WISCONSIN'S LARGEST AFRICAN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

FIRST PERSON: WISCONSIN BLACK HOLOCAUST MUSEUM'S CLAYBOURN BENSON PRAISES LOCAL TELEVISION STATION FOR SUPPORTING MKE'S JUNETEENTH DAY CELEBRATION

I wanted to extend my personal thank you to TMJ-TV4 executives and staff for your commitment to Milwaukee's Juneteenth Day celebrations and parade over the past several years.

Your support of and dedication to this celebratory event—demonstrated by your promos and news coverage of the Juneteenth Day activities and your two-hour coverage of the parade give critical legitimacy to not only the holiday, but to your commitment to the community.

TMJ4 has given life to the celebration of Juneteenth Day, and in doing so, has helped garner more support and bring out more politicians, community leaders, vendors, and residents—black, brown, and white.

It has even tempered the behavior of our young people because they seem to appreciate the significance more than in previous years.

"TMJ4 HAS GIVEN LIFE TO THE CELEBRATION OF JUNETEENTH DAY, AND IN DOING SO, HAS HELPED GARNER MORE SUPPORT AND BRING OUT MORE POLITICIANS, COMMUNITY LEADERS, VENDORS, AND RESIDENTS—BLACK, BROWN, AND WHITE. IT HAS EVEN TEMPERED THE BEHAVIOR OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE BECAUSE THEY SEEM TO APPRECIATE THE SIGNIFICANCE MORE THAN IN PREVIOUS YEARS." —BENSON (PICTURED AT LEFT)

I AM JUNETEENTH FREEDOM BALL HELD!

It was an evening of culture, fellowship, networking and fun for the four hundred guests who descended on the Milwaukee County Zoo's Peck Pavilion for the recent 'I Am Juneteenth' Freedom Ball. During the event, seven community individuals received the 'Because of Them We Can' awards for their contributions to Black Milwaukee in a number of areas, from community activism, business, and cultural contributions.

This year's awardees were (pictured above in no particular order with Northcott Neighborhood House Executive Director Tony A. Kearney, Sr.): Brew City Corvette Club, Bria Grant, Torre Johnson, Doug Kelley, Tamara Hogans, Yvonne Kemp, and Tadashi Roberts.

Two other awards were also presented. The Community Service Award went to Eli Bliffert. The Father of the Year Award was presented to Fred Collier. Ball attendees also had the opportunity to see the 'I Am Juneteenth' mobile marking truck.

The truck will be all over the community and city for the next several days leading up to Juneteenth, to let people know the Festival is coming and to join the community in celebrating the day the last enslaved African Americans in Galveston, Texas learned they were free. The 2023 'I Am Juneteenth' scholarship winners were also introduced.—Photos by Yvonne Kemp. Above photo by Martinez Milton Component of State budget will put a bulldozer to the wall of educational apartheid!

While many have reservations about the proposed state budget revenue-sharing provisions, several educational inclusions could conceivably park a bulldozer in front of the wall of educational apartheid.

In fact, two budget items may be the most significant educational empowerment initiatives since the late Polly Williams warded off opposition from fellow Democrats, the teachers union, and the NAACP to shepherd the parental school choice initiative to Governor Tommy Thompson for his signature.

Thompson was rewarded with the largest Black vote for a Republican in state history. The African American community was rewarded with access to educational options, which has resulted in thousands of academic successes.

Zoom ahead three decades:

In part, as a result of intense lobbying by a coalition of groups, including one formed by educational options czar Howard Fuller, charter and private schools participating in Williams' vaunted Milwaukee Parental Choice Program (MPCP) moved closer to financial security and equity with their government schools counterparts (competitors).

