MKE COUNTY BOARD RECOGNIZES OUTSTANDING WOMEN!

The Milwaukee County Board recently celebrated Women's History Month by honoring women who embody this year's theme of "Women Providing Healing, Promoting Hope." MCJ photographer Yvonne Kemp was among the recipients of recognition by the board. "I wanted to recognize these outstanding women who are truly the definition of community servants," said Supervisor Priscilla Coggs-Jones. "We must celebrate their contributions and ongoing efforts to promote health, equity, and prosperity throughout Milwaukee County and beyond. ### MKE Cnty Judge Janet Protasiewicz wins state high court post, tipping control to Democrats, Liberals!

ALSO: A new Pratt wins aldermanic seat once held by father, only one-of-four Black MPS board candidates wins, three referendums on jail, bail, and 'work-for-welfare' passes

It was a mixed bag of results—good and bad—for Democrats in the recent Wisconsin general elections for local and state offices.

The most important state election—for Wisconsin Supreme Court—turned out to be 'good.' Milwaukee County Circuit Court Judge Janet Protasiewicz defeated former state high court judge Daniel Kelly.

Protasiewicz garnered 56% of the state-wide vote (1,021,370) to Kelly's 44% (818,286).

With Protasiewicz (who was pro-reproductive freedoms, especially as it related to abortion rights) now on the state high court, control will rest in the hands of liberal leaning justices.

The new make-up of the court will now reposition the high court to the left as it eyes an anticipated ruling on the 1849 state law that bans abortion in nearly all circumstances.

The state's high court election was also a litmus test as to how the issue of abortion is

INDEPENDENCE FIRST

ADVOCATING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

BY KATHY GAILLARD

MARCI BOUCHER
President and CEO of Independence First

Independence First is a diamond in the heart of the Milwaukee community that serves people with disabilities. President and CEO Marci Boucher said that Independence First provides programs, services, and resources to help people live independently in the community.

"Independence First is the only place you need to remember if you or someone you know has a disability.

"We are unique because we don't tell our clients what they should do.

"We ask people what their goals are and expose them to programs, resources, and services aimed at helping them achieve their goals.

"Even if we don't offer a particular service, we can connect clients to the resources they need," said Boucher.

Originally from California, Boucher ended up in Milwaukee—a city she admits she fell in love with—because of the people, great food, the arts, and Independence First.

It is how all organizations should be, the building is entirely accessible, not to mention 50% of the staff and board of directors have a disability.

One of the programs Independence First offers is an assistive technology assistance department. They have more than 2,000 adaptive equipment devices that you can demo to see if it works for you.

Although they do not sell the equipment, they can help you find the right equipment and any funding that may be available.

Another unique program at Independence First that is available to people with disabilities, is a loan program.

"If individuals or family members with disabilities cannot afford adaptive equipment or technology (for example an accessible van), through our partnership with Milwaukee Economic Development Department, they may qualify for a low interest loan (about 4%),” said Boucher.

Advocacy is another important part of Independence First’s mission.

Staff regularly work with city, state, and federal legislators to help make or change laws to improve the lives of people with disabilities.

For example, if a landlord refuses to put in a ramp, Independence First teaches people with disabilities how to advocate for themselves to get what they need.

Independence First leads by example when it comes to diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI).

“We’re big on DEI not only in the community but within our organization. This past year we hired a DEI officer to make sure everyone is safe, heard and celebrated.

“We make every attempt to ensure that our organization is diverse and that our employees receive what they need to be successful.

“We like to retain our employees so we strive to hire from within. If an employee wants to move into management, we train them and get them the skills they need to move up.

“People and families with disabilities must understand that life goes on and no matter what the disability, it is possible to live a life full of abundance.

“At Independence First, we can show you how,” said Boucher. To connect with Independence First, visit their website at www.independnecefirst.org/ or call (414)291-7520 (V/TTY).

Three key steps for first-time home buyers

For those considering home ownership for the first time, it may seem as if there’s a long list of details to tackle once the search begins. However, before potential buyers even start looking at homes, there are three important steps to take.

