Entrepreneur and Milwaukee Community Journal co-founder and Associate Publisher Robert Joseph Thomas passed away Wednesday. He was 86.

A natural ‘teaser,’ Thomas loved to talk politics and the issues facing the city, nation and world with members of the MCJ staff and friends. He was also an avid chess player (and a darn good one), and a very wise man.

Many of the community’s leaders today remember Thomas for his high expectations for success, and his commitment to growing strong men and families.

Thomas was born in Dyersburg, Tennessee and came to Milwaukee as a pre-schooler as part of the ‘Great Migration.’ He was raised in Calvary Baptist Church, and attended Milwaukee

It’s National Fair Housing Month!

MKE affordable housing, some with mortgages under $900 per month

Taking ownership of a big inequity in Milwaukee, a new affordable housing initiative’s goal is to get first-time buyers into homes at a price they can manage.

The goal is to help more than 100 people achieve the American dream, and the people behind this new initiative will have far-reaching impacts beyond the walls of the homes.

Building up a community starts with a good foundation. "The thing is, that’s what’s going to build our community, and a way to get our community back is to get homeowners and some young ones in here," said Cheri Fugua.

Fuqua owns a home in Milwaukee’s 15th District. At a recent informational meeting at St. Ann Center, she said she wants to see others get to that same place.

"Milwaukee has a sad history when it comes to housing," said Teig Whaley-Smith, the chief alliance executive for Community Development Alliance, which helped bring organizations together and fund the housing initiative. "Because of some of the discriminatory things that have happened in the past, we have the second-worst homeownership rate for Black families in the entire country,"

The new housing initiative aims to make up some ground.

"Right now, we estimate in order to achieve racial equity, we need to support about 32,000 new Black and Latino homeowners," said Whaley-Smith. "That’s not going to happen overnight. These problems are centuries in the making, but our goal is to reverse the

Profiles of Milwaukee's NEW History Makers and Pioneers

Bregetta Wilson, MS, LPC-IT, has found her niche in life and is making positive, systemic changes in our community. From uncertain beginnings, Wilson has become a change agent who has replaced difficulties with determination. She is brilliant, tireless, focused, and does whatever it takes to foster positive change.

Wilson’s personal experiences within the foster care system and as a teen mom have helped her advocate for others because she beat the odds.

She not only graduated from college but went on to earn a master’s degree. Wilson is now a licensed psychotherapist and has received national recognition for her efforts in advocating for changes in the foster care system.

She understands how essential it is for the voices of families to be included in system change and how working together is necessary to improve the community. It is what led her to birth Embrace, Improve, Empower, LLC.

“One of the things I highlight in my career journey is that you can’t have community without all the systems working together. My organization provides mental health services, and consultation in civic and community engagement, family advocacy and social justice,” said Wilson.

Working tirelessly for the underdog, Wilson is never afraid to call it as she sees it for the benefit of those she serves. She asks the hard questions—always—and is not shy about sharing her experiences and opinions or challenging the status quo.

“I always try to bring the voice of families to the table in spaces where traditionally children and families have not been included. We talk to youth and families, but we do not always acknowledge them. Their experience and input are the missing pieces to how systems interact with each other. I elevate the voice of families and express how decisions can impact them,” said Wilson.

In addition to serving on various governmental, advisory boards and committees, Wilson’s journey has led her to the Department of Children and Families where she is employed as the Lived Experience Strategic Advisor.

“I’m not a good bureaucrat because I say things that may not be politically correct but it is important to acknowledge the elephant in the room. When decisions are being made about where dollars go, we have the authority to say where we are going to shift things so that families’ voices are included in decision making,” she said.

“ONE OF THE THINGS I HIGHLIGHT IN MY CAREER JOURNEY IS THAT YOU CAN'T HAVE COMMUNITY WITHOUT ALL THE SYSTEMS WORKING TOGETHER. MY ORGANIZATION PROVIDES MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES, AND CONSULTATION IN CIVIC AND COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT, FAMILY ADVOCACY AND SOCIAL JUSTICE...”—BREGETTA WILSON

Working in government has helped Wilson understand how much power people have, who creates policy, process, and resources, and enabled her to highlight issues that need addressing.

in a manner that facilitates change.

