County Supervisor hosts officials at 'Listen & Learn' Session

Milwaukee County Supervisor Priscilla E. Coggs-Jones held her third 'Listen & Learn' session at Northcott Neighborhood House. The event educates district 13 county residents about the services provided by the county. Participants in the third series event were Milwaukee County Sheriff Denita Ball and Supervisors Chantell Jewell, Willie Johnson Jr., and Sequanna Taylor.

Coggs-Jones said such sessions of governmental-community interaction allows residents of her district to know the members of county leadership and how their leadership works for residents daily. "When we educate the community on the services Milwaukee County provides, including those services that are mandated by the state of Wisconsin, we all win," said Coggs-Jones. "My thanks goes out to Sheriff Ball and Sup. Jewell for sharing their wealth of knowledge with residents of the incredible 13th district." —Photos by Yvonne Kemp

City considering lawsuit against Kia and Hyundai tied to rash of car thefts

After years of discussing the possibility of the city of Milwaukee suing Kia and Hyundai for their culpability in making vehicles without adequate anti-theft systems, the Common Council is considering significant legal action against the two automakers.

"It is time for the city of Milwaukee—ground zero for where many of these issues began—to join the growing number of cities by filing suit against Kia and Hyundai," said Alderpersons Milele Coggs and Khalif Rainey in a statement.

Insurance company State Farm announced plans recently to stop accepting new customers with certain models from both automakers because of a rise in thefts, according to a report by USA TODAY.

Meanwhile, Progressive Insurance co. confirmed possible changes in pricing and acceptance criteria amid an increase in thefts, according to the report.

City officials point to the state's capitol, Madison, which recently approved a resolution authorizing that city to hire a Seattle-based law firm to file a federal lawsuit against the car makers.

"Madison officials allege—just as we do—that Kia and Hyundai are at least partly to blame because they failed to equip all their vehicles made between 2011 and 2021 with engine immobilizers and other standard anti-theft features.

"The resolution approved in Madison notes that the rash of thefts there (like in Milwaukee) has consumed police resources, cost taxpayers money and endangered the public."

An alderperson, who wished to remain anonymous, said no decision will be made until the city has more information.

MOTHER, GRANDMOTHER, GREAT-GRANDMOTHER, WWII LEGEND!

Anna Robertson celebrates 99th birthday with family; was member of famed Black Women's Army postal unit, 'The Six Triple Eights'

Four generations of the Anna Robertson (inset at left) family recently gave their matriarch a glorious 99th birthday celebration. The proud mother of eight, grandmother of 18, great-grandmother of 31, and great-great grandmother of six (with another great-great granddaughter on the way) served overseas in World War II as a member of the Women's Army Corp Unit, the 6888th Central Postal Direct Battalion (also known as the 'Six Triple Eight'). The unit was the first all Black female battalion to serve in the war, and was responsible for separating and distributing hundreds of thousands of letters and packages to U.S. soldiers. Her service served as the foundation for not only her family to become what they wanted to be, but to all the other Brown and Black girls and boys who encountered this extraordinary woman. ARTWORKS

Unique program provides youth a chance to work and learn while addressing mental advocacy

By Kathy Gaillard

Artworks is a unique program, founded 22 years ago, that provides youth paid internships and job experiences, while addressing mental advocacy. From interviewing, to onboarding, to problem solving and creativity, every aspect of Artworks is designed to groom youth's soft skills and development.

Artworks is the brainchild of Laura Owens, Professor Emerita at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Terry Murphy has served as Artworks' executive director for the past 11 years and she could not be more passionate about Artworks' mission of "preparing youth for tomorrow by providing transferable career skills through art internships today."

"I previously worked in nonprofit and corporate management, and communication positions. When I moved to Milwaukee, I wanted to be connected to the arts and engage with youth.

This position is a match made in heaven," said Murphy.

ArtWorks provides year-long, paid internships for high school students to promote growth and practice in art and job skills. The program also offers lead artist assistant opportunities to students who complete their internships. Artworks is available to all high school youth at no charge.

"It is essentially a workforce development program in the arts. Artworks provides students a chance to express themselves creatively. What's more, students do not have to be artists to participate," Murphy explained.

Since the pandemic, many people are experiencing trauma and isolation in different ways.

Murphy believes that Artworks gives youth opportunities to express their anxiety in a safe environment post-pandemic.

"We started our mental advocacy graphic design program specifically to address this issue. Working with the Wisconsin State Office of Children's Mental Health, our students took on a client project focused on a digital campaign to address children's health last May.

They developed four different images for the campaign that reached thousands of people throughout the state.

The State has invited us to work with them again in September on a suicide prevention campaign," said Murphy.

Student input in projects like these is important. For example, one of their latest projects was creating stress-relieving coloring book.

Each student contributed a design. The coloring books can be purchased on Artworks' website. During last year's Black Arts Fest-MKE and Bronzeville Days, they also distributed free drawing sheets and crayons.