Well, actually, not closer, as the deal brokered with a diffident Governor, Tony Evers (an ardent opponent of school choice) and Republicans, who

M.O.M.S. TOUR COMES TO THE 'CREAM CITY' A non-profit, faith-based mentoring program designed to equip single mothers with the skills to build and provide healthy, stable homes for their children made a stop in Milwaukee recently at an annual community babyshower. The M.O.M.S. (Making Our Moms Successful) program, is an initiative that travels from state to state to collaborate with faith-based organizations. The M.O.M.S. tour stopped at the Daniels Mardak Boys & Girls Club and teamed up with Anthem Blue Cross Blue Shield of Wisconsin, C.H. Mason health clinic, and a host of community partners. The program focuses on reducing high maternal mortality and morbidity rates, particularly among Black and indigenous (American Indian/Alaska Native moms). This transformative tour brings hope and change to women of color to the heart of cities all across the nation. —Photos by Yvonne Kemp

After attending Milwaukee public schools, she went on to earn her first undergraduate degree at Concordia University.

Initially LeBourgeois planned to pursue a career in nursing. After enlisting in the Army reserves where she served for six years, for a time she was stationed at Milwaukee's Veteran Affairs Hospital.

"Working at the VA as a medical assistant provided me with good insight into nursing and allowed me to see that while I wanted to stay in the healthcare industry, I could more effectively help people by working behind the scenes," said LeBourgeois.

LeBourgeois continued her education and ultimately landed at Milwaukee Health Services, Inc. (MHSI), as the organization's Chief Operating Officer, a position she has held for 6 years.

WBHSM director lauds TV station for support of Juneteenth celebration

The corporate community has stepped up to gain appreciation of this new federal holiday.

Even the police seem to be there to enjoy the day rather than their previous mandatory patrolling.

As TMJ4 actively engaged in this new federal holiday and promotes this festival, you help let viewers know that this is not just about the parade and festival, but this holiday helps us understand that we have responsibility as equal citizens of this country, to vote, get an education and be good citizens.

Your coverage brings a positive energy and spirit to Juneteenth Day and says we have a vested interest in making this work.

Your 'all in' engagement demonstrates to the entire community that you not only recognize and respect this historic day, but fully embrace it.

As a former employee of the station, I recognize the tremendous allocation of resources it takes to host a two-hour parade, and coordinate the various news stories the station has featured over the past few weeks. Kudos to the TMJ4 team and Tony Kearney, Northcott Neighborhood Executive Director.

The coverage of the parade certainly broadens the audience who may desire to know more about Juneteenth Day or may want to attend and for whatever reason are unable to.

Moreover, your re-airing of the parade allows volunteers and individuals who are in the parade, to relive, witness and enjoy the full experience after the event.

Thanks again for setting an example of true corporate sponsorship and for creating a spirit of collaboration between residents and the business community. You set a high bar for everyone involved, including our youth. Your actions helped make our Juneteenth Day celebration a spectacular day of food, fun, and fellowship for everyone!

SIGNIFYIN': Component of State budget will put a bulldozer to the wall of educational apartheid!

control the legislature, increased school funding significantly.

The MPCP will see a funding increase between $1,000 and $2,000 per student.

Howard formed the Black Coalition for Equitable School Funding, of which I was honored to be a part, months ago to provide a Black voice to the budget debates and advocate for our students.

While the MPCP schools and charters have outperformed 'government' schools, they did it with far less than their competition. But that paradigm is not sustainable.

Despite propaganda to the contrary, African American students attending charters and MPCP schools (which would make MPCP the second largest 'district' in the state) have higher graduation rates, test scores in reading and math, and college acceptance. A couple of schools had 100% college acceptance!

Milwaukee College Prep's (MCP) two schools are the only Milwaukee K-8 schools listed on the state's top ten.

My grandson graduated from MCP last Saturday, alongside the offspring of Black entrepreneurs, educators (including some MPS teachers), and community leaders, all of whom had the resources to attend top-tier White academies or MPS specialties. Instead, they chose MCP for a myriad of reasons.

Despite those accomplishments, the status quo has treated charters and private schools in the MPCP like pedophiles at a children's summer camp. The status quo includes the Democratic Party and the 'Negrocracy,' both of whom are under the thumb of the teacher's union.

The Black Coalition for Equitable Education Funding sought, as Howard noted during one of our early meetings, "to have Black students treated equally."

He noted state funding disparities that limit outcomes and threaten many schools' survival.

MPCP and charter schools are vastly underfunded in comparison to Milwaukee Public Schools. As such, those schools unable to secure outside funding are severely disadvantaged.