Over the past 20 years Wilson finds that, too often, she is the only Black woman in spaces that ultimately affect families and the community. She brings awareness and accountability to the table when advocating for families by putting a new lens on challenges.

"I am an advocate first, a mental health professional and a community leader fighting for social and racial justice. I am at the table with those who are making decisions for families, and I bring a unique perspective to those conversations," said Wilson.

Thankfully, Wilson is not shy about sharing her opinion or voicing her concerns in an authoritative manner.

"If families had adequate housing and stable jobs, many of the problems they face could be resolved. How can we collaborate to address those concerns?," said Wilson.

If systemic change occurs in our community, Milwaukee has Bregetta Wilson to help make it happen. She is a diamond working for children and families in our community.

"We're going to try to improve homeownership for the ones who need it the most, and that's the African Americans and the brown people who have been subsidized in the past," said Milwaukee Alderman Russell Stamper II.

As part of the collaborative project, Habitat for Humanity Milwaukee plans to build 80 three-bedroom, single-family houses in the 15th District over the next four years, with construction on vacant city-owned lots.

"The number one way you build a community, the number one way you make it safe, is with homeownership," said Stamper.

Stamper originally said Thursday that mortgages would stay under around $700 a month, but Milwaukee Habitat clarified Friday that cost is based on appraised value of the homes, and their mortgages right now average $600 to $900 a month.

They added that the mortgage won't exceed 30% of the family's monthly income, used as a threshold for affordable housing.

Crews will build 20 duplexes, as well, making for a total of 120 new homes for households.

Whaley-Smith said households with an income of less than $50,000 a year will qualify.

"We're building home ownerships, building wealth and bringing back taxes that is much needed to the city," said Stamper.

It's not just building houses and wealth but a new future.

"It definitely will make a difference, getting some homeowners," said Fuqua.

More information is available online. You can also visit the Habitat for Humanity website.

Stamper said people can also reach out to him for information.

Editor's Note: This story originally said mortgages would stay under $700. It's been edited with new information from Milwaukee Habitat that their average mortgage is around $600 to $900.—Source for this story: fox6now.com

MPS World Fair Returns! More than 2000 students will celebrate countries and cultures from around the world!

Two prominent downtown venues will soon be filled with more than 2,000 students from 16 of the most diverse schools in the Milwaukee Public Schools system.

The annual MPS World Fair provides a space for students in grades 4 to 8 to showcase what they've learned about the United Nations and its 193 member countries during the school year.

The MPS World Fair will be Tuesday, April 18, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The locations of the event are the UW-Milwaukee Panther Arena, 400 W. Kilbourn Ave. Seventh and eighth grade presentations will occur at the Miller High Life Theatre connected to the arena.

Student projects dig deep to explore the strengths and challenges of each nation and the role each country plays in its region or continent. The World Fair will include performances representing various cultures, including the Milwaukee School of Languages band and choir, the Milwaukee Academy of Chinese Languages Cultural Fashion Show, the dance team and drum line from Rufus King, and African dance from Milwaukee French Immersion School.

The 16 schools participating in the 2023 World Fair are part of MPS's United Nations Schools of International Learning (UNSIL) program and have the highest concentrations of students with international roots, many of them refugees resettled in Wisconsin or part of immigrant families. Within the participating schools, 35 different languages are spoken by students and families.

"Programs like this provide opportunities for students to broaden their own perspectives of cultures around the world and share their own with fellow classmates," says Tiffany Tardy, MPS Foundation

Executive Director. "Perhaps more than any other, the annual MPS World Fair accurately displays the diversity of not only MPS, but the city as a whole."

The World Fair is made possible by visionary local philanthropists: the Annette J. Roberts & Joan R. Robertson Fund for World Peace, World Law, and Peace Education. Through the MPS Foundation and the Greater Milwaukee Foundation, the trustees of this fund established the United Nations Schools of International Learning curriculum in MPS. The program began in 2016 in nine schools and is now implemented in 16 MPS schools.