The first step is getting your finances in order. Checking your credit rating and getting pre-approved for a loan are crucial. A good credit rating is key to securing a mortgage at the best rate possible.

Starting at least a year (or even two) before you plan to buy will give you a chance to pay down or eliminate any credit card or other major debt that can affect a potential mortgage.

“I would suggest that a first-time buyer talk with a lender,” says Angela Walters, a REALTOR with EXP Realty and chair of the Greater Milwaukee Association of REALTORS board of directors. “Sometimes buyers assume they cannot qualify, but they might be pleasantly surprised when they talk to a lender. I encourage people to reach out to a lender whether they think they’re ready or not because an early conversation can help them do the right things. If you apply a year early and find out you’re not ready, at least you’ll know more specifically what you need to do. You might need to pay down or pay off certain debts to improve your debt-to-income ratio. You can also get advice on whether consolidating debt would be a good or bad thing, or whether to hire a credit repair company, etc.”

What you don’t want to do when planning to buy a home is make another major purchase that involves a loan.

“If you buy a new car before you buy a house, your debt-to-income ratio may be too high. So, if you are thinking about buying a house in the next year or so, hold off on doing any other major purchases so your credit rating is as high as possible. Then, after buying the house, you can buy the car and you can buy the nice furniture,” Walters says.

Once you have an idea of how much house you can afford, do some thorough research on the recurring expenses that come (and keep coming) before and after you’ve made your first mortgage payment. Make sure you know what you’ll be paying for closing costs, moving, insurance, taxes, utilities, repairs, upkeep, and even potential changes to your commute.

The third step is establishing a relationship with a REALTOR. A REALTOR can help with the first two steps and more, so it’s a good idea to find one before you’re ready to start looking.

stay in touch with people and nurture them until they’re at the point where they’re ready to purchase. Just be upfront that you’re not quite ready yet.”

But you may be ready sooner than you think, so being strategic in your planning is important.

“Someone may be looking at homes we’re sending them and, all of a sudden, they see their dream home. Even though they wanted to wait until next year, this perfect house has popped up and they want to jump on it,” Walters explains.

Having your finances organized can help make that dream a reality.

Another way to get ready for homeownership is to contact Housing Resources Inc. (HRI). HRI is a nonprofit organization in Milwaukee that works to support financial education and empowerment and prepares people for sustainable homeownership.

HRI offers a six-part online education course, monthly HomeWorks for Homebuyers Education workshops and one-on-one counseling sessions. Visit the HRI website for more information and the workshop calendar at hri-wi.org

MCTS BUS SERVICE IS AT RISK OF FACING MAJOR CUTS

To Everyone Living and Working in Milwaukee County:

Great cities rely on great public transit. If you live or work in one of the 19 municipalities that make up Milwaukee County, I hope you'll help us save transit.

The Milwaukee County Transit System (MCTS) is facing a crisis whose ripple effects would touch the entire community. MCTS is confronting a projected $26.5 million budget shortfall in 2025 after relief funds provided during the COVID-19 pandemic run out. Despite our ongoing efforts to control costs (which have us ranked second among our peer systems in cost-per-vehicle and third in cost-per-passenger) we are hurtling toward a fiscal cliff.

Without a sustainable funding solution, MCTS bus service will shrink by more than 20-percent which represents nearly one half of all routes in the system.

Failing to invest in transit will have cascading, cross-sectoral ramifications for all of us—setting back the regional economy, exacerbating labor shortages, and impacting education and health outcomes. And the harm done by such drastic reductions would fall on those least able to absorb additional burdens.

Most large cities invest in their transit systems with sustainable funding, like a local sales tax, that is indexed to grow year over year. MCTS receives local funding through a combination of property taxes and a vehicle registration fee—both of which don't match the scale of the gap we face. Without a reliable source of local funding, the proposed transit funding cuts would cripple Milwaukee County. We need allies like you to help position MCTS for growth.