"Students also tour different corporations as part of the program. We work with Manpower to help them develop professional skills such as writing resumes, interviewing skills, and other

Study ranks MKE 4th worst place for African Americans to live

Out of 133 cities, Milwaukee finished nearly at the bottom, number 130, according to analytics company SmartAsset

Article by Julia Fello, courtesy of tmj4.com

An analytics company just released a list of the best places for African Americans to live economically, in 2023.

Out of all the largest cities in the U.S., Milwaukee ranked fourth - worst.

Financial analytics company SmartAsset broke down their findings into three categories: Median Income for a Black family, percentage of African Americans in the workforce, and those who have a bachelor's degree. Out of 133 cities, Milwaukee finished nearly at the bottom, number 130.

We showed the homeownership disparities to Angela Walters, the first Black chairwoman for the Greater Milwaukee Association of Realtors, which revealed 28 percent of African Americans living in Milwaukee are homeowners, which is 34 percent lower than the best-ranked city in the country: Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

"I'm saddened by it but I'm not surprised," said Walters.

According to the National Association of Realtors, 4 percent of Milwaukee-area home buyers last year were Black, while 93 percent were white.

Walters said that statistic included home buyers in Milwaukee, Ozaukee, Walworth and Waukesha counties. "It was post-pandemic where lots of buyers were out there and to say only 4 percent were African American, that's really disheartening."

She believes the history of redlining and systemic racism caused her Black clients to stay within Milwaukee neighborhoods, instead of buying homes in the suburbs.

Also, she says in her experience, "some of these neighborhoods are not welcoming even today for people of color."

We all benefit when there is diversity and so when someone is selling their home, if they were to limit the buyers who come into the property, they are really shooting themselves in the foot."

Another statistic that went into ranking our city was our workforce. 59 percent of African Americans living in Milwaukee are working, 19 percent lower than the best-ranked city.

We showed these numbers to Milwaukee business owner Ed Hennings, who said, "None of this surprises me."

The entrepreneur says he refuses to be another statistic, after serving 20 years in prison. "I took the route of learning skills," he says.

He got his barber license behind bars. "I think me hitting rock bottom kinda showed me that there's something different to this. So I started to take an extraordinary path."

It led him to owning a barber shop, and now a trucking business where he employs those who have been incarcerated.

"If you just stay focused on your goals and just keep working, that blessing or that lesson will reveal itself after you get through the storm."

The final statistic in this study shows 14 percent of African American Milwaukee residents have a bachelor's degree. We reached out to the University of Wisconsin system and Marquette University, to learn how they are making tuition more equitable.

A University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee spokesperson replied:

At UWM, we are committed to eliminating long-standing equity gaps and making sure that students of color graduate at the same rate as white students.

We recognize that affordability is a key factor in attending college for all students.

We take a hands-on, comprehensive approach to supporting students with addressing the overall cost of attendance. Some examples include:

Providing students and families support in completing the FAFSA as well as connections to UWM's Panther Scholarship Portal UW System's Wisconsin Tuition Promise program which starts in Fall 2023. This new initiative was launched to ensure underserved Wisconsin students can attend any UW System university without paying tuition or fees.

Working with generous donors to offer financial support like retention grants and emergency grants that can help bridge the gap for students.

Broadly, we're also focused on efforts to improve college attainment across the region through collaborations like M-Cubed, which widens the pipeline of pre-soft skills," said Murphy.

Artworks is a city-wide program, available to all students. The program currently places ten high school students each year and they are paid $9 an hour, with a potential for a wage increase in six-months based on their performance evaluation.

"Students are treated as employees. They must interview for the position, communicate with the public, engage in problem-solving, and learn to work in small groups.

"They also receive performance evaluations. We want students who have passion and commitment to this yearlong internship, regardless of their art abilities.

"We are happy to offer this safe space for youth to discover their gifts and help them through high school. It is rewarding when students return to visit us and share how much this program has helped them pursue their life goals," said Murphy.

Each year sessions start in January and run through December. The next online application will be available in September.

Twenty-five to 30 students are selected and interviewed for each cohort.

We salute this Diamond for grooming and growing our future, while fostering mental advocacy.

sion has been made yet on filing a suit and there is no timeline.

Milwaukee officials have long said Kia and Hyundais are easy targets, noting car thieves appear to take advantage of the poorly designed starters and a lack of devices that would shut off the engines if stolen.

Thousands of Kias and Hyundais are stolen every year from Milwaukee streets. Last August, the city of St. Louis threatened a similar lawsuit.

A letter from that city's attorney to Kia and Hyundai read they "failed to install engine immobilizers in many of their vehicles, and the respective failures have caused an epidemic of cars thefts throughout the nation."

Milwaukee Police stats show more than 8,000 cars were stolen in the city in 2022.

At one point in 2022, the theft issue was punctuated by a YouTube video that documented a loose collection of car thieves known as the "Kia Boys."