"This was the dream of my mother, Joan Robertson, and at 107 years old, she's thrilled that it continues on," said Annette Robertson of Annette J. Roberts & Joan R. Robertson Fund for World Peace. "The real wonderful thing is that if you ask any student at the World Fair about their country or what they studied, they're so excited and empowered. They see that these children, these people are like them; they just speak a different language and live in a different country."

The United Nations Schools of International Learning (UNSIL) program has demonstrated its influence in readying MPS students for a competitive 21st-century global workforce. The UNSIL program combines academic skills like research, writing, and presenting with a real-world purpose such as debate, negotiation, and conflict resolution.

These activities take place in a curriculum centered on world affairs, current events, multiculturalism, and cultural competencies, which help students develop empathy, tolerance, critical thinking, and problem-solving competencies necessary to succeed in any postsecondary environment and career.

Sunday was a near-perfect 'Holy-day.'

The weather was nice, with no hint of a cloud in sight. Didn't hear a gunshot all day.

And my $6.29 drone didn't pick up any reckless drivers along Fond du Lac, Good Hope Road, or North Avenue (although two of those sites were obscured by a marijuana cloud).

I began my day by tuning into the Christ the King Baptist Church virtual Easter service, which was all the more unique because the recitation was provided by teen congregants, a rarity these days.

The significance of the most crucial day in Christendom was provided at mid-morning by my pastor, Rev. Dr. Deborah Thomas, at our House of Grace Ministries service.

Several hours later, I put my pit master skills to the test for our annual Easter BBQ meal.

Collard greens, potato salad, fresh corn, and homemade cornbread were served buffet-style after our Africentric unity prayer.

Board and card games followed, to a backdrop of oldies (he who hosts the dinner controls the tunes).

Easter is celebrated as the penultimate 'holy day' in my household, as it has been for most of my life and generations past.

There was a time when the majority of tribal members subscribed to a similar template. But that was before political and cultural influences converted Christianity to a non-traditional form of deism.

In fact, that reality has prompted me to rename 'Resurrection Day' to a spring 'Ham and Eggs Hoedown' event for a growing segment of our village.

Today, most families who can afford it (and many who can't) will adorn their children in new fashions, not for the church, but for the family brunch and reunion.

Instead of flowers and bibles, the Ham and Egg Holiday generates billions of dollars for 'Easter' Baskets, egg dye, and chocolate bunnies, a reminiscence of ancient fertility rituals.

And instead of the racist showing of 'The Greatest Story Ever Told' with a blond-haired, blue-eyed Jesus, children today are glued to their cell phones or syndicated television watching 'The Hoes of Hotlanta' or the 'Pimps of Pittsburg.'

Dinner consists of leftover boiled eggs and the $281 ham you got online sale, coated with Aunt Jemimah syrup and artificial pineapples.

There are no prayers preceding the dinner meal since most family members are situated in front of the television, with paper plates on their laps.

The sad new 21st century Easter prototype and the slow demise of Black Chrtianity!

It's a sad but widely accepted new prototype that speaks not only to the unique cultural and familial norm, but also to the slow demise of Black Christianity.

Just as the recent state Supreme Court election was in part a rejection of Old Testament 'theology' in favor of an evolving New Testament cultural norm, we have replaced the pulpit with the political podium and the Cross with white rabbits and colored eggs.

I'm not providing this insight to preach or promote Christianity but merely to note how the devaluation and rejection of our spiritual true significance of the holy day.

Imagine, if you can, my upbringing when central city streets filled with young and old, adorned in their 'new' Easter clothes, almost without exception heading to a neighborhood church to celebrate what is considered the most critical day in Christendom: the one historical event that moved earth off its pagan axis.

While it is a misnomer to suggest America was or is a 'God-centered nation,' it speaks volumes that Christianity was used to subjugate, demoralize and torture millions of Africans and justify the genocide of millions of indigenous natives.

foundation over the past few generations has likewise signaled a deterioration of the values and mores that made us a community versus a 'reservation.'

That point came into focus early Sunday morning as I watched—as I usually do—back-to-back political/news talk shows. Except for one segment on Fox Sunday (I try to get diverse views), all of the Easter references were masked in political terms.