Here's how you can help:

- Let the state legislature know that you support Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley and the Move Forward MKE coalition to create sustainable local funding for local priorities through at least a 1 percent local sales tax. (Sample e-mails and a directory of legislators can be found at ridemcts.com/savethebus)
- Put an MCTS "#SaveTheBus" logo on your website and social media pages. (Download at ridemcts.com/savethebus)
- Register your company for the MCTS Commuter Value Pass (CVP) program. Enrolling your employees not only provides a business tax deduction, it also frees up parking spaces, supports sustainability and equity goals, and more. Get the details at cvp@ridemcts.org.

The bottom line: MCTS helps support and grow our economy by getting employees to their jobs and customers to local businesses. Every strong community in the U.S. has and needs a strong transit system.

We hope you'll join MCTS, support our great city and county, and help #SaveTheBus!

By Mikel Kwaku Osei Holt

I couldn't put it off any longer, so I had eye surgery last week.

For several days afterward, the world was a blur—no racism, self-hatred, or violence---but my hearing was 20/20, allowing me to listen to radio, podcasts, and television.

By week's end, I became sickened with one tv commercial that seemingly runs every 12 minutes on cable television: the insurance ad voiced by 'Jonathan,' selling a life (death) insurance policy for $9 a month. No exception, no age limit, and no reality.

Jonathan (a former company employee) fails to reveal that the policy won't pay for the average African American home-going gathering, much less the funeral, as it is worth only $1,000. Not a scam, but...

I mention that ad because it was still ringing in my head when my vision cleared, and I saw this week's 'plantation elections' through prisms that were previously a confusing blur.

And what I saw particularly in the most defining school board elections in recent memory was a deceptive and disingenuous (maybe even racist) Democratic Party ruse that Jonathan could use as a similarly deceiving topic for an insurance commercial.

Through my new vision, there are no longer any delusory shadows obscuring my sight, and what's in clear focus is another example of a betrayal of our community that will not only stagnate the Black Agenda but doom another generation of Black children to second-class citizenship.

Since most of the Black community has 40/40 vision and is forced to see through glasses produced in sweatshops using cheap materials, let me put this in focus:

Milwaukee has the worst-performing public school district in the entire United States. That paradigm partly exists because the teachers union---admittedly---has prioritized guaranteed employment, salary, and benefits over the education of students, 80% of whom are 'colored.'

Eight of the nine MPS board members were hand-picked by the Milwaukee Teachers Education Association (MTEA) to serve that organization's interests, which included blocking every major reform in the last three decades.

STATUS QUO FAILURE WINS (AGAIN) OVER BOLD CHANGE!

Yesterday's election provided an unprecedented opportunity to elect a slate of candidates who would challenge that paradigm. But aside from historic Black apathy (another disgrace, particularly given the election coincided with Martin Luther King, Jr.'s assassination anniversary), those 'Damn Dem's' interference swayed the election.

In these politically polarizing times, I assume I must clarify I am not a Republican, and aside from its support of school choice, I feel about them the way I do about Donald 'Trumpster' and hog maws: I can't stand them for the most part.

If Black folks take off their brand-name sunglasses and start our own party, I will be among the first to jump on board, as I've been advocating for that paradigm since Lot lenses when the state Democratic Party withdrew their policy of neutrality in the non-partisan 2004 mayoral race by stabbing former Common Council President and Acting Mayor Marvin Pratt in the back.

Pratt had been assured the Dems would stay out of the race, but after he convincingly won the primary, funds, and resources were provided to Tom Barrett.

That betrayal not only led to the election of Governor Scott Walker because of the Black backlash, but left us thinking where Milwaukee would be today had Marvin won.

We slept through similar betrayals since then in local races, but I went ballistic when the state party involved itself in the state superintendent race two years ago.

Jill Underly, a hypocrite whose only exposure to Black people was from watching syndicated episodes of 'Good interference and manipulation.' But yesterday's races provide the penultimate and far-reaching example.

The party involvement in local school board elections is endemic to the 'Demo templar' e. For 30 years, they've made it clear that despite our crucial vote, teacher union support is more highly regarded.

And that disingenuous paradigm flies in the face of the party's claim to 'love' us 'darkies' since it dooms thousands of our children to substandard education and limited life choices.