The video — which prompted a police investigation — showed interviews with self-proclaimed members of the Kia Boys driving recklessly and explaining how to get into cars and start their engines.

Several ideas have been floated to curb thefts—some dealerships include steering locks with each new car; MPD gave some away last year—but the problem persists.

St. John's On the Lake holds its 6th Annual

By Sheila M. Parrish-Spence, JD, MSE

"In Darkness and In Light Embracing Change with Resilience, Intention, and Hope" was the theme of St. John's On the Lake's sixth annual Symposium on Aging, which was held recently at St. John's.

The two day symposium featured many topics that affect the community and especially the aging. Presenters spoke on varied topics regarding wellbeing, mindfulness, strengthening our muscles, compassion, and emotional awareness in aging.

Presenters at the event were: Several presenters were Craig M. Klugman, Ph.D., of De-

FORMER UWM VICE CHANCELLOR JOAN PRINCE, ONE OF TWO HONOREE CHOSEN FOR THE 2023 MARY ELLEN STANEK AWARD FOR DIVERSITY IN CORPORATE GOVERNANCE

The Greater Milwaukee Committee (GMC) in conjunction with Milwaukee Women inc (MWi), awarded the 10th annual Mary Ellen Stanek Award for Diversity in Corporate Governance to Joan Prince, CEO, Executive Strategies and Vice Chancellor Emerita, The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (UWM), and Marquette University on March 14th at the GMC's Membership Meeting.

The Mary Ellen Stanek Award is given to individuals and entities demonstrating a commitment to promoting equity and inclusion in their corporate structure resulting in increased gender and racial diversity in leadership and on corporate boards in the Milwaukee Region.

Past winners include the award's namesake Mary Ellen Stanek, Managing Director of Baird; Cecelia Gore, executive director of the Brewers Community Foundation; Ellen Gilligan, president and CEO of the Greater Milwaukee Foundation; Linda Gorens-Levey, partner at General Capital Group; Gale Klappa, Executive Chairman of WEC Energy Group; John Daniels, Jr., Chairman Emeritus of Quarles & Brady; and Gina Peter, Executive Vice President of Wells Fargo.

Previous corporate winners include Froedtert Health, ManpowerGroup, Northwestern Mutual, Associated Bank, and Aurora Healthcare.

Joan Prince was recognized for her tireless work supporting inclusion of all students, faculty, and staff in driving UWM's dual access and research missions.

In February, she was appointed by Wisconsin Gov. Tony Evers to the University of Wisconsin System Board of Regents.

As a founding member of MilwaukeeWomen inc., Prince has mentored females from an early age.

She knows first-hand the feeling of being the only female and person of color in a board room, but that has only fueled her passion for advancing diversity.

On campus, she has created anti-bias training and formed programs to advance historically underrepresented and first-generation students. In the community she participates on numerous boards, intentionally connects women to each other and opportunities, and has spent a lifetime educating herself and others on the importance of diversity and equity's role in success in the corporate world.

Marquette University was recognized for its commitment to increasing diversity among staff, faculty, and leadership positions throughout the institution.

The university board have taken a proactive approach to accelerating the diversity of both the board of trustees and leadership council.

Eight board members are women, nine board members are people of color, and nearly 50% of the leadership council are women.

Today, one in five full-time faculty are individuals of color, and one-third of assistant professors are faculty of color; 48.2% of faculty are women, the highest percentage in 10 years.

Additionally, 44% of tenured/tenure-track faculty are women, the highest in Marquette's history.

Marquette's culture of diversity has also provided opportunities for inclusion across campus with efforts like the Urban Scholars Program, the Student Success Initiative, and the institution's status as an Emerging Hispanic-Serving Institution.

MWi and the GMC Future Workforce Committee review nominees for the Mary Ellen Stanek Award on an annual basis.

Registration deadline approaching for 13th Annual Girls' Day @ City Hall (March 23)

There are still slots available for new registrants for the 13th annual Girls' Day @ City Hall event set for Thursday, March 23 from 9:00 a.m. – 2 p.m., and interested middle school or high school aged females are urged to act today to secure participation in the event.

Girls' Day seeks to expose girls to possible careers in public service and elected office, and students will engage in stimulating discussions that both empower them to become future leaders, and introduce them to a career path in public service.

The event is sponsored by the City of Milwaukee and Alderwoman Milele A. Coggs. Girls' Day is co-sponsored by Alderwoman Marina Dimitrijevic and Alderwoman Jo-Casta Zamarripa.

Girls' Day allows attendees to meet a number of local leaders and participate in a panel discussion about public service led by women in the field.

Registration is required and the deadline for registration is March 20 or once capacity is reached (space is limited and there are no exceptions). Registration, along with additional information, can be accessed online at www.milwaukee.gov/GirlsDay.

The alderwomen of the Common Council are encouraging young women across Milwaukee to participate in this year's event in hopes of inspiring the next generation of young leaders.

"We believe that positive influencing and leadership take form at an early age, and are especially melded when young women are in their middle and high school years," the Alderwomen said.

