GROUND BROKEN FOR NEW KING LIBRARY/APARTMENTS

Ground was broken recently for the NEW Martin Luther King Library/Apartments, to be located on the site of the current King Library at 310 W. Locust Ave. The $38.8 million project will include 93 affordable apartments and a new 18,000 square foot public library. Five parcels of land are being redeveloped encompassing vacant land and underutilized buildings, including partial demolition and redevelopment of the former Garfield Theater. The project is seen as a tremendous asset to Milwaukee's Harambee neighborhood and is part of the Milwaukee Library System's strategic objective to economically build 21st century libraries that support critical programs, services and resources to meet community needs.—Photos of Coggs and groundbreaking by Pat Robinson

Profiles of Milwaukee's NEW History Makers and Pioneers

When Lynnea Katz-Petted left a corporate job, she wanted to do something more meaningful.

Her charge was to double the number of homes the organization was repairing annually.

Working from home for five years along with a part-time contractor, that organization has now rebranded itself as Revitalize Milwaukee, has 22 employees, a 6,000-square

Revitalize Milwaukee is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization whose goal is to reduce social, economic, and environmental disparities by providing FREE only one that provides them for free.

Keeping existing homeowners in their homes helps stabilize neighborhoods and the tax base paid to the city.

"Revitalize Milwaukee provides opportunities to change people's lives in a way that allows them to live their best lives.

"There is so much judgement and racism in our community and I just want people to know that all people—from all walks of life—are integral to our community.

"I want to let residents know that they are not alone and they have someone here to help them," said Katz-Petted.

To help fund its program, Revitalize Milwaukee hosts three fundraising events a year. Among them are an annual golf outing, which will be held (continued on page 2) this year on July 12 and its Block Build, where residents and volunteers repair 30 homes in 36 hours.

“During our Block Build, we identify sponsors for each of the homes to do repairs, get permits and we rehab the neighborhood, which changes its trajectory.

“This event is always held in August and this year it will occur on August 18 and 19,” said Katz-Petted.

The organization also hosts a gala at the Wisconsin Club every October, which is a celebratory event known for the incredible food that is served.

During the pandemic, Katz-Petted was proud of how Revitalize Milwaukee staff rose to the occasion to serve residents, never shutting its doors.

“During the covid-19 pandemic the number of people we serve increased 240% over the usual number.

“We received calls for everything from getting food for people to fixing overflowing toilets. Being able to serve residents during the pandemic became a sense of pride for our staff.

Residents called us for problems unrelated to home repairs because they did not have anyone else and we helped them.

For example, one of our seniors went to the grocery store and when she came out, her tire was slashed.

She did not know who else to call, so she called us and we replaced the tire,” said Katz-Petted.

“We just want people to know they are not alone and we are here to help. I am so blown away and impressed by the resiliency of our homeowners.

He dedicated more than 30 years to serving the students and families in MPS and began as a middle school teacher at Fritsche Middle School. He served as assistant principal at North Division High School beginning in August 1992. He returned to North Division as its principal in July 2011, remaining there for five years until becoming principal at WCLL.

WCLL students and staff, as well as the MPS community, will greatly miss Principal McWilliams and his commitment to the district’s students and families. MPS extends its heartfelt condolences to his family, students, colleagues, and friends.

MPS will provide support to the students and staff of WCLL and throughout the district.

Funeral arrangements are pending. WCLL is located at 1017 N. 12 St.

Business Community Backs Increased Funding for Choice and Charter Schools

New Video Shows Economic Importance of Investing Equitably in All Students

MADISON – Wisconsin Manufacturers & Commerce (WMC) – the combined state chamber and manufacturers' association – released a new video on Monday highlighting the need for increased funding to choice and charter schools – something that is supported by a strong majority of likely voters.

Many Wisconsin businesses are facing hiring challenges as more and more students graduate from Wisconsin high schools unable to read and do math at grade level. In fact, according to the latest data from the Department of Public Instruction, less than four in 10 students are proficient in reading and math at Wisconsin public schools.

Without these basic skills, young Wisconsinites are woefully unprepared for careers, while the worker shortage that already existed is only exacerbated for employers.

"Unfortunately, too many schools are not preparing our students for the workforce, failing to teach them the hard and soft skills needed," said WMC Senior Director of Workforce, Education & Employment Policy Rachel Ver Velde in the Two-Minute Drill episode.