If I were a one-issue voter, my central concern would focus on education or, in the case of Milwaukee, a total restructuring of our city's abysmal government education system before a state takeover or it goes bankrupt.

In that case, I would totally abandon the Dem party.

The state and county branches put their support behind union-backed candidates, thus denying a slate of community activists a chance to address the Milwaukee Public School's nation-leading academic achievement deficit.

Despite its stated commitment not to favor any candidate in local non-partisan races, the Dems went so far as to deny access to essential election data to village-endorsed candidates and to reportedly provide resources to union-backed candidates.

Ask Jeff Spence, a former MPS director who found himself targeted and ousted by the MTEA during his term for the crime of questioning board apathy to Black failure.

Despite being a Democrat, he was recently denied essential data from the party whose officials told him they were supporting and endorsing Missy Zombor, a hand-picked candidate of the union.

In fact, Zombor is a former employee of the MTEA and editor of the newsletter, 'Rethinking Schools.' That missionary publication has attacked Black leadership for questioning union opposition to reforms and supporting educational options.

In a nutshell, the Demo Party is undermining the Black community to benefit another special interest---the teachers union.

That puts us fifth---behind White folks, unions, women, and poverty pimps.

Obviously, the party's manipulation of 'non-partisan' local elections would not be effective without the 'blind' support of various special interests and the 'Negrocracy,' Black pawns willing to put their party before their people.

I noted in a social media post that the paternalistic and 'missionary newspaper,' The Shepherd Express, not only endorsed union-backed candidates for school board but, in its editorial, never mentioned MPS's abysmal track record of Black failure.

IN ENDORSING MARVA HERNDON (AN AFRICAN AMERICAN INCUMBENT) OVER THE SUPERIORLY QUALIFIED SHADOWLYON HENDRICKS-REAVES, THE SHEPARD EXPRESS COULD ONLY NOTE HERNDON'S INTEREST IN MUSIC AND ART. NOTHING WAS SAID ABOUT HER OPPOSITION TO MPS REFORM PROPOSALS OR ANYTHING ABOUT A FEASIBILITY STUDY PROPOSED LAST WEEK BY HARVARD UNIVERSITY TO ASSESS MPS POLICIES AND PROGRAMS. DESPITE SERVING ON THE BOARD 'OVERSEEING' THE WORST-PERFORMING DISTRICT NORTH OF CUBA (WHICH PROBABLY HAS A HIGHER GRADUATION RATE THAN MPS), HERNDON VOTED HERSELF A RAISE LAST YEAR.

(Sorry, you must read the bible to know about that.)

But we've been stuck with the Dems because the GOP has either dissed, insulted, or stymied us since 1964.

That situation has left us open to exploitation, victimized by 'plantation politics' in which the overseers (poverty pimps) benefit from our dysfunction and ignorance. The Dems are the glue that holds those chains together.

In part, because we are a gullible people, we have essentially allowed the Dems to use, abuse, and misuse us to the point of ridiculous redundancy.

Tuesday's election was the cherry on top ---providing proof positive of the Demo Party's scheme to reassert their influence over us and to further trap our children in a failing prototype through which we falsely believe Jonathan's $1,000 insurance policy is the best we can buy.