The most impactful was a statement made by one of the two brilliant brothers who were kicked out of the Tennessee legislature for being 'uppity.' Justin Jones, reinstated by the Nashville Council Tuesday, called his ouster and the resulting national uproar a "death and resurrection."

The celebration of Easter 2023 provides a unique glimpse into a different cultural paradigm than the one I grew up under. The lines of culture, religion, and even politics have blurred, displacing the

Not by coincidence, an intact version of the Bible was the first textbook used in public schools. Another version was used for our African ancestors, who were denied knowledge of the book of Exodus.

The New Covenant, however, provided a ray of hope, a band-aid for the pain. Easter was once a conduit and a glue holding our community together.

Today, it is more about symbolism than substance.

I was recently reading a series of statistics on Black Christianity that left me with the conclusion that when it comes to religion, most Black folks lie to themselves, but not to Nyame (God).

Or, as a theology instructor once explained, many 'Christians' believe they can restructure, organize and amend religious tenets to suit their lifestyles. By that reasoning, wearing a gold cross and a

Expelled Black lawmaker Justin Pearson to return to Tennessee House

Republicans expelled Pearson and Rep. Justin Jones last week over their role in a gun control protest on the House floor after a Nashville school shooting that left three children and three adults dead

One of two Black Democrats expelled from the Republican-led Tennessee House will return to the Legislature after a Memphis commission voted to reinstate him Wednesday, nearly a week after his banishment for supporting gun control protesters propelled him into the national spotlight.

The Shelby County Board of Commissioners voted 7-0 to reinstate Justin Pearson as a state representative.

"I will continue to fight with and for our people, whether in or out of office. We and the young protesters are the future of a new Tennessee. Those who seek to silence us will not have the final say," Pearson wrote in an op-ed published in The New York Times.

Republicans expelled Pearson and Rep. Justin Jones last week over their role in a gun control protest on the House floor after a Nashville school shooting that left three children and three adults dead.

The Nashville Metropolitan Council took only a few minutes Monday to unanimously restore Jones to office. He was quickly reinstated to his House seat.

The appointments are interim and special elections for the seats will take place in the coming months.

Jones and Pearson have said they plan to run in the special elections.

The House's vote to remove Pearson and Jones but keep white Rep. Gloria Johnson drew accusations of racism. Johnson survived by one vote. Republican leadership denied that race was a factor, however.

The expulsions last Thursday made Tennessee a new front in the battle for the future of American democracy.

In the span of a few days, the two had raised thousands of campaign dollars, and the Tennessee Democratic Party had received a new jolt of support from across the U.S.

Political tensions rose when Pearson, Johnson and Jones on the House floor joined with hundreds of demonstrators who packed the Capitol last month to call for passage of gun control measures.

As protesters filled galleries, the lawmakers approached the front of the House chamber with a bullhorn and participated in a chant.

The scene unfolded days after the shooting at the Covenant School, a private Christian school.

Their participation from the front of the chamber broke House rules because the three did not have permission from the House speaker.

Support for Pearson has come from across the country, including Memphis. During a Monday rally in support of Tyre Nichols, who died in January after he was beaten by police during an arrest, backers of Pearson said the commission was "on the clock."

"You've got one job — to reinstate Justin Pearson," activist LJ Abraham said.

Ahead of Wednesday's vote, Pearson led hundreds of people in a march from the National Civil Rights Museum to the county commission's office in downtown Memphis.

Pearson grew up in the same House district he was chosen to represent after longtime state Rep. Barbara Cooper, a Black Democrat, died in office.

It winds along the neighborhoods, forests and wetlands of south Memphis, through the city's downtown area and into north Shelby County.

Before he was elected, Pearson helped lead a successful campaign against a planned oil pipeline that would have run through neighborhoods and wetlands, and near wells that pump water from the Memphis Sand Aquifer, which provides drinking water to 1 million people.

He gained a quick reputation as a skilled community activist and gifted public speaker.

"Should Pearson join Jones in returning to the Tennessee Capitol, they'll do so when political divisions between the state's few Democratic strongholds and the Republican supermajority were already reaching a boiling point before the expulsions."