From the author of 'Time Wasted,' Camille E. Davis:

"For three decades, I witnessed other people pointing at me saying, 'You don't want to be like her.' The horrifying trauma of one murder, one suspicious death, one suicide, and watching the woman I adored my whole life take her last breath, after feeling like I lost my mind completely, I continued to allow Satan to keep me in a whirlwind of a degrading and sad and embarrassing lifestyle. But because of my church upbringing, it forced me to seek three different therapists who helped change my life. I hope this memoir is an invitation to anyone who feels they are not good enough, pretty enough, godly enough, or not doing enough. God bless."

PLANNED PARENTHOOD OF WISCONSIN HOSTS 2ND ANNUAL BLACK GIRL MAGIC BRUNCH

This past weekend Planned Parenthood of Wisconsin hosted the second annual Black Girl Magic Brunch to honor and celebrate Black Women across the State.

Sarah Noble was awarded with a Lifetime Achievement Award for her work with the Reproductive Justice Collective, an organization and movement that facilitated Black and Brown women joining the reproductive freedom movement, which historically had excluded women of color.

"This Black Girl Magic event was one of the most special events I've been to in a long time. You could not only feel the energy in the room, but you knew that every single human being here was present, eyes fixed on everything everybody had to say," said Sarah Noble, Founder and Principal of BeNoble.

"The pulling together of this by the phenomenal Planned Parenthood of Wisconsin staff really has been amazing. Totally unexpected. It's good to have unexpected, wonderful things occur.

"So as a Black woman, to be acknowledged and for people to see you, it's a big deal and so I thank y'all for that."

Sarah Noble has been actively working for justice for more than 30 years, working for justice with countless numbers of women of color and their families.

She has held many leadership positions, including Founder and former Executive Director for the Reproductive Justice Collective.

She has coached and trained many notably, successful leaders and served on several local and national coalitions, committees, and boards.

The Black Girl Magic Brunch, held annually in May in Wisconsin, brings together leaders from several industries across Wisconsin to discuss financial and emotional well-being, career development, advancing socioeconomic mobility, and more.

The women in attendance were able to meet with speakers and influencers, as well as network with each other, allowing for connections and conversations.

"Black Girl Magic Brunch is an opportunity to celebrate the magic of Black women in Wisconsin showing up, choosing excellence, and making change," said Ayomi Obuseh, PPWI's Black Constituency Organizer.

"Planned Parenthood of Wisconsin is incredibly proud to celebrate the women who strive, and push to bring Wisconsin to be a healthier, stronger place to live for Black women."

Other awardees include T.R. Williams who received the Black Woman of the Year award, Black

PPWI Staff and Awardees at the Black Girl Magic Brunch

BBB Tip: Choose the best option for your move

The Better Business Bureau offers four tips that reveal the best ways to approach moving from one place to another more efficiently!

How can you choose the best moving option – one that fits both your needs and your budget? Getting to know your options (and the perks and downsides of each one) can help you save money and safely transport your belongings.

Option 1: Full-Service Moving Companies

Hiring a full-service moving company is a lower-stress way of getting all of your belongings from Point A to Point B, advises Nerd Wallet, a BBB Accredited Business.

Professional movers manage the logistics of loading, driving, and unloading your things for you. Some full-service movers even offer extra services like packing.

Trained movers can pack and transport large, and/or delicate items (think pianos and antique furniture) in a safe way.

They are also equipped to move items into hard to access areas, such as up stairs or down long, narrow driveways. Best of all, the heavy lifting will be done for you.

The downsides of hiring a full-service moving company are the cost and the time it takes to complete a move. This is usually the most expensive way to move your belongings.

If you are making a long-distance move, it may take movers several days to deliver your items as well.

Option 2: Shipping Your Belongings

If you've managed to whittle your belongings down to a few boxes or suitcases, shipping them is a cheap and easy way to move—especially if you are moving across country, points out Consumer Affairs.

Big name package shippers often charge a premium to ship large or heavy boxes.

But other companies, like long-distance bus lines, may offer cheaper services. Some shippers are even willing to pick up boxes from your home and drop them off at your new address for an extra fee.

While cost and ease are two big pros with this method, there are a few cons too. Boxes shipped by ground may take several days or even a few weeks to arrive at their destination. In addition, this isn't a good option if your boxes contain items that are fragile.