Apparently, most of us were looking through foggy

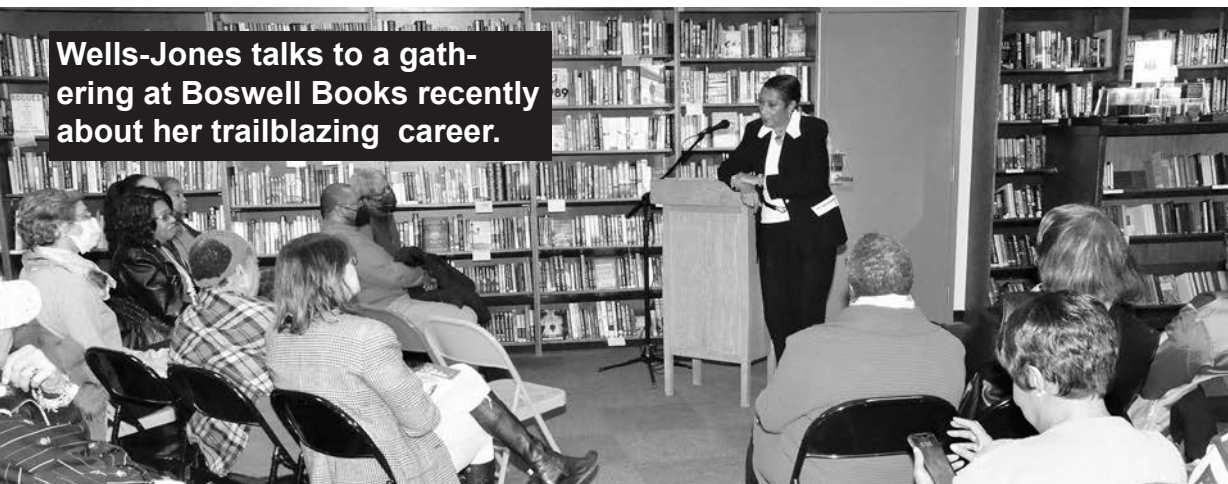

Times,' was the chosen pick of the state and local teachers unions solely because she would maintain the status quo.

Underly faced a candidate with a proven record of successfully closing the achievement gap in Brown Deer. But her prior employment in private and charter schools posed a threat.

Making that election even more chilling was that Underly not only mentioned she had no knowledge of the challenges of urban education. But she did possess an accommodating qualification---she declared opposition to any Black family leaving MPS for better educational options. That statement was inflammatory because Underly sent her children to private schools!

The Dems put six figures into Underly's campaign treasury and dictated to other special interests that they do the same.

There have been a dozen similar incidences of Dem 'in-told her that "Reflections" has been an inspiring, motivating must-read about career and life.

"It's a 'how-to' book about pursuing life as a single mom raising two kids in the corporate jungle. It was tough, but I survived. I'm here!"

You can thank the COVID pandemic for giving her the push she needed to write the book, which originally was going to be just a collection of notes she wrote in order to have a recorded history of her family's legacy, which goes back 162 years.

"I just started writing a few paragraphs about myself. My friends saw what I was doing and said that I had a book.

Wells-Jones family's 'journey' starts with one of the early patriarchs learning to read and write (with his master's blessing no less) during the era of slavery in South Carolina when slaves were forbidden from doing either.

Her ancestor's ability to read and write gave him an advantage over other freed Blacks after slavery, such as owning land.

Wells-Jones' own journey started in Arkansas, where she was born. The family moved to Milwaukee several years later for better economic opportunities and to escape the oppressive Jim Crow South.

Her modeling career began when she was 'discovered' by a woman reporter with the old Sentinel on Wisconsin Avenue. Wells-Jones was home from college where she was pursuing a business degree (and pre-med courses), with dreams of ultimately becoming a doctor.

"She asked me if I was a model. I said 'no.' She said I had all the attributes to be a successful model."

The Sentinel reporter encouraged Wells-Jones to come to the newspaper's offices to do some test shots the next time she was in town.

Because "I Can't" wasn't in her vocabulary, Wells-Jones took the reporter up on her offer and did the test photo shoot. Those photos were used for a full page color advertisement in a Sentinel edition in 1968.

The result of the ad was that it was seen in the paper all over the world.

It was also seen by fashion design legend Oscar de la Renta, who contacted the newspaper inquiring about Wells-Jones.

"They (de la Renta's company) contacted me to model his dresses. My dad helped me make the decision as to stay in school or pursue fashion modeling. He felt I should take the modeling offer.

"My dad was always behind me trying to fight to get into an all male world." Wells-Jones' dad told her if modeling didn't work out, she could always go back to school and pursue a medical degree.

After Wells-Jones graduated with a business degree from UW-Platteville, she went to New York to pursue modeling, walking down fashion runways in the U.S. and Paris, the Mecca of the Fashion world.

Another 'I Can't' moment vanquished!

Wells-Jones became one of the first Black models to be shown in newspaper ads.