Republican supermajority were already reaching boiling point before the expulsions.

GOP members this year introduced a wave of punishing proposals to strip away Nashville's autonomy.

Others have pushed to abolish the state's few community oversight boards that investigate police misconduct and instead replace them with advisory panels that would be blocked from investigating complaints.

Lawmakers are also nearing passage of a bill that would move control of the board that oversees Nashville's airport from local appointments to selections by Republican state government leaders.

Particularly on addressing gun violence, Republicans have so far refused to consider placing any new restrictions on firearms in the wake of the Nashville school shooting.

Instead, lawmakers have advanced legislation designed to add more armed guards in public and private schools and are considering a proposal that would allow teachers to carry guns.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Cameron Sexton's office confirmed this week that a Republican lawmaker was stripped of a top committee assignment more than a month after he asked during a hearing if "hanging by a tree" could be added to the state's execution methods.

The speaker's office declined to specify the reason for removing him from the committee.

Rep. Paul Sherrell was taken off the Criminal Justice Committee and transferred to another, and was "very agreeable" to the change, Sexton spokesperson Doug Kufner said.

Sherrell, who is white, later apologized for what he said amid outcry from Black lawmakers, who pointed to the state's dark history of lynching.

Sherrell said his comments were "exaggerated" to show "support of families who often wait decades for justice."

OPINION: Candace Owens has made a career out of being anti-Black and aiding white supremacy. But does she really believe what she says? By Toure'

Editor's note: The following article is an op-ed, and the views expressed are the author's own.

Villains are essential for stories because they push the hero to be their best self. Real-life villains serve no higher purpose. They're just horrible.

They do not make us better, they do whatever's best for themselves even if it makes life worse for others. Real-life villains do not have lairs or tragic backstories, but they do have podcasts and platforms and power. This week, I want to talk about three modern Black villains. First, Candace Owens.

I spent years working in political media and getting to know people throughout that world, and one thing I have come to believe is that a lot of right-wing media stars do not truly believe the things they say. They are political performance artists. They're entertainers but instead of singing songs or telling jokes, they're talking politics. For the modern right wing that means playing to white victimhood and white anger.

Sean Hannity and Tucker Carlson are performers who stoke the white outrage machine and feed their audiences news and opinion that are constructed to make the audience feel both superior and angry. This is at the heart of "angertainment." Owens is one of the icons of modern angertainment.

Owens always looks either enraged or superior. I am genuinely struggling to recall what a real smile from her looks like. I don't want to link to her but she's got several platforms—her show her podcast, her evil mirror—and when she comes on, her audience isn't relaxed. They can't be. She's not a host who soothes her crowd. I imagine her audience sees her and starts grinding their teeth like an animal preparing for battle because she's about to tell them where to channel their anger. She's attacked BLM. She's asserted that George Floyd died of a drug overdose and not murder. She's complained about having to see people in wheelchairs. Of course, she's attacked trans folks and she's anti-vaccination. She says Meghan Markle is "despicably racist." She said Hitler was OK at first. She's everything the right needs and more. She's so much it's almost like a caricature of a famous Black female right-wing media star. Maybe she is.

Owens has a very special role in the right-wing media ecosphere. She's the most famous Black member of a political movement that's overtly racist. A movement that caters to white voters by casting Black people, immigrants and LGBT folks as their enemies. A movement that prizes white victimhood. In that movement, Owens is someone who'll say racist things and thus give white people the freedom to think those same things without feeling racist. She also implied that racism is over because she'd never been a slave. In 2019, she testified in front of a House of Representatives subcommittee on white supremacy and said, "Based on the hierarchy of what's impacting minority Americans, if I had to make a list of 100 things, white nationalism would not make the list. White supremacy and white nationalism are not a problem that is harming Black America." A Black person telling Congress that white supremacy is not a big deal is an enemy of Black people and a friend of white supremacy.