While most MPCPs and charters have proven to provide passports to many of our children, many do so on budgets that leave little room for extras, much less expansion.

And operating costs continue to escalate. Inflation takes a bigger bite than Biden's economic policies, and the pandemic forced many schools to close, while MPS teachers were allowed 'time off,' could 'teach' from home, and had a guaranteed income despite the outcome.

Having served on the boards of Harambee and Messmer, I can attest to the actual educational costs are nearly double the state allocation.

How vast is the funding gap?

This year an elementary school participating in the MPCP receives $8,986 in state and federal funding. A high school received $9,632, and a charter $10,673.

Conversely, the Milwaukee Public (government) Schools received $17,717, even though the district is ranked among the worst districts in the country!

Nearly half of MPS's funding comes from federal coffers and grants.

Some advocate Nicolet school district (located in the suburb of Glendale), which sustain itself on a mere $22,901, reflect the actual amount needed to provide a 'quality' education.

The second historic budget educational initiative is a $50 million investment in a landmark reading overhaul.

Reading, or more accurately, the inability to read, is at the core of Black dysfunction and many social ills.

Black students who fail to read at accepted proficiency levels are more prone to drop out of school, join the Culture of Poverty, commit crimes, and be locked into low-paying jobs.

Those unable to read within two years of grade level are trapped on the 'plantation' from which few escape (rappers, drug dealers, and athletes being the exception.)

And, for those who can't figure out the correlation between our social ills and education, consider that Milwaukee has the lowest reading proficiency rates for Black fourth and eighth graders in the United States of America and the highest Black male incarceration rate.

MKE also hosts the highest poverty, male unemployment, maternal death, and homicide rates.

The reading initiative put in the budget by Republicans (yes, them) is modeled after the Mississippi (of ALL states) reading program that pulled its poor Black students from the bottom of the pile to a spot near the top.

The initiative replaces 'whole reading' with phonics-based instruction, among other models.

Millions will also be allocated to train teachers, establish an office of literacy, and create teams of literacy coaches.

Those coaches will be engaged with students starting in kindergarten.

Whether we want to admit it or not, most (yes, most) of our children begin school handicapped by poverty, poor parenting (yeah, I said it), and dysfunctional families.

Poverty, or more specifically the 'Culture of Poverty,' adversely impacts our children. Many (if not most) of whom start school unprepared---handicapped. They recognize one-tenth of the word of their middle-class counterparts, and many don't know the alphabet, colors, nor have the ability to count beyond the number 10, according to several social workers.

Far too many parent(s) do not recognize their role in the educational process---that unwritten contract where they MUST play a supportive role.

It's the responsibility of the parent to make sure their child(red) know the basics. If a child doesn't know the basics, they will face significant challenges in school, no matter the type.

But 72% of Black households are headed by an overwhelmed Black woman. Many of these sister's are working long hours, often holding two jobs to keep a roof over her children's heads and food on the table. Unless she has a good support system (extended family members) where can she find the time to teach her kids 'the basics.'

Y'all can put pride before facts. You can blame racism or the water, but the reality is we contribute mightily to this tragedy.

That's why progress will be reported starting at kindergarten, and measured throughout elementary school, along with district compliance under the education initiative.

Those measures not only bring to the fore the complexity of the problem but also the necessity of bold actions to turn this abysmal situation around.

Most educational experts I talked to over the last few days agree those provisions are essential to pulling down the walls of educational apartheid.

They agree with provisions to publicize student progress--- third-grade reading scores---on state report cards and ending social promotions.

That last provision, eliminating 'social promotions' would create a much-needed--albeit painful-- policy in which students who cannot read by third grade will not be promoted.

Currently, students are promoted for their conduct rather than academic achievement.

Thus, students reach high school without the ability to read introductory textbooks. Many become disoriented, while others become disruptive. It forces most Black males to drop out.

Obviously, many naïve and culturally dysfunctional parents will object to provision. And, I can guarantee, the teachers union, Democratic Party, and the Negrocracy will cry 'racism.'

They will fight that provision myopically declaring it will disproportionately impact Black children.

To that asinine objection, I echo what several 'true' Black leaders, including Call to Action leader Saleem El Amin, said Tuesday: 'So what?'