"We must continue to make sure young women know how rewarding and fulfilling a career in public service can be, and why it is important for women to be represented in this space.

"Girls' Day is a fantastic opportunity to observe and learn about public service. Those interested in attending should register today."

AAA Activates 'Tow to Go' for St. Patrick's Day

Wisconsinites can call (855) 2-TOW-2-GO for a safe ride

MADISON— The Tow to Go program is celebrating a milestone anniversary this year, twenty-five years of service. Since its inception, this life-saving program has removed more than 25,000 impaired drivers from the road.

AAA – The Auto Club Group will continue these efforts as it activates Tow to Go for the upcoming St. Patrick's Day weekend, in hopes that partygoers do not press their luck by getting behind the wheel while impaired.

Tow to Go is active from 6 p.m. Thursday, March 16th to 6 a.m. Monday, March 20th.

Free confidential rides available to AAA members, and non-members.

How does it work? When someone calls Tow to Go, AAA dispatches a tow truck to transport the would-be impaired driver and their vehicle to a safe location within a 10-mile radius. The service is free for anyone, yet AAA asks that it be treated as a last resort.

As St. Patrick's Day approaches this month, it's imperative that drivers take steps to stay off the road if they are impaired. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), St. Patrick's Day is one of the deadliest holidays on U.S. roadways. In 2020, more than 11,000 people died in drunk-driving crashes. Those deaths could have been avoided if the impaired drivers found a safe ride home instead of driving drunk. (NHTSA)

"AAA's Tow to Go program has helped improve road safety for a quarter century," said Nick Jarosz, director of public affairs, AAA – The Auto Club Group.

"We're proud to be that last line of defense, keeping people from driving impaired.

"We also remain committed to educating the public that it's important to find a safe ride before drinking alcohol or taking drugs.

"This is critical so motorists are not in the position of having to decide if they're sober enough to drive."

mothers, Grandfathers, and Cosmic Relationships"; Arthur Kleinman, M. D. of Harvard Medical School, spoke on wisdom, living and dying, and human development; and Bishop Rudolph W. McKissick, Jr., M. Div., D.Min, of Jacksonville, Florida, on Lessons on Suffering. Community organizations and vendors present were: Bronzeville Arts Ensemble, Eastside Senior Services, Painting Like Van Gogh, Eras Network, The Illumignossi Project, and Painting Like Van Gogh.

Art and musical events were held throughout the two day event. Several of the persons introducing the speakers were Jana Troutman-Miller, M.A., BCC, Rev. Joy Gallmon, M.Div., D.Em, Bruce H. Campbell, M.D., F.A.C.S., Amy Biller Daniels, MSW, LCSW, Edmond H. Duthie, M.D, Mark Freeland, Ph.D., and Bruce Axelrod, M.D.

SIGNIFYIN'

By Mikel Kwaku Osei Holt

I'm batting 0.000 in my recruitment efforts for the class of 2023. That's consistent with last year when I didn't have a single hit.

For those who need help understanding baseball terminology, my analogy references my sales pitch to a dozen African Americans to consider moving to or staying in Milwaukee has not borne fruit.

Not even rotten apples.

All of my hyperbole about Milwaukee being the freshwater capital of the world fell on deaf ears. As did my introduction of Milwaukee as the new 'Chocolate City' of the north, complete with a Black mayor, county executive, sheriff, police chief, and 'government' school superintendent.

I explained that we are primarily an African American metropolis with professional baseball and basketball teams, a world-class zoo, and a beautiful lake.

I explained that the cherry (or watermelon) on top is two Black history museums.

To which one brother asked: "What cultural attractions are there to see after you visited the Holocaust or Wisconsin Black Historical Society/Museum?"

How many four-star Black restaurants are there in Milwaukee? What about a spoken word or jazz club where you don't have to walk through a metal detector.

What Black professional fraternities are available for Black college grads, he asked?

And can you get to any of those outlets without being racially profiled or carjacked?

Embarrassed by the questions, I responded in Wolof, hoping to confuse the matter. Instead, one West African migrant asked in Yoruba what had happened to our African World Festival?

Is it true that African Americans are the largest ethnicity in the city but the only group without an ethnic festival?

Call that response strike three.

My next inning appeals to prospective Black retirees didn't result in a hit either.

And it didn't help that they passed a Journal Sentinel newspaper box at the airport with a headline about our nation-leading homicide rate.

My presentation to the retirees ended abruptly when one asked about national news reports declaring Milwaukee the worst city in the country for African Americans.

Before I could refute those reports, he asked if any entity or Black leader was addressing the recent NAEP report that showed Milwaukee hosted the widest academic achievement gap for Black children in the United States! Strike three!...I'M OUT!!!

While this scenario is fictitious, a couple of decades ago, I was hired as a consultant to introduce prospective Black attorneys to move to our city.

A major law firm was attempting to diversify its staff, and my job was introducing Black recruits to the city.

