Soon visitors to Milwaukee's Convention Center and residents alike will have a beautiful plaza to relax in, named and curated in the honor of Vel R. Phillips.

In these final days of Black Women's History month I am proud to have participated in the recent press conference announcing this $15 million investment in Milwaukee's downtown honoring one of this state's greatest treasures, the Honorable Vel R. Phillips.

My hope is that people will be inspired, to serve & work to improve this city as they see the plaza and learn about the contributions of Ms. Phillips.

ARE YOU TURNING 65 THIS YEAR?

Here's What You Need to Know About Medicare Options

By: Jeremy Gaskill, Humana Wisconsin Medicare President

More than 10,000 Americans turn 65 every day. That's more than 3.6 million new people learning to navigate Medicare each year.

If you were born in 1958, you are joining the 1.26 million individuals in Wisconsin eligible for the government's health insurance program this year.

Here are the key things I recommend you understand before enrolling in Medicare to get the health insurance coverage that best fits your lifestyle.

Know your Initial Enrollment Period. If you're already getting Social Security, you'll likely automatically get Original Medicare starting the first day of the month you turn 65.

If not, you have a seven-month window in which to enroll in Original Medicare, starting three months before your birthday month and ending three months after.

For example, if your birthday is in July, your Initial Enrollment Period is April through October. It's a good idea to enroll before the month you'll turn 65, since, in most cases, you'll gain coverage the first day of your birthday month.

Otherwise, your coverage may be delayed. Missing this enrollment period could result in future penalties if you later decide to enroll in Original Medicare.

Know what to do if you still have insurance through an employer. If you or your spouse have group health insurance from a current employer, you may be able to delay enrolling in Medicare until the employment or coverage ends.

Understand the different types of coverage. Since everyone has unique health needs, the good news is you have options when it comes to Medicare.

However, evaluating all those options can feel overwhelming. The first choice you have to make is between Original Medicare and a Medicare Advantage plan to cover your medical appointments and visits to the hospital.

Original Medicare is managed by the federal government and includes Part A (hospital insurance) and Part B (medical insurance).

It covers about 80% of medical costs and allows you to use any health provider who accepts Medicare.

However, it does not cover most prescription drugs, hearing, vision or dental care.

If you choose Original Medicare, you can choose to add a Prescription Drug Plan (Part D) through a private insurer. If you are concerned about the cost of personally covering 20% of your medical expenses through Original Medicare, you can purchase Medicare Supplemental Insurance, or Medigap, to make your out-of-pocket costs more predictable.

Medicare Advantage plans (Part C) are all-in-one plans offered by private insurers, like Humana, that cover everything included with Original Medicare and may include additional benefits, like dental, hearing and vision care, prescription drugs, transportation to medical appointments, fitness programs and flexible spending allowances, depending on the plans available in your area.

Many Medicare Advantage plans also have $0 premiums; however, these plans do have provider networks, so check if your doctors are included in plans you're considering.

As with any major decision, proper research goes a long way toward making the best plan choice for your personal health care needs.

Kelvin Harris Jr
as Chevalier with his two most potent weapons:
the violin....

CHEVALIER

It's not the same as it was. This retelling of 18th century French violinist-composer Joseph Bologne, Chevalier de Saint-Georges' life is steeped in history but rocked with a modern imagination.

Screenwriter Stefani Robinson's (Atlanta) research and ingenuity resurrects Bologne (Kelvin Harris Jr.) as a European superstar, given the honorary title Chevalier de Saint-Georges.

Queen Marie Antoinette (Lucy Boynton) confers him an officer of the King's Guard and welcomes the mixed-race artist into her court.

It's quite an ascension for a Creole child born in 1745 on the Caribbean isle of Guadalupe. Son of a teen slave named Nanon (Ronke Adekoluejo) and a white French plantation owner.

Joseph, as a boy (Reuben Anderson) and violin virtuoso, is torn from his mother, brought to France by his father and left at the La Boëssière Academy.

There he studies music, math, literature, and fencing confidence but not security. He flirts with high society but is stymied by France's Code Noir, a set of laws regarding slavery that hinder Black people from gaining status or class.