After George Floyd was murdered, I was triggered and infuriated to watch Owens post a video on social media saying Floyd was not a hero and not even a good person. She was gaslighting the world, but hearing her say that cemented two ideas in my mind: 1) Owens is a stone-cold soldier for white supremacy. As Black people everywhere were mourning this death and feeling trauma from the video of it, Owens leaped up to talk about his criminal record and say "Did you know he was a terrible person???" It was like she was deployed to attempt to disperse the crowd by destroying Floyd's reputation. It was a despicable tactic, but really it was a message to white people—you don't have to support Floyd; he was the sort of Black person you'd be right to be afraid of. She was there to liberate them from feeling like they had to care about him. She was there to pressure the media to help her destroy his name. She was there to stop the movement by any means necessary.

Owens is a perfect example of how Black people can be racist. Being racist is not really about having power; it's about operating in a way that aids white supremacy. Owens' job is to help white supremacy and she does it with joy. She's what Stephen from "Django Unchained" would be like if he were living today. She's what self-hatred would sound like if it could talk.

The other idea that was cemented in my mind watching Owens verbally attack George Floyd after his death was this: 2) Her intended audience was never Black people. Even when she's pretending to speak to Black people, she's actually speaking to white people. In 2020, she ran the ridiculous Blexit campaign that was supposed to urge Black people to leave the Democratic Party, but the real point was to have white people see a Black woman telling Black people that they should join the GOP. That led to Blexit collecting over $7 million in donations from which Owens pulled down a roughly $250,000 a year salary. That money came primarily from white donors who thought they could help Owens lead more Blacks away from the Democratic Party. She was pretending to help us in order to separate white people from their money. It could be brilliant except she's a traitor.

"OWENS IS A PERFECT EXAMPLE OF HOW BLACK PEOPLE CAN BE RACIST. BEING RACIST IS NOT REALLY ABOUT HAVING POWER; IT'S ABOUT OPERATING IN A WAY THAT AIDS WHITE SUPREMACY. OWENS' JOB IS TO HELP WHITE SUPREMACY AND SHE DOES IT WITH JOY. SHE'S WHAT STEPHEN FROM "DJANGO UNCHAINED" WOULD BE LIKE IF HE WERE LIVING TODAY. SHE'S WHAT SELF-HATRED WOULD SOUND LIKE IF IT COULD TALK."

Her work, which is about politics and race and speaking to white people, makes her the embodiment of whitecentrism. She does things for the white gaze in order to soothe white feelings. The left calls the right racist and Owens is there to say no they're the real racists, which mollifies white people. People don't want to be thought of as racist so having someone like Owens on their side is incredibly valuable because she helps them feel like they're not racist. Owens is the right's professional Black friend in that she absolves them of the potential of racism just from her proximity. Gross.

Candace Owens is so perfect for the modern right, that if she did not exist they would have to invent her. But since I don't believe that she actually believes anything she says, perhaps we could say she was invented, albeit by herself. I mean, do you really think Owens truly believes what she says? I don't. As Emily Jane Fox wrote in her recent Vanity Fair profile of Owens, "It's hard to know whether [Owens] believes the things she says or simply believes in herself. Every person I asked for this story agreed it was the latter. 'Truly charismatic people,' one person close to her told me, 'are able to talk themselves into anything. Outsized talents can do that, and Owens, she is an outsized talent.'"

Toure' is a host and Creative Director at the-Grio. He is the host of the podcast "Toure Show" and the podcast docuseries "Who Was Prince?" He is also the author of seven books including the Prince biography Nothing Compares 2 U and the ebook The Ivy League Counterfeiter. Look out for his upcoming podcast Being Black In the 80s.

FROM EASTER DAY TO 'HAM AND EGG DAY'!

$1K gold necklace makes you a Christian.

Apparently, that 'commitment' is behind a Pew 'survey' that laments over 80% of African Americans consider themselves Christians.

That response is as far removed from reality as Donald Trump is from sainthood.

While it is not a statistically relevant nuance, Black church membership has been at its lowest point since Reconstruction. A sizable percentage of Black churches were so challenged by the pandemic that many of them closed permanently, a fact that was exacerbated by declining membership by Millennials.

The Black membership survey was broken down by age and economics. Somewhat surprisingly, it revealed the higher the income, the smaller the affiliation.