I still recall one asking if Milwaukee's status as the most segregated city in the country went beyond physical proximity.

He eventually decided to take a job in the south.

This is pretty much what I would expect today as a coalition of civic leaders is undertaking a campaign to increase Milwaukee's population.

One published report revealed the mayor aims to reach one million residents!

When I first heard about that ambitious goal, I was taken aback. Until I realized it was not about us.

It's not about a new Chocolate City, but a Vanilla Village.

I mentioned the goal to several members of the Call-to-Action organization Tuesday, prompting community leaders Mac Weddle and Saleem Alim to declare in unison that I needed to read between the lines of the campaign strategy.

Go back and reread the press release about the new campaign.

With reading glasses in place, I would discover a consulting report that revealed our population decline (from 13th to 31st largest U.S. city) wasn't just attributable to White flight to the suburbs following school desegregation but because educated Black folks and retirees with or government pensions have been leaving the city in droves.

In fact, as we discussed the situation in greater detail, we jointly agreed the process of 'regentrification' has been orchestrated by entities who see the city's future through colorless prisms.

Mac posited that the handwriting was on the wall when former Mayor Henry Maier bulldozed our 'Black Wall Street' and middle-class neighborhood for an expressway.

"In case you haven't noticed—or ignored—nearly half of our young adults are not qualified for anything other than menial jobs. Put some blame for that dichotomous situation on their 'parent' who has not prioritized education as our parents did. The result has been a generation who ignore higher education or skilled careers to instead spend their time demonstrating outside McDonald's and Burger King 'demanding' $15 an hour to flip burgers."

Just before the school desegregation process (it wasn't integration), board members started closing central city schools systemically.

Over the next few decades, the plan was to purchase property near downtown—starting with Brewer's Hill—and force poor Black residents to the north and northwest sides.

Then they intentionally allowed the 'government' school system to deteriorate as White students boarded buses for suburban schools under chapter 220, intra-district transfers, and open enrollment.

The school choice movement upset that apple cart. But it speaks volumes that each of the last Democratic governors and state superintendents has sought to block its growth or allow inept schools to participate in hampering the brand.

Is it a coincidence that both former Governor Jim Doyle and current 'guv', Tony Evers have all but ignored the abysmal state of Milwaukee education while attempting to block the escape of students to school choice?

Indeed, Evers announced in his budget his intent to cap school choice admission.

Don't assume I'm turning over rocks looking for conspiracies.

Go to Sherwin Hughes's podcast from last week.

He lays out a frightening analysis of Milwaukee's abysmal education system with the suggestion it provides additional evidence of a scheme to eliminate job competition for local tech jobs.

In case you haven't noticed—or ignored—nearly half of our young adults are not qualified for anything other than menial jobs.

Put some blame for that dichotomous situation on their 'parent' who has not prioritized education as our parents did.

The result has been a generation who ignore higher education or skilled careers to instead spend their time demonstrating outside McDonald's and Burger King 'demanding' $15 an hour to flip burgers.

Before you dismiss my theory, consider also that the most significant 'civic' improvements of the last decade have been a nonsensical street car created to allow east-siders to venture downtown without fear of being car-jacked.

And more money has been allocated for downtown redevelopment and safety than in any central city district.

Oh, excuse me, I forgot. City officials did extend Martin Luther King Drive a half mile south. If you recall, downtown businesses like Mader's fought to have the street name changed because it would imply they were located in a 'black' area.

One other point: Is it by happenstance there are no movie theaters in the heart of the city, even though most customers are African American?

Likewise, outside of Walmart, can you name a department store chain that has opened up in 'the ghetto'?

What about grocery stores? Meijer, Woodman's, and Sendik have each opened new stores in recent years. But none in the central city? Is it because we don't eat pork and beans anymore?

Pick 'n Save gets the overwhelming majority of my grocery dollars because they serve our community and reinvest in it.

By the way, Chick Fil-A has opened a half dozen restaurants in Milwaukee, but none in the central city. Have they not heard Black folks like chicken? Or is there something else going on? Are there plans to invest in the town after we leave?

You can debate all day long if the current paradigm results from a conspiracy or if the new campaign is 'ethnically sensitive.' But the reality is reality, whether in English or Ebonics.

Milwaukee continues to have great potential, but that's all it will hold until we have Black leadership that is not under the thumb of special interests or have a vested interest in the status quo.

That's cool, but we should note that most of them take their pensions elsewhere, leaving in their wake a dying and desperate city that is losing its melanin.

And for those who stay, the challenge is reinventing or giving up.

NBA great Kareem Abdul Jabbar angered folks and announced his decision to leave the Bucks—Milwaukee—because it is a cultural desert for Black folks. He said he didn't see city leadership or Black 'leaders' investing in changing that reality.

To which I say, 'if nothing changes, nothing changes.'

pared college students; and the Moon Shot for Equity, which takes a wide-ranging approach to remove obstacles and create solutions aimed at closing equity gaps in higher education.