Competing to be the head of the Paris Opera exacerbates Joseph's very weighted struggles.

When his mother comes to stay and the proletariats rebel against the Queen's iron grip, he finds his bearings.

The immigrants and workers seen and also heard in profound dialogue. As Joseph fathoms the complexities of marriage, he states his paradox: "Can't marry a white woman of my class, and if I marry a black woman, I will lose my class."

The Chevalier/Mozart face-off never happened. It's just one of many melodramatic devices designed to draw today's audience into the complex world Bologne encountered and thrived in, until he didn't.

...and the sword!

edging towards liberty inspire him. Nanon helps him see the errors of his superficial lux life after he buys her expensive made-to-order clothes: "All the money you paid for those dresses could have fed the whole city."

His friend and advocate Philippe (Alex Fitzalan) is an activist, a love affair with the chanteuse Marie-Josephine de Comariieu (Samara Weaving) blossoms, powerplays with her jealous husband Marquise De Montalembert (Marton Csokas) hint at danger and being trolled by a lecherous, vindictive prima donna (Minnie Driver) leads to sabotage. These subplots and characters fill out the violinist's story.

Emmy Award-winning director Stephen Williams (Watchman) uses Robinson's script as if it's a sketch for an oil painting. He adds color, movement, details and style, recreating 18th century Paris/Versailles as vividly as any artist could.

Shonda Rhimes popular Netflix series Bridgerton set the precedent for historic multiculturally-cast dramas. So, what's on view feels natural.

Under Williams guidance the visuals are flawless, evocative and beautiful.

Costume designer Oliver Garcia (The Favourite) uses tones, patterns and textures impeccably on clothes that are natty and so French.

Salons, concert halls and boudoirs feign places where the rich and snooty congregate (production designer Karen Murphy, A Star is Born), noth-

Robinson's blend of fact and fiction with hints of today's racial/identity issues are thoughtful. The composer's works were banned by Napoleon and details about him are skimpy, compared to a Mozart, so fabrication is necessary and useful.

Her intellectual and emotional grasp of injustices in today's world and what must have been unfairness in 18th century Europe seem perceptive and intuitive.

Indignities and life ironies are ing looks out of place (set decorator Lotty Sanna) and the spectrum of colors aptly recreate the period's aesthetics (art director Gemma Randall).

As your eyes peruse France, the camera (Jess Hall, Brideshead Revisited) is perfectly placed, from a distance or up close.

During opera or symphony scenes, performances and audience reactions are neatly clipped together making the footage fresh and kinetic (editor John Axelrad, The Lost City of Z), not staid and stodgy.

Between Robinson's use of spicy language (f—k), William's vibrant direction, the populous rebellion and the rhythmic pacing the film starts with a zest and maintains a quixotic feel for 1h 47m.

Harris does a great job displaying the angst and bravery of a man straddling two worlds. Understated for the most part but ready to roar, when necessary.

E.g., when he confronts the deceptive Marie Antoinette: "Your people are starving in the streets! You are a traitor, a fraud!"

Adekoluejo as his knowing mom, Weaving the lover, Boynton the shallow Queen and Csokas as a belligerent officer are all as wonderful or disdainful as they should be.

The violin is the scene stealer. Legato, staccato, solo or flanked by other instruments.

Its sounds are wondrous as it performs the composer's music (updated by Michael Abels) or the entrancing score by Kris Bowers (Green Book, King Richard), especially in the final concert (Violin Concerto No. 9).

Its only competition is a cello that moans during Joseph and Marie-Josephine's first kiss scene.

Musically, it will be hard for audiences to distinguish what once was and what's new.

Chevalier is a fitting coda for an artist who deserved a bio-film. In this world, it's enough. Framing a story, the same as it was or should have been, it's enough.

with the sons of white aristocrats. None if it is easy. Emotionally, psychologically and physically he's abused.

Years later, Joseph Bologne is a champion fencer who stabs his competitors and pierces their egos.

He also plays the violin like it's an extension of his being and is so sure of himself he challenges Mozart to a violin duel. In a crowded concert hall, his virtuosity embarrasses Wolfgang Amadeus.

That success and being embraced by the Queen give him