We will be disproportionately impacted, but that's because a disproportionate percentage of Black children can't read!

And, as El Amin explained during a Call to Action meeting, our community has been destroyed---some believe intentionally---because the system has allowed this calamity to continue. Moreover, opponents who have begun pressuring Evers to veto the provisions have not offered an alternative.

I've been waiting for three decades for Democrats, the teachers union, the Negrocracy (including the NAACP that sued to stop the MPCP), to acknowledge this tragedy, much less offer a solution.

That might change, however. NAACP state President Wendell Harris, a former MPS director, has advocated for Milwaukee to adopt the Mississippi model.

When you hear the complaints, ask yourself what is the alternative? Continued failure? Maintaining current policies, including social promotions that guarantee failure and enhanced membership among the 'Urban Terrorists'?

To me, that paradigm is racist. And if the teachers union, and state superintendent, who has already decried the proposal because she is under the union's thumb, object, they are complicit in this racist paradigm.

Final points:

We must question the rationale---hidden motives-- for the opposition. Why has the union and state superintendent of Public Instruction fought reform packages that could potentially reverse failure? Is it because they are offered by Republicans?

Or is it because they want to maintain control, job security, and benefits, even if that comes at the expense of our children.

Secondly, we need to ask why the Republicans continue to propose initiatives while Democrats hide their heads in the sand or, worse still, support the failing status quo.

I don't expect a unified community to stand up against the status quo. Our history shows we have never taken advantage of our collective power, much less Nyame (God's) investment in our tribe. Sadly, I don't foresee a renaissance in the future.

It has always been a small group standing at the vanguard, often facing opposition that looks like us. I do hope and pray that the naïve and gullible remain muted this time, so those who care about our children and community can be heard. Hotep.

Fellowship Open announces 2023 Civic Leadership Awardees

Three distinguished leaders to be recognized at annual meeting

Randy Bryant

The Fellowship Open, Wisconsin's premiere corporate and community golf event, recently announced its 2023 Civic Leadership Awardees – Eric L. Conley, Executive Vice President of Froedtert Health and President, Froedtert Hospital, Reginald Newson, Chief Community Impact and Advocacy Officer, Ascension Wisconsin, and Randy D. Bryant, President, and CEO of Ten Chimneys Foundation.

Each year it is the tradition of the Fellowship Open to recognize at its annual meeting Wisconsin leaders who are having significant impact in our city and state.

These individuals reflect the very best of the traditions of the Fellowship Open, which for more than two decades has emerged singularly as the most prominent business and civic affairs engagement and advancement initiative in our community.

Eric Conley is a renowned healthcare leader acknowledged by his peers as one of the most powerful advocates and spokespersons for ensuring access to quality health care.

Reggie Newson has made lasting imprint in both health care and governmental affairs having advised former governors and led initiatives around philanthropy and civic engagement.

Milwaukee native Randy Bryant has a long and storied career in corporate business including international leadership.

He serves as President and CEO of Ten Chimneys Foundation and has led that organization to procuring the theatre community's most laudable talent.

These three distinguished leaders have demonstrated exceptional professionalism in community commitment and admirable governance within their respective spheres of influence and beyond.

Their guidance and influence have witnessed enormous positive impact in healthcare, governmental affairs, and the arts.

"Eric, Reggie, and Randy reinforce the reality that Wisconsin is producing and retaining some of the nation's most outstanding community servants and brilliant thought leaders," remarked Fellowship Open President John W. Daniels III.

"The Fellowship Open has prospered as a community resource because we have been able to connect our next generation of leaders and influencers to those making real impact today.

"We salute these exceptional visionaries with great pride and anticipate progressive advancement from their collective contribution for years to come."

About the Fellowship Open

The Fellowship Open was founded in 2000 by a group of corporate and community leaders to engage and inspire Milwaukee youngsters toward professional careers and to foster support for diversity and inclusion in Wisconsin's civic and business communities.

The event's list of honorary chairs includes Wisconsin's most prominent professionals in business, government, and civic affairs. Each year, its ranks expand with individuals that bring outstanding attributes and commitment to the event.