If you are flying to your new home city, check with several airlines before you buy your ticket.

Some airlines offer reasonable prices on additional checked bags, but you'll probably need to do some searching to find the best deal.

Option 3: DIY Truck Rentals

If you have larger items, but still want to take a DIY approach to moving, a truck rental company could be a good choice.

Truck rental companies will provide you with a truck or trailer of an appropriate size, but you'll be responsible for the packing, loading, driving and unloading.

This option is less expensive than hiring professional movers. It may even be cheaper than hiring a moving container service depending on how far you are going. Move.org has calculated average prices for DIY moves.

That said, loading and unloading a truck is physically demanding. If you have any large or unwieldy items, they could be damaged if they aren't packed, loaded, and unloaded correctly. To address this, you can always hire movers help you load and unload the truck.

You'll also need to feel comfortable driving a moving truck, which is probably much larger and heavier than your regular vehicle.

This can be stressful even for very capable drivers, and you might need to purchase extra insurance in case of accidents or damage.

If you choose this route, be sure to add gas, insurance, and lodging to the quote the truck rental company gives you for an accurate view of the total cost.

Option 4: Moving Container Services

If you don't feel comfortable driving a rental truck to your new home, moving container services could be an ideal option.

Moving container services bring a portable storage container to your home. You fill it up. Then, the company transports it to your new location, where you unload your belongings.

These companies usually give you a few days to load and unload. They can also store your container for a fee if you need time to find a new house in your new city.

They are less costly than a full-service moving company, and you don't have to worry about driving a big truck to your new home.

To take advantage of moving container services, you'll need space. If you're current or new home has no parking or a driveway on a steep incline, this option might not be feasible.

Some moving container services offer movers to load and unload your items if you pay an extra fee.

However, in many cases, paying the fee will make the cost of the moving container service as expensive or even more so than full-service moving company moving company.

To get an idea of pricing for this option, see this article on Move.org.

Barbara Toles Wins District 2 Commissioner Slot on SDC Board

Former state lawmaker to serve for another term steering the policy direction, advocate for the SDC allocation of resources and provision of services to Milwaukee residents

Former state Representative Barbara Toles recently won election to represent the Social Development Commission's (SDC) District 2 for another term.

As a commissioner Toles will represent Milwaukee residents who are eligible for SDC services and resources.

The elections were conducted in three regions of Milwaukee with SDC placing voting centers in each of its offices serving the respective districts. SDC's Teutonia and Northwest offices served as polling stations. Also included in the polling list was the Mary Ryan Boys and Girls Centre.

Ella Dunbar who coordinated one election site at the Mary Ryan location, noted that the turnout was lower than usual in the earlier part of voting, but picked up later in the day.

"Sometimes it takes longer for people to come in and vote, but they do eventually show up and vote to have a representative for their respective districts," she said.

According to SDC's Abra Fortson, Toles will continue to add vigor to her already vigorous contributions to the commission's board now that her selection has been ratified by the board's governance committee.

Representation of our low-income residents enhances SDC's credibility with legislators who are creating, reviewing and passing legislation that affect those living in poverty. District Commissioners are also able to raise matters on behalf of their district that the full Board may not be aware of.

The SDC Board of Commissioners consists of representatives of three different sectors of the community. One-third of the members are appointed by public officials and a third are appointed by the private sector. The final third represents the voices of low-income residents of Milwaukee County. These six commissioners represent six districts of Milwaukee County.

TINA TURNER

Legendary rock'n'roll singer dies at age 83

By Laura Snapes, courtesy of The Guardian

Tina Turner, the pioneering rock'n'roll star who became a pop behemoth in the 1980s, has died aged 83 after a long illness.

She had suffered ill health in recent years, being diagnosed with intestinal cancer in 2016 and having a kidney transplant in 2017.

Turner affirmed and amplified Black women's formative stake in rock'n'roll, defining that era of music to the extent that Mick Jagger admitted to taking inspiration from her high-kicking, energetic live performances for his stage persona.

After two decades of working with her abusive husband, Ike Turner, she struck out alone and – after a few false starts – became one of the defining pop icons of the 1980s with the album Private Dancer. Her life was chronicled in three memoirs, a biopic, a jukebox musical, and in 2021, the acclaimed documentary film, Tina.

