

A basketball game in progress. A player in a white and yellow Marquette jersey is dribbling the ball while being defended by a player in a grey Xavier jersey. Another player in a grey jersey with the number 4 is also visible.

It will be their first since 2013 when they earned a share of the conference crown, also the last year they won an NCCA tournament game. —Photos by Bill Tennesen. Source for caption: ESPN.com

BLACK HISTORY DIAMONDS AND DISCOVERIES

For instance, African American men have died from colorectal cancer (CRC) at the highest rates of any racial/ethnic group in the U.S. for more than 25 years, and CRC is estimated to become the leading cause of cancer-related deaths for those ages 20-49 by 2030.

I founded the Colorectal Cancer Equity Foundation in March 2021 to remove obstacles to CRC equity among these underrepresented populations.

How does your prior research and leadership experience lend itself to the work ahead of us to address persisting challenges in Milwaukee and Wisconsin?

For more than 18 years, I have been a productive contributor to health disparities-focused inquiry through peer-reviewed publications, community dialogue, National Public Radio interviews, and TV appearances, among several other efforts.

These opportunities have permitted me to study, partner with, and/or be a vociferous advocate for various underserved and socially vulnerable groups including community-dwelling older adult, African American, homeless, Somali, adolescent and young adult, Hispanic, rural, Indigenous, and sexual minority populations.

Considering my leadership and expertise, married to the proficiencies of the other rock stars that Cancer Center Director Dr. Gustavo Leone has brought to the governance table, I am confident our efforts to tackle tenacious challenges in Milwaukee/Wisconsin will be monumental – simply because Together, Everyone Achieves More.

Anything we should know about you personally?

My wife, Dr. Tiana N. Rogers, is my secret weapon who helps me remain grounded, holistically healthy, and focused on eradicating health and cancer disparities in this lifetime. I'm a sneakerhead, foodie, hodophile, and ice cream connoisseur whose socks always match my tie.

Please join us in welcoming Dr. Rogers, who officially joins the Cancer Center June 1.

Wisconsin Workers Are Owed $4B in Unpaid Overtime, According to Study

The average Wisconsinite worked 2.4 hours of unpaid overtime per week over 2022. Ninety-six believe that being remunerated for overtime is 'a basic human right'. Map showing overtime owed across the country. The reason you may feel like you're earning less for longer hours compared to your parents is because it's likely the case. Average hourly wages, adjusted for inflation, have declined since the 1970s, while the average number of hours worked has increased.

As a result, American workers are facing underpayment, overwork, and stress. One of the reasons for this is the decrease in overtime pay. A new study by Bisnar Chase has revealed that the average Wisconsin employee in the private sector worked approximately 2.4 hours of unpaid overtime per week over 2022 (the national average was 2.1 hours of unpaid overtime). When this figure is applied to the number of exempt workers in The Badger State (and based on the median wage), and then annualized, it transpires that Wisconsin workers are collectively owed $4,081,777,113 in backpay. Overtime pay may not be a familiar term to many younger generations, but in the past, it was a staple for middle-class workers. Nowadays, a significant portion of employees work over 40 hours a week without receiving any overtime compensation. Despite laws that protect the right to overtime pay, those earning above $35k per year are often misclassified into exempt positions that do not qualify for overtime. This creates a large pool of free labor for employers to exploit, leading to increased profits, declining real wages, and a widening income gap. When broken down by state, it is Marylanders who are working the most for free. The average worker in The Old Line state estimates that they worked 3.5 hours in unpaid overtime per week in 2022. This means they are collectively owed $4.4 billion by their employers. In contrast, workers in South Dakota 'only worked' 0.3 hours in overtime, resulting in a collective overtime debt of $79 million.

Interactive map showing overtime owed across the country According to managing partner and trial lawyer Brian Chase of Bisnar Chase, the concept of 'free time' has drastically changed over the past fifty years. "Free time is now something that is expected to be given up to one's employer. The recent trend of working from home due to the pandemic has exacerbated situation, as unpaid overtime has become a widespread and accepted norm." The study also uncovered some interesting findings: 1. Employees were asked, hypothetically, if they were interviewing for jobs at two different companies, would they opt for the company that guaranteed overtime pay, or the company that offered more vacation days? Respondents emphatically said they would take overtime pay (70% compared to 30%). 2. Ninety-six percent also believe that being remunerated for overtime is 'a basic human right'. 3. Perhaps in a sign of the times, with so many layoffs (particularly in the technology sector), employees have greater job insecurity - over a quarter (26%) said they would not bring it up with an employer if they found out that a colleague who does a similar job was being paid for overtime, even if they were not. 4. When asked what they would do if they were paid overtime in one lump sum, 53% said they would put the money in savings; 15% said they would invest in the stock market; 10% would pay it into the mortgage, and 6% would either buy a car or try to start their own business. 5. Finally, an overwhelming 79% said if an employer agreed to backdate payments for overtime, that they should receive interest on said payments. The decline in labor standards, including not receiving overtime pay over the years, could be the cause behind the mass quitting of jobs, referred to as "The Great Resignation" by the media. The pandemic resulted in many workers switching jobs in search of improved work-life balance.