Marquette University Spokesperson Monica MacKay replied:

Improving educational access has been a historical priority at Marquette.

In 1909, Marquette became the first coeducational Catholic university in the world, and in 1969, Marquette founded the first Educational Opportunity Program in the nation, which has earned a reputation as one of the most distinguished, admired and respected federal TRIO programs.

Broadly, we're also focused on efforts to improve college attainment across the region through collaborations like M-Cubed, which widens the pipeline of prepared college students; and the Moon Shot for Equity, which takes a wide-ranging approach to remove obstacles and create solutions aimed at closing equity gaps in higher education.

As recently as 2020, Marquette committed to improving the experience of Black students on campus and fostering a more inclusive and welcoming environment by adding 40 new scholarships in 2021 to attract and educate students from our surrounding community through our Urban Scholars Program and hiring a director of Black Student Initiatives to track the progress of campus initiatives aimed at increasing recruitment and retention of Black students and improving the campus climate.

Further, Marquette remains committed to becoming a Hispanic-Serving Institution. Intentional recruiting efforts have grown the number of Hispanic undergraduate students enrolled at Marquette from 9% in 2015 to 13% of the undergraduate student body in 2022. 15% of the current first-year undergraduate class identifies as Hispanic or Latinx, and Hispanic graduate/professional student enrollment grew from 5.9% to 9% during 2016-22.

Lastly, preparing students to lead means ensuring their experiences and environment are representative of the world beyond our campus. Right now, Marquette's student body is the most diverse in history. Students of color now make up over 28% of our total student population, and more than 22% (1 in 5) of our undergraduate student population is first-generation.

Since President Michael R. Lovell joined Marquette eight years ago, the university has doubled the percentage of Black students in the incoming class (from 3% to 6%) and Hispanic students in the incoming class (from 7% to 18%).

During the past five years, the diversity of graduate and professional classes has increased from 16.2% to 22.4%. And we welcome international students from more than 80 countries to campus every year, enriching our culture with a variety of voices.

- Infographic showing hours worked by state over 5 years.

A recent study of five-year census data (from 2017) by Mixbook, an #1 rated design platform for creating one-of-a-kind stories through photo books, has revealed that Wisconsin women are working harder than ever - and men, well, not so much.

In Wisconsin, women have increased their work hours by 15.6 hours (per year), whereas men have decreased their work hours by 20.8 hours.

When compared nationally, American women have increased their working hours by eight hours per week, while men have taken the opposite approach, cutting back by 14.

Although there may be several factors contributing to these changes, the pandemic has undoubtedly played a significant role, especially with the adoption of WFH or hybrid work models, which have made it easier for mothers to work more while spending less time commuting.

Top 5 states (women) with increased hours over a 5-year period:

POLL FINDS MOST BLACK WOMEN SAY THEY'RE SCARED TO WALK ALONE AT NIGHT

FEWER THAN HALF OF BLACK WOMEN RESPONDENTS TO A GALLUP POLL BELIEVE THEY ARE SAFE EVEN IN THEIR OWN NEIGHBORHOODS AT NIGHT.
BY BET STAFF

According to a new poll, fewer than half of Black women in the United States (46 percent) feel safe walking alone at night in their neighborhood, compared to nearly three-quarters of Black men (75 percent) and 73 percent of U.S. adults overall.

According to polling data from Gallup, Black women are also more likely than Black men to report abuse because of their race.

They are also less likely than Black men to say they believe they will get fair and respectful treatment in interactions with law enforcement.

When interacting with police in their neighborhood, two out of three Black women (67 percent) believe they will be treated fairly and with respect — quite lower than the national average (86 percent).

When asked, "If you had an interaction with police in your area, do you think they would treat you fairly and with respect, or not?" two out of three Black women (67 percent) believe they will be treated fairly and with respect — quite lower than the national average (86 percent).

Particularly troubling in the survey, one in every four Black women (25 percent) reports being treated unfairly because of their race or ethnicity in the last 30 days, which is greater than the nearly one in every five Black men (19 percent).

According to new research published in JAMA Network Open by University of Pennsylvania, majority Black communities have higher gun homicide rates than mostly white neighborhoods of the same socioeconomic status level.

The Gallup survey on Black women is based on a Gallup Panel web study completed by 34,205 U.S. adults aged 18 and older between September 6 and 22, 2022.

The information was compiled from a sample group of 1,060 Black women and 772 Black men.

BLACK PEOPLE ARE THE KEY TO STOPPING THE CLIMATE CRISIS — WE JUST DON'T KNOW IT YET

A house sits along the long stretch of River Road by the Mississippi River and the many chemical plants October 12, 2013. "Cancer Alley" is one of the most polluted areas of the United States and lies along the once pristine Mississippi River that stretches some 80 miles from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, where a dense concentration of oil refineries, petrochemical plants, and other chemical industries reside alongside suburban homes. OPINION: The spaces we live in are regularly under attack from a noxious confluence of environmental stressors. We could reverse these trends the sooner we center environmental protection and climate resilience as the key to our survival.

