship before the 14th amendment, carved out a separate and distinct form of Christianity because the White Church refused to condemn America's evil institution. Slavery would not have existed in America if the church, synagogue, and temple had stood against it.

'Ben' said he agreed with my 'concerns' about Democrats and Joe Biden. "I echo your (assessment) that the two parties are different wings on the same bird and that we will never reach the mountain top relying on a political party as our guide."

"...take the Brittany Griner case, for example. Biden and the Democrats show themselves as hypocrites by ignoring the sister who took 'dope' into Russia. She is intelligent enough to know what she was doing and what was at stake in the most racist country in Europe."

"Had she been caught entering America, she would have also been arrested because Biden and the Democrats refuse to remove marijuana from the federal government's inclusion of it being in the same category as heroin. Think about that!"

"And Biden is going to exchange a death merchant, spies, and terrorists to get Griner back?"

What about the 100,000 Black men in prison for non-violent drug offenses, mostly marijuana? Where is this old white dude's sympathy for them?"

From a reader with only a number (no name): "I don't care what they say, Blacks can be racist, and you are living proof of that. You are always writing negative things about white people, lumping them together and using them as a scapegoat for Blacks' failures and uncivilized behavior: "You want us to pay reparations for something we didn't do. You always begging for a handout (welfare) and don't want to recognize America wouldn't need the system if you people stopped breeding like animals. You have no morals (most of you) and have rejected God."

For the record, I cleaned up this 'good white American's' syntax but received no response when I reached out via messenger to get specifics.

As for being a racist, if that means I put Black people first, over political parties, unions, and the 'educarcy,' you are right. And yes, I have repeatedly stated we are God's first, His/Her chosen, and the creators of math, science, and medicine. Those are facts that were dismissed in 'His-story' (or 'white critical race theory').

I don't apologize for my blackness and oppose oppression in any form.

And those who read, or have heard me on various platforms, know I don't hold back on my condemnation of Black people. I am an equal opportunity observer and critic.

Said Clad (who I assume is white): "you shouldn't be given a forum. You're hateful, cynical, and unAmerican...need to go somewhere else...."

UnAmerican? I'm a Vietnam veteran, which most right-wing critics cannot say. I gave; served. As for being hateful and cynical? I am. I hate prejudice, racism, bigotry, and injustice.

I have an aversion to people who take advantage of others, crime, and political, pastoral, and poverty pimps.

I couldn't let this column end on

Inflation Reduction Act Signals a Bright Horizon in Wisconsin

MADISON— History was made today as President Biden signed into law the Inflation Reduction Act, a piece of federal legislation that will fund a cleaner climate, nurture a stronger infrastructure, cap prescription drug prices, and create more equitable access to healthcare.

“With the Inflation Reduction Act now signed into law, today is a great day for Wisconsinites,” said A Better Wisconsin Together Executive Director Chris Walloch.

“Because progressives in the Senate and House were able to get this done, Wisconsin can now take more steps to combat climate change, put more money in our pockets, and continue bridging the gap in access to affordable healthcare.”

A Better Wisconsin Together applauds the progressives in federal office who voted ‘Yes’ along the way and made this groundbreaking legislation possible. We lament the conservative politicians, like Sen. Ron Johnson, who - due to a negative note. So, here is a sample of fans who see value in my having a forum to say what they wish they could.

Said K'Tore': "Keep it cummin' brother; we need to learn and thus grow."

A tribal queen y'all know as Mother Brenda commented: "I've learned so much about our history reading your column. You provide a service no one else can...."

And, finally, D.D. (Darrel or Daryl Davis) said: “Your ‘Week-endwisdom’ series is the most controversial but informative posting I know of."

misplaced priorities - tried to stand in the way

“While certain politicians in Wisconsin were focused on banning books, pandering to the gun lobby, and attacking reproductive rights, their progressive colleagues were getting this important work done,” said Walloch.

“Times are hard, and we need our elected leaders to prioritize the right things. That's why the Inflation Reduction Act is such a huge win for Wisconsin.”

Below are some Inflation Reduction Act investments that will benefit Wisconsinites:

A cut in dangerous emissions by 1 billion metric tons

Lower electricity costs

Tax credits for people buying electric vehicles

Lower prescription drug costs

Continued healthcare coverage for over 40,000 Wisconsinites utilizing the Affordable Care Act

Free vaccinations for those who qualify

Millions of new jobs created nationally over the next decade

Call Congress today at (202) 224-3121 to thank the progressive leaders who got this done, and tell those who stood in the way that they need to get their priorities straight.