Forty-nine percent of 'Christians' made under $30,000. That percentage dropped to 10% for individuals making over $100,000.

There was a similar educational disparity, with 47% of Black Christians having less than a high school diploma. That figure drops to seven percent for African Americans with a graduate degree.

According to that same poll, single adults are more likely to consider themselves Christians. Conversely, only 6% of cohabitating couples share the Christian faith, which makes sense since that lifestyle is contrary to biblical teaching---assuming you take the Old Testament literally.

While it was not categorized, I would bet a dollar against a dime that a significantly higher percentage of African Americans who identify as Republicans, or moderate-to-conservative, viewed themselves as Christians.

And among Democrats, twice as many follow New Testament scripture over the Tanakh.

Moreover, a case can be made that we've allowed a political system to become a religion. For Democrats, the bible is an evolving document, just like the U.S. Constitution.

Either way, you look at it, we are at a religious and cultural crossroads in America, pitting Old versus New, often determined by political, cultural, and economic interests.

As someone who has followed different religious doctrines (from deism to liberation theology), I refuse to accept biblical 'tenets' on slavery and genocide.

In fact, given my merging of various Africentric foundations which predate Judaism, you would be correct to suggest I, too, have strayed from the genesis path.

Indeed, I wear a cross to reflect one element and an ankh representing the other.

But I don't lie to myself; my philosophy is grounded in research and observations.

I celebrate Easter for what it is. And try to ignore the dichotomy of those who confuse the 'Easter Sunday Holy-day' with the Easter Monday Holiday.

The latter was, for decades, an unofficial spring tradition that grew out of a racist White House policy in 1878 that forbade 'Coloreds' from participating in the presidential (Easter) egg hunt.

In response, the White House Colored domestic workers shifted the 'hunt and roll' to the local Zoo (Smithsonian).

That celebration grew to over 50,000 people by 1919 and expanded to include gospel music, prayers, and sermons.

Hmmm, sound familiar?

Now that I think about it, maybe we should seek an official federal designation of an Easter Monday celebration to justify the newly purchased clothes, baskets, and chocolate.

That holiday may bridge the theological/cultural gap or, at the very least, add some clarity to the discussion.

Hell (no pun intended), they sold us Juneteenth as a holiday representing a lie (slavery ended two years later with the 13th amendment), so why not 'Ham and Egg Day?' —Hotep.

STATE OF WISCONSIN
CIRCUIT COURT
MILWAUKEE COUNTY
DIVORCE - 40101
Case No. 2022FA006384
In Re: The marriage of Petitioner: TADEUSZ WRZESNIEWSKI and GE-LAUTA WRZESNIEWSKI

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN, TO THE PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS RESPONDENT:
You are notified that the petitioner named above has filed a Petition for divorce or legal separation against you.

You must respond with a written demand for a copy of the Petition within 40 days from the day after the first day of publication.

The demand must be sent or delivered to the court at: Clerk of Court, Milwaukee County Courthouse 901 N 9th St
Milwaukee WI 53233 and to TADEUSZ
WRZESNIEWSKI 5264 N 68TH ST.
Milwaukee WI 53218

It is recommended, but not required that you have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 40 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition, and you may lose your right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

You are further notified that if the parties to this action have minor children, violation of 948.31 Wis. Stats., (Interference with custody by parent or others) is punishable by fines and/or imprisonment:

If you and the petitioner have minor children, documents setting forth the percentage standard for child support established by the department under 49.22(9), Wis. Stats., and the factors that a court may consider for modification of that standard under 767.511 (1m). Wis Stats. are available upon your request from the Clerk of Court.

You are notified of the availability of information from the Circuit Court Commissioner as set forth in 767.105 Wis.
Stats.

767.105 Information from Circuit Court Commissioner.

(2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order under sec.
767.59 or 767.451:

(a) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall, with or without charge, provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:

1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.

2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.

3. Community resources and family court counseling services available to assist the parties.

4. The procedure for setting, modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.

(b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase, with a copy of the statutory provisions in this chapter generally pertinent to the action.