Fashion modeling proved to be the launching pad to even loftier pursuits, such as television commercials for brewing companies, and banks that wanted to attract Black account holders.

Wells-Jones even dabbled in acting, co-starring with actor Sidney Poitier in the movie, "The Lost Man;" and in "The Landlord" with actor Beau Bridges.

"I wanted to break down barriers," Wells-Jones said during the interview. She attributed her success to not only rejecting 'I Can't,' but to her looks as well.

"People thought I was French or Creole. Even after I got into modeling, they wanted to book 'the Creole model.'"

Demonstrating her business savvy before shifting to the corporate world, Wells-Jones would tell modeling agencies to not correct those seeking her availability as the 'Creole model.' She embraced the title as a way to break the glass-ceiling for other Black women pursuing modeling.

"I was opening doors for other models who came after me."

Timing also seemed a virtue for Wells-Jones. After years of being a modeling pioneer, she retired from the runway and photoshoots to put her business degree to use and pursue a position with a Fortune 500 company.

"The jobs I was interested in were in sales. But sales jobs were advertised in the men's classified section," recalled Wells-Jones. "I got an interview with Burlington Industries. I had sent my resume using 'Terry' so they would think I was a male."

Also helping her get the interview was her education and extracurricular activities. Her business degree and pursuit of male-oriented sports of basketball and track and field while in college also made the company think she was a 'he.'

Wells-Jones again credited her dad for guidance and advice in helping her break some of that glass.

"He said I had to learn the 'corporate game,'" she recalled.

"He said I should learn as much as I can about a company before going into the interview so that once I was through the door, all I had to do was play the game.

"I took his advice and went for it! He always said, 'you can do anything you want to do. You just have to fight for it.'"

When 'she' showed up for the job interview and company officials saw that Wells-Jones wasn't a 'he,' they told her they had no intention of hiring a female.

"I told them they were going to hire me."

And they did.

Yes, Burlington took Wells-Jones through a rough interview period. And they didn't make it easy for her once she got the job.

"The first few years was a fight being the only woman in sales. But I built up the department I created. I was then promoted to assistant sales manager...then sales manager."

Another glass ceiling broken. Another barrier overcome. That's because Wells-Jones didn't quit, nor did she say, "I Can't." "I've always been a fighter, willing to fight to get what I want," she said.

"To succeed, you have to work as hard as possible to make it possible.

"I thought it was unfair---at the time---that women were only looked on as housewives and not educated women."

To do what she did in a 'man's world,' Wells-Jones said she depended on two skills: the ability to listen, and making eye-contact with the person she was selling to.

She attributed her skill as a listener to her grandmother, who never repeated herself. Once she made a statement, that was it. If you missed it, it was your loss.

"As I brought in sales persons, I would encourage them to improve their listening and eye-contact skills; to learn to read a potential client's body language to enhance getting the sale."

Asked about the state of women in business today, Wells-Jones admitted she doesn't keep up with today's corporate world beyond what she watches on television news or reads in the papers.

"There's been a lot of progress. I'm happy we got to this point. But there's still a long way to go. A few younger women I've talked to say problems that I had still exist, they're just not as blatant.

"It's still about breaking down barriers. Women are in (the corporate office), but they're still not being treated equally."

motivating voters nearly a year after the U.S. Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade.

The exchange of court power from conservative to liberal will likely impact more than abortion rights. The court could take up the issue of union busting ‘right-to-work’ laws, and legislative districts drawn to effectively ensure GOP majorities.

The court might even play a critical role in determining how the 2024 election is conducted and settling disputes that arise.

The ‘bad’: Three-out-of four African American candidates vying for seats on Milwaukee Public School Board of Directors lost Tuesday.

Darryl Jackson was the lone school board winner from this group. He defeated Gabi Hart for the district three board seat. He collected 3,264 votes (60%) to Hart’s 2,143 (39.4%).

Jackson, Pam Holmes (who was a write-in candidate), Dr. Shandowlyon Hendricks Reaves, and Jeff Spence represented a slate of school board candidates who wanted to turn around the dismal and failing paradigm of Milwaukee Public Schools.