By Charles D. Ellison

Editor's note: The following article is an op-ed, and the views expressed are the author's own. Read more opinions on theGrio.

Back in 2014, two years into the second term of the first Black president, I made the fairly audacious claim in a column that "...

President Obama could be the only Black person on the planet who cares about climate change. Let's be real about it: The ill-fated climate change debate is as white as late-night talk shows. Most egregious is a pervasive lack of any urgent Black political action on the subject."

This prompted eye rolls, spasms and even counter columns from noted voices in the environmental-justice activist class. Strangely enough, the column mysteriously disappeared. Still, that statement stands as true today as it did nine years ago, even as Black communities nationwide find themselves virtually defenseless on the frontlines of environmental catastrophe and existential threats such as climate crisis. Indeed, anything environmental easily tops the list as our No. 1 challenge. Against the backdrop of every problem we consider a uniquely — or disproportionately — Black problem, there is something gravely environmental triggering, aggravating or exacerbating them.

Black communities have always been the first warning signs of environmental and climate disasters. Our trans-Atlantic enslavement, the impetus of modern capitalism, is what caused and accelerated it, as Penn State University climatol-

PRESENTED AS PART OF WORLD PREMIER WISCONSIN

ZURI'S CROWN

Directed by Sheri Williams Pannell Book & Lyrics by Cynthia Cobb, Parrish Collier, Don Pannell, and Sheri Williams Pannell

April 27-29, 2023

Marcus Performing Arts Center
Wilson Theater at Vogel Hall

Black Arts MKE and Bronzeville Arts Ensemble proudly present Zuri's Crown, a new musical celebrating Black women, their hair, and the power of self-expression and love.

Directed by Milwaukee theater legend Sheri Williams Pannell, Zuri's Crown is an original musical adaptation of the Rapunzel fairytale, where Black hair plays a significant role.

The musical follows the story of Zuri, played by Camara Stampley, a young woman coming into her own as she embraces her self-worth and stands up against the forces that seek to diminish it.

Through her journey, all theatergoers will be inspired to love and celebrate themselves just as they are.

Zuri's Crown will take place at Marcus Center's Wilson Theater at Vogel Hall from April 27-29, 2023, as part of World Premiere Wisconsin, a statewide festival celebrating new plays and musicals.

The play was written by Cynthia Cobb, Parrish Collier, and Sheri Williams Pannell, and features an all-Black, Milwaukee-based cast.

Tickets are on sale now at <https://marcuscenter.org/show/zuris-crown>.

"We wrote the musical that we always wanted to see. This is an uplifting and joyous Black girl magic fairytale with a little Milwaukee flavor," said Sheri Williams Pannell.

"We've created a fun, magical world; folks are going to be singing and dancing along to the songs, but at its core is a vital message for our entire community. We hope it helps people on their self-love journey."

Since joining Black Arts MKE as its resident theater group in 2017, Bronzeville Arts Ensemble (BAE) has produced an annual Spring production (excluding pandemic years) for the Black Arts MKE programming season.

Black Arts MKE saw World Premiere Wisconsin as a perfect opportunity to include a new original work from BAE.

"We are so proud to support a theater icon like Sheri," said Barbara Wanzo, Executive Director, Black Arts MKE.

"That's why we're thrilled to shine an even bigger spotlight on her and this new musical by working with the World Premiere Wisconsin festival. This is an opportunity to ensure that frequently marginalized voices and stories are heard by a statewide audience."

found that if they were given more vacation days to bring them up on par with the world average, half think they should be entitled to back pay for the 10 day shortfall.

This would amount to approximately $5,775 over the past calendar year for the average employee.

According to experts, maintaining a balance between work and leisure activities can help reduce stress levels and prevent burnout.

"Taking time to be creative, engage in hobbies or leisure activities outside of work can help us recharge and reset, and allow us to return to work with renewed energy and focus" says Kim Colucci, Culture and Growth Director at Mixbook.

So how can we help employees achieve a positive work-life balance and make time for hobbies and leisure activities?

"In order to enable employees to achieve a positive work-life balance, employers must be flexible.

Flexibility can be found in where and when employees work, how decisions are made, and more," continues Colucci.

"At Mixbook, we encourage our team members to prioritize their time in a way that enables them to show up as their best selves. This means giving folks the flexibility to, for example, choose to schedule a creative or leisurely activity during the workday."

Mixbook's survey also uncovered other interesting findings when it comes to achieving an optimum work/life balance:

62% think workers should be guaranteed a company retreat or trip each year.

Two in three say employers should be forced to ensure employees take state holidays off work (most of which are currently normal working days).

80% say employers should allow 1 or 2 paid days off for employees getting married without taking up vacation allowance.