(Above): Tina Turner performs in March 1987 in Paris during the first concert of a world tour. Photograph: Bertrand Guay/AFP/Getty Images

In a statement on Wednesday night, her publicist Bernard Doherty said: “Tina Turner, the ‘Queen of Rock’n Roll’ has died peacefully today at the age of 83 after a long illness in her home in Kusnacht near Zurich, Switzerland. With her, the world loses a music legend and a role model.”

In 2018, scholar Daphne A Brooks wrote for the Guardian: “Turner’s musical character has always been a charged combination of mystery as well as light, melancholy mixed with a ferocious vitality that often flirted with danger.”

Turner was born Anna Mae Bullock on 26 November 1939 and raised in Nutbush, Tennessee, where she recalled picking cotton with her family as a child. She sang in the tiny town’s church choir, and as a teenager talked – or rather, sang – her way into Ike’s band in St Louis: he had declined her request to join until he heard her seize the microphone during a Kings of Rhythm performance for a rendition of BB King’s You Know I Love You.

After her vocal talents became apparent, Ike gave her the name Tina Turner – and trademarked it in case she left him and he wanted to replace her in his act. He quickly became abusive: when Turner tried to leave the group early on after having got a sense of his mercurial character, he hit her with a wooden shoe stretcher.

“My relationship with Ike was doomed the day he figured out I was going to be his moneymaker,” Turner wrote in her 2018 biography My Love Story. “He needed to control me, economically and psychologically, so I could never leave him.”

She made her recorded debut under the name with the Ike and Tina Turner single A Fool in Love in July 1960, which broke the US Top 30 and started a run of respectable chart success. But it was their live performances that made them a sensation.

Ike toured the Ike and Tina Turner Revue aggressively on the Chitlin’ Circuit – including in front of desegregated audiences, such was their commercial power. In 1964, they signed to Warner Bros imprint Loma Records, which released their first album to chart: Live! The Ike & Tina Turner Show.

In the second half of the 60s, the duo were courted by many of came to their Las Vegas residency.

They were a chart-making, Grammy-winning force in the 1970s – a run that came to an end when Turner left Ike, who had been consistently violent and unfaithful, in 1976. Her last single with the group was Baby, Get It On, from the 1975 film adaptation of the Who’s rock opera Tommy, in which she starred as Acid Queen, a character of the same name of her second solo album.

In the divorce, finalised in 1978, Turner came away with just two cars and the rights to her stage name. “Ike fought a little bit because he knew what I would do with it,” she said in the documentary Tina.

Turner, who had already released two solo records, continued pursuing a solo career, though it would take until she released her fifth album, 1984’s Private Dancer, for her to supplant the old image of the shimmying rock’n’roller – and escape premature relegation to the oldies circuit – with one of a powerful, mullet-sporting, leather-clad pop icon.

In the documentary Tina, she described Private Dancer as her debut. “I don’t consider it a comeback,” she said. “Tina had never rock’s biggest names. Phil Spector produced the 1966 single River Deep – Mountain High; they supported the Rolling Stones in the UK and later the US, and stars including David Bowie, Sly Stone, Cher, Elvis Presley and Elton John

Turner credited Buddhism and particularly the practice of chanting with positively affecting her life in the 1980s. Outside music, she starred in Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome opposite Mel Gib-

TINA TURNER'S TWENTY GREATEST SONGS—RANKED!

By Alexis Petridis, courtesy of The Guardian

20. Ike and Tina Turner – Stop the Wedding/Please, Please, Please (1970)
- Ike and Tina Turner’s 60s singles hit intermittently, but their reputation rested on a live show they honed relentlessly touring the chitlin’ circuit. This lo-fi but extraordinarily powerful eight-minute medley – taped in front of a rowdy audience in the mid-60s, released in 1970 – gives you at least a flavour.
19. Ike and Tina Turner – Workin’ Together (1970)
- The pair weren’t known for their ballads – they dealt largely in high-octane soul – but the mid-tempo title track of their 1970 album is fantastic. Probably enough, given that the violently abusive Ike wrote it, it’s a plea for universal brotherhood and unity, given a rasping urgency by his wife’s voice.
18. Ike and Tina Turner – A Fool in Love (1960)
- Ike may have had the longer-standing musical pedigree, but from the moment he hooked up with his wife-to-be, there was little doubting who the star of the show was. On their debut single, it sounds as though the recording equipment can barely cope with the sheer power of Tina’s voice.
17. Ike and Tina Turner – Up in Heah (1972)
- Up in Heah’s fuzzed-out rock/southern soul hybrid has a dis-