A recent series by the Milwaukee Community Journal revealed, the city’s school children of color disproportionately suffered during the COVID-19 pandemic.

According to a national report provided by the newspaper in its series, Milwaukee hosted the widest academic achievement gap in the nation.

Hendricks Reaves lost to incumbent board member Marva Herndon for the district one director’s seat. Herndon collected 3,648 votes (58.5%) to Hendricks Reaves’ 2,523 (40.5%).

A former board director who sought to return to the board as an ‘at-large’ member to tackle the district’s problems, Spence lost to Missy Zombor. Spence could only garner 24,757 votes (39.2%) to Zombor’s 37,822 votes (59.9%).

Andrea Pratt will carry on the legacy of her father, former Alderman/Council President, and acting Milwaukee Mayor Marvin Pratt. She won the vacant first district Common Council seat that he once held, defeating former state legislator, David Bowen.

Pratt received 2,577 votes (50%) to Bowen’s 2,560 votes (50%).

Other open council seats were won by Lamont Westmoreland (district five), defeating Annette Jackson, 5,936 (67%) to 2,973 (33%).

Aldermanic district nine will be represented by Larresa Taylor, who garnered 3,087 votes (52%) to Odell Ball’s 2,834 (48%).

Three statewide referendums passed on Tuesday. The first dealt with defining conditions of release from jail. The majority of voters voted yes (1,162,620 votes, 66.5%). About 584,343 (33.5%) voted no.

The second referendum, focusing on cash bail considerations, passed by about 1,185,825 votes (67.6%). The no votes were 569,354 (32.4%).

The third referendum was a welfare benefit requirement. It passed by 1,416,125 votes (79.5%). There were 364,409 no votes.

The referendums came under criticism as the election approached, with many liberal groups questioning how the amendments were worded to appeal to voters, unaware that—if passed—could have a disproportionately negative impact on Black and Brown people living in Milwaukee’s economically and socially challenged areas.

In fact, in endorsing Marva Herndon (an African American incumbent) over the superiorly qualified Shandowlyon Hendricks-Reaves, the monthly ‘Missionary’ magazine could only note Herndon's interest in music and art. Nothing was said about her opposition to MPS reform proposals or anything about a feasibility study proposed last week that would have been conducted by Harvard University to assess MPS policies and programs.

By the way, despite serving on the board ‘over-seeing’ the worst-performing district North of Cuba (which probably has a higher graduation rate than MPS), Herndon voted herself a raise last year.

And make no mistake, yesterday's school board race pitted status quo failure against bold changes that will occur only if power is wrestled away from those who benefit from Black failure. As America's foremost abolitionist, Frederick Douglass, once declared, "power concedes nothing without a demand. It never did, and it never will."

Douglass—if here were alive right now—would not hold his tongue on Black complicity in our own impotence.

For White party control to continue, they must put some ‘Black faces’ at the vanguard to avoid allegations of racism and paternalism.

Who better than former U.S. senate candidate

Mandela Barnes, who gave a non-sensible endorsement of Zombor over Spence.

Or, his support makes ‘cents’ (if you know what I mean) because it benefits Barnes in the immediate future.

I'm not going to jump on the Mandela 'sell out' train some have invited me to get on, not because I'm a big fan of Barnes as a train conductor, but because I already have a ticket on the Soul Train.

Suffice it to say, the Democratic Party relies on members of the ‘Negrocracy’ to push their agenda, along with myopic, ‘boot-licking’ Black Dems who see that party as our only hope for equality, justice, and the ‘American Way.’ To that, all I can say is get an insurance policy and hope your reward will come in the next lifetime.

Like most ‘selected...err, elected... those Black Dems can be identified by their rhetoric and excuses (for the lack of progress.)

They nonsensically oppose educational options even as generation after generation of our children are chained to substandard government schools.

Like Barnes, whose senatorial website boldly declared his mother was a teacher but fails to mention she and her 'third' shift worker father---a good brother I went to school with---sent him to private school.

Those who disingenuously declare Barnes lost in his bid to replace U.S. Senator Ron Johnson this year because 'White racists' didn't vote for him did so either out of ignorance or because they continue