Finally, 67% of managers believe a 'duvet day' would help worker's productivity (a day off from work that an employee can take without prior notice, typically for the purpose of resting, recharging, and focusing on their mental and emotional well-being).

ogist Gregory Jenkins reminds us. As a somewhat seminal 2017 joint NAACP and Clean Air Task Force report found, Black people “... are exposed to 38 percent more polluted air [than whites], and they are 75 percent more likely to live in fence-line communities.”

Fence line means we’re more likely than everyone else to live next door to or near a toxic facility.

That’s not even mentioning the disproportionate share of asthma, respiratory illnesses, cancers and other chronic diseases we face as a result.

But that growing collection of morbidities worsens daily with the aggravated trigger of the climate crisis.

Dramatic changes in our physical environments — our air, land, water and indoor conditions — are now a leading cause of what’s making us sicker, which means it’s time we make it a leading driver of our social justice activism, how we vote and who we vote for.

The problem, however, is that most of us still don’t realize it, yet, or we’re not mobilizing as if we do.

As HIT Strategies January 2022 polling of Black voters showed, “climate change and the environment” continued to show up near the bottom of the list of policy concerns.

YouGov/Economist polling now (finally) shows Black voters more concerned about climate issues than any other group (62 percent of Black voters cite it as “very important” compared to only 40 percent of whites and 51 percent of Latino voters).

Clearly, that presents an opportunity — but, it’s not reflected in collective Black political discourse as the top issue that it is. The alarm bells aren’t ringing as they should.

Prioritization of environmental and climate crisis issues, and the response to Black suffering, still lags. The origins of this ignorance-by-design are not entirely our fault.

Generally speaking, Americans don’t act or vote like the planet is on a disaster trajectory: consumer vanity and climate catastrophe are on aligned fast tracks. Meanwhile, mainstream environmental movements segregate Black communities and advocates into the “environmental justice” section of the proverbial bookstore, with most “green” narratives hijacked by appeals to white sensitivities (it’s not like the U.N. is inviting us to the COP summit negotiating tables so, instead, we’re outside yelling ... if we can afford to get there).

National environmental campaigns regularly present images, places, and events geographically far removed from the daily concerns of Black populations in the United States.

It’s not framed in a way that’s relevant to our daily stress, it’s not discussed in language that we can relate to and it’s not accessible.

Distressed Black neighborhoods sweating through climate crisis-instigated heatwaves in major cities like Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Baltimore or Detroit — while struggling with high gun violence, food deserts, lack of health care access and the absence of basic amenities such as tree canopy and stable housing, are trying to stay cool and alive.

The last thing on anyone’s mind is ice caps melting or deforestation in the Amazon — even if that’s making their living spaces hotter and violent or forcing their kids out of school early — or wildfires gobbling up forests in generally white exurban and rural enclaves.

The enormity of the climate crisis won’t hit our community conversation hard until climatic events like a hurricane or Biblical flood hit and homes are destroyed, body counts rise and families find themselves completely displaced and unable to recover at all financially.

Or until the water shortages out West cut Black folks’ water pipes off first, as DuBois Ashong’s realistic 2018 dystopian short film “Where the Water Runs” suggests.

But we’re just as responsible for not proactively raising this on our blocks as a top issue.

Black media, with a few recent exceptions, is largely silent on environmental issues. Black pop culture discourse will still dismiss a climate conversation as “a white people’s thing.”

The very influential and dominant “elite” Black celebrity-rapper-athlete-entertainment industrial complex is so self-absorbed by and chained to a relentless turntable of social media bragging rights, label obsession, reality shows and crypto-creeping neo-slavery, that our social squares seem completely oblivious to the collapse of the ecosystems around us ... unless it becomes a trend.

Tune in to the most highly rated Black talk radio, TV or streamed shows, open up a Black newspaper or major publication and most of the time, the climate crisis doesn’t exist. You won’t hear the Black church raise a finger about it in the pulpit.

Black elected officials are gradually discussing it more, but the extent of that depends greatly on how much sinister fossil fuel companies will allow it.

The only time climate and environmental destruction gets humanized or becomes a major political mission on the national stage is when it hits white people — such as what we’re seeing unfolding right now in Ohio. But, as Black Wall Street Times’ Ezekiel Walker recently notes, we’d never see Black residents from Jackson, Miss., or Flint, Mich., or “Cancer Alley” in Louisiana get the full panel treatment on CNN the same way white Midwestern residents (who regularly vote for anti-environment and climate crisis-denialist Republican officeholders) do.

No one should be surprised by persistent violent crime rates in not only systematically divested Black spaces, but Black spaces that are melting from an increase in global temperatures. No one should be surprised by spiked chronic disease and high Black maternal mortality rates when the air is toxic from pervasive particulate matter and while water is still largely contaminated by lead or school buildings are rife with asbestos.

The spaces we live in are regularly under direct attack from a noxious confluence of environmental stressors. We could engage the counterattack and reverse those trends the sooner we center environmental protection and climate resilience as the key to our survival. Not only are we on the frontlines of it, but we are positioned as the leaders of a movement well primed to save the entire planet. We better move fast.