Over the past 23 years, the Fellowship Open has contributed more than $4.5 million to programs and projects supporting over 130 youth-serving organizations and initiatives throughout Wisconsin.

About the Awards

The Civic Leadership Awards were established by the Honorary Chairs of the Fellowship Open to celebrate the incredible work of individuals whose efforts improve the very fabric of our community in tangible and direct ways. This recognition carries on a tradition established in the creation of the Fellowship Open which has recognized Hall of Fame, Olympic, World Champions, and legendary athletic figures like Henry Aaron, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Oscar Robertson, LeRoy Butler, Bud Selig, and many others since its inception in 2000.

The Fellowship Open is particularly thrilled to highlight these noteworthy civic leaders in 2023.

The awards will be presented during the Fellowship Open annual meeting June 20, 2023, at Robert W. Baird's corporate headquarters in downtown Milwaukee and will be attended by Wisconsin's most influential community and civic leaders.

Another unique tradition of the occasion is the commissioning of a personal portrait of each awardee. The portraits are then displayed at many Milwaukee corporate, business, educational, and community facilities highlighting these remarkable achievements and promoting professional development for talented youth in our community.

The portraits of this year's awardees will join those of sports legends Tommy Smith, Willie Davis, Herb Kohl, and Bob Dandridge just to name a few.

For additional information, contact Fellowship Open Tournament Director Billy Young @ 414- 614-3109 or billy.young@alivemke.com.

MICHELE LEBOURGEOIS OF MHSI: COMMITMENT TO A HEALTHIER COMMUNITY

tually get to see the positive outcomes of the work we do at MHSI.

The people who come to our facility are not strangers; they are our neighbors and community residents.

We know them and they know us. Oftentimes you never get to see the direct effects or improvements of your efforts. At MHSI, we do get to see the outcomes," said LeBourgeois.

MHSI is an independent, not for profit Federally Qualified Health Center with a mission of providing accessible, quality primary and related health care services to Milwaukee residents, with continuing emphasis on medically underserved families and individuals.

MHSI, since 1989, has been providing medical, dental, podiatry, and behavioral healthcare, in addition to a limited number of specialty services.

With experience serving low-income populations, MHSI is committed to removing barriers and improving health outcomes to promote quality of life and reduce disparities among racial and ethnic communities.

In addition to her oversight of operations at MHSI, LeBourgeois' commitment to the community continues through her membership with Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Inc., where she serves on the Community Services Committee and volunteers to work in events such as the Annual Youth Symposium and community baby showers that are held annually.

"I just enjoy talking and connecting with people. I've learned that there is always some way to help and it does not have to be a huge project. If you find out that there is a need, help can come in the form of connecting people with resources if you can't provide them yourself. Sometimes a simple 'hello' or a smile can help brighten someone's day. So many people are going through so much. People are hurting in our community and each one of us can and should find ways to give back or help someone," said LeBourgeois.

Her desire to help and give back also trickles into her personal life as she enjoys gardening.

"In the summer I have a vegetable and flower garden. We eat the vegetables and give away some of the food we grow," said LeBourgeois.

Milwaukee Health Services, Inc., and Michele LeBourgeois are diamonds, planting seeds of hope and good health in our community.

NEW YORK (AP) — After three years, the pandemic-era freeze on student loan payments will end in late August.

It might seem tempting to just keep not making payments, but the consequences can be severe, including a hit to your credit score and exclusion from future aid and benefits. More than 40 million Americans will have to start making federal student loan payments again at the end of the summer under the terms of a debt ceiling deal approved by Congress.

Millions are also waiting to find out whether the Supreme Court will allow President Joe Biden’s student loan forgiveness plan to go ahead. But payments will resume regardless of what justices decide.

That means tough decisions for many borrowers, especially those in already-difficult financial situations. Experts say that delinquency and bankruptcy should be options of last resort, and that deferment and forbearance — which pause payments, though interest may continue to accrue — are often better in the short term.

WHAT HAPPENS IF I DON’T MAKE STUDENT LOAN PAYMENTS?

Once the moratorium ends, borrowers who can’t or don’t pay risk delinquency and eventually default. That can badly hurt your credit rating and make you ineligible for additional aid and government benefits.