- tinct gospel tint to its backing vocals, which fits perfectly. Written by Tina, the song is effectively a more brutal take on Son of a Preacher Man, with the gender roles reversed: the pastor’s daughter’s dalliance ends with her “disowned by my family ... the daughter of evil”.
16. Tina Turner – The Best (1989)
- This was picked on Desert Island Discs by Gordon Ramsay and Lord Digby Jones – you can somehow imagine both of them singing The Best to themselves in the mirror, can’t you? – but let’s try to ignore that. Although it may seem an obvious smash hit now, Bonnie Tyler’s original flopped; its ubiquity is down to Tina Turner’s performance.
15. Tina Turner – Typical Male (1986)
- Her album Break Every Rule was perhaps too transparent an attempt to ape Private Dancer’s success: the same team, more songwriting contributions from Mark Knopfler and David Bowie, another Al Green cover (cut from the final tracklisting). But opener Typical Male is strong, its little-me coquetry undercut by the eyeroll of the chorus’s final line.
14. Ike and Tina Turner – Sweet Rhode Island Red (1974)
- The follow-up to Nutbush City Limits was a relative flop, though it should have been as big a hit as its predecessor. The title track powers along on a relentless guitar and electric piano groove. There’s a great of-its-era synth solo, and Tina’s vocal is magnificent: “I’m 34-38 and 22 at the tummy.”
13. Tina Turner – We Don’t Need Another Hero (Thunderdome) (1985)
- We Don’t Need Another Hero* goes all-out for epic – squealing guitars, ambient synths, a children’s choir – but it’s a tough call for a vocalist: the lyrics don’t make much sense divorced from the Mad Max film it soundtracked (“all we want is life beyond Thunderdome!”). Yet Turner’s full-on performance somehow makes it work.
12. Tina Turner – Whatever You Want (1996)
- As the 80s turn into the 90s, it takes a degree of searching to dig out the gold on Tina’s professional yet increasingly bland albums. But the epic Whatever You Want – Trevor Horn in the producer’s chair, gradually whipping up a storm of juddering electronics – is worth the effort.

son in 1985. She published her first memoir, the global bestseller I, Tina, in 1986, which was later adapted in to the 1993 film What’s Love Got to Do With It? starring Angela Bassett as Turner.

In 1995, she sang the theme tune to the James Bond film GoldenEye.

Turner announced her retirement in 2000, a year after releasing her final solo album, Twenty Four Seven, though she would return to the stage in 2008, performing at the Grammy awards with Beyoncé, and for a final tour to mark 50 years of her career.

That was conclusively the end. “I was just tired of singing and making everybody happy,” she told the New York Times in 2019 . “That’s all I’d ever done in my life.”

Turner collaborated on the musical Tina with Phyllida Lloyd, which premiered in 2018 and won Laurence Olivier and Tony awards for its respective West End and Broadway runs. “This musical is not about my stardom,” Turner said of the production. “It is about the journey I took to get there. Each night I want audiences to take away from the theatre that you can turn poison into medicine.”

Turner often said she did not relate to the “invincible” persona that others put on her. “I don’t necessarily want to be a ‘strong’ person,” she told the New York Times. “I had a terrible life. I just kept going. You just keep going, and you hope that something will come.”

In 2020, a remix of her 1984 hit What’s Love Got to Do With It? by the Norwegian producer Kygo made Turner the first artist to have a UK Top 40 hit in seven consecutive decades. In 2021, she was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame as a solo artist, 30 years after Ike and Tina Turner’s induction.

Turner is survived by her second husband, German music executive Erwin Bach. They married in July 2013 after 27 years together and lived in Switzerland. In 2013, Turner renounced her US citizenship to become a Swiss citizen.

Her first child, Craig Raymond Turner, died in July 2018. Last year, Turner said that following her other son Ronnie’s death at the age of 62 that he “left the world far too early”. She is survived by two of Ike Turner’s sons, Ike Turner Jr and Michael Turner, whom she adopted.

In 2020, Turner told the Guardian that despite having some serious health problems, the last 10 years of her life had embodied her ideal vision of happiness.

“True and lasting happiness comes from having an unshakable, hopeful spirit that can shine, no matter what,” she said . “That’s what I’ve achieved, and it is my greatest wish to help others become truly happy as well.”

11. Ike and Tina Turner – Sexy Ida Parts One and Two (1974)
- Penned by Tina – and improbably featuring Marc Bolan on guitar during the instrumental Part Two – the humid, horny funk of Sexy Ida is proof that, however horrific their private life, in the studio Ike and Tina could turn it out right until the end of their partnership.
10. Tina Turner – Let’s Stay Together (1983)
- Tina’s big 80s comeback hit works because it significantly alters Al Green’s original, the smooth instrumentation replaced with surprisingly icy electronics, the order of the verses flipped, the tone changed from a gentle expression of fealty to desperate pleading. The sense of her grabbing an opportunity and giving it everything she’s got is inescapable.
9. Tina Turner – GoldenEye (1995)
- Bono and the Edge got the Bond theme gig when Swedish pop-reggae band Ace of Base pulled out – which boggles the mind slightly – but GoldenEye is a pretty good replacement. Tina alights on the song’s distinct sass, and the throaty high note she hits at the end is fantastic.
8. BEF – Ball of Confusion ft Tina Turner (1982)
- The track that reinvented Tina’s career – it led to a new record deal, and thus Private Dancer – turns the Temptations’ psych-soul classic into synth-driven funk far edgier than her subsequent output, with Britfunkers Beggar and Co on brass and post-punk hero John McGeoch providing abstract feedback-heavy guitar. And Tina nails it. Magic.
7. Tina Turner – Acid Queen (1976)
- Elton John had the big hit from Ken Russell’s film of Tommy – with a potent reworking of Pinball Wizard – but Tina’s take on Acid Queen offers the soundtrack’s biggest transformation, turning the Who’s original into supremely ballsy soul. The version you want is the tighter, tougher take on her solo album of the same name.
6. Tina Turner – Private Dancer (1984)
- Written by Mark Knopfler, Private Dancer hits the same note of slick but affecting melancholy as Dire Straits’ Romeo and Juliet or Your Lastest Trick. Its middle eight allows Tina to let rip, but her skill here is in quietly suggesting that the protagonist’s optimistic dreams of wealth and love aren’t going to come true.
5. Tina Turner – Whole Lotta Love (1975)
- Of all Ike and Tina’s rock covers, her solo version of Whole Lotta Love is the most striking, precisely because it turns the Led Zeppelin original inside out – from cocksure strut to atmospheric, string-laden Isaac Hayes-esque funk, while the vocal deals in yearning and ache rather than swagger.
4. Ike and Tina Turner – River Deep – Mountain High (1966)
- The crowning glory of Phil Spector’s maximalist wall of sound approach, or the cluttered breaking point when his deliberately OTT production style finally became too OTT for its own good? Either way, no one can argue with the brilliance of the song, or the awesome power of Tina’s voice.
3. Ike and Tina Turner – Proud Mary (1971)
- A cover that became the definitive version. Creedence Clearwater Revival’s original feels oddly understated next to Tina’s all-guns-blazing approach, complete with explanatory spoken-word intro: “We’re gonna take the beginning of this song and do it easy, then we’re gonna do the finish rough,” she offers, before proceeding to do exactly that.
2. Ike and Tina Turner – Nutbush City Limits (1973)
- A song both nostalgic – for Tina’s titular home town – and entirely of the moment for 1973. Over a supremely funky clavinet and horns, its fat, compressed guitar sound and siren-like synth suggests a familiarity with British glam rock. “Absolutely sensational,” offered one contemporary critic, quite rightly. (But steer clear of Tina’s ill-advised 90s house remake.)
1. Tina Turner – What’s Love Got to Do With It (1984)
- Devotees of Tina Turner’s 60s and 70s work understandably struggle with her later oeuvre: it’s harder to locate the grit that made her famous in the music that made her a solo superstar. But it’s there on What’s Love Got to Do With It, a masterpiece of mainstream pop songwriting that was, perhaps mercifully, rejected by Bucks Fizz and Cliff Richard. Amid the Mellow Magic production – synthesised pan pipes! cod-reggae guitar! – Tina’s voice brings the pain and bitter experience. Weary in the verses, defiant in the chorus, she fully inhabits the lyric’s cynicism: it’s her theme song for a reason.