If you’re struggling to pay, advisers first encourage you to check if you qualify for an income-driven repayment plan, which determines your payments by looking at your expenses. You can determine this by visiting the Federal Student Aid website. If you’ve worked for a government agency or a non-profit organization, you could also be eligible for the Public Service Loan Forgiveness Program, which forgives student debt after 10 years.

Carolina Rodriguez, Director of the Education Debt Consumer Assistance Program at the Community Service Society of New York, emphasizes that anyone temporarily unemployed should be able to qualify for a $0 payment plan. And many others qualify based on income and family size.

“The repercussions of falling into delinquency can be pretty severe,” Rodriguez said. “The federal government can administratively intercept tax refunds and garnish wages. And it can affect Social Security, retirement, and disability benefits. Does it make financial sense at that point? Probably not.”

Rodriguez says her organization always advises against deferment or forbearance except once a borrower has exhausted all other options. In the long term, those financial choices offer little benefit, as some loans will continue to accrue interest while deferred.

Abby Shafroth, senior attorney and director of the Student Loan Borrower Assistance Project at the National Consumer Law Center, said that, of the two, deferment is generally a better option.

That’s because interest generally does not accrue on Direct Subsidized Loans, the subsidized portion of Direct Consolidation Loans, Subsidized Federal Stafford Loans, the subsidized portion of FFEL Consolidation Loans, and Federal Perkins Loans. All other federal student loans that are deferred will continue to accrue interest.

“Forbearance allows you to postpone payments without it being held against you, but interest does accrue. So you’re going to see your balance increase every month.”

WHAT ABOUT DECLARING BANKRUPTCY?

For most student loan borrowers, it’s still very difficult to have your loans discharged, or canceled, through bankruptcy. Borrowers must prove a very hard standard of financial circumstances, called “undue hardship.”

“That doesn’t mean people shouldn’t look into it,” Rodriguez said. “But they may not be successful at discharging their loans.”

For borrowers who show that level of financial strain, chances are they have other options, Rodriguez said.

She advises that borrowers make sure they are speaking to a bankruptcy attorney who understands student loan bankruptcy, which requires a different proceeding than other types of bankruptcy.

Shafroth, of the NCLC, says that new guidance on student loan bankruptcy has been coming out in recent years.

“Though it is difficult to get your loans discharged through the bankruptcy process, an increasing number of borrowers are eligible to get their loans discharged that way,” she said. “A lot of people write that off as ‘there’s no way,’ it’s impossible.’ But it’s increasingly possible.”

LOAN GOES INTO DEFAULT?

When you fall behind on a loan by 270 days — roughly 9 months — the loan appears on your credit report as being in default.

“At that point, it’s not just behind, it’s in collections,” Shafroth said. “That’s when you become ineligible to take out new federal student aid. A lot of people go into default because they weren’t able to complete their degree the first time. This prevents them from going back to school.”

Once a loan is in default, it’s subject to the collection processes mentioned above. That means the government can garnish wages (without a court order) to go towards paying back the loan, intercept tax refunds, and seize portions of Social Security checks and other benefit payments.

WHAT ARE OTHER OPTIONS IF I CAN’T MAKE PAYMENTS?

Shafroth said that many borrowers may still be eligible to have loans canceled via a patchwork of programs outside of the Biden administration’s proposed debt relief program.

“If your school closed before you could complete your program, you’re eligible for relief. If your school lied to you or misrepresented the outcome of what your enrolling would be, you can file a borrower defense application, and request your loan be canceled on that basis,” she said. “If you have a disability, you can sometimes have your loans canceled on that basis.”

Shafroth encourages borrowers to look at the Student Aid website to see what their options might be before missing payments.

IN THE MATTER OF THE NAME

Under the Biden administration’s Fresh Start program, borrowers with federal student loans who were in default before the pause have a chance to become current.

Borrowers who were in default will not be subject to collection processes or have wages garnished through about August 2024, or roughly one year after the payment freeze ends. These borrowers have also been granted permission to apply for federal student loans again, to complete degrees. Lastly, these defaulted loans are now being reported to credit bureaus as current.

That said, borrowers must take action if they want to stay out of default after this year-long leniency period ends.

To eliminate your record of default, you should contact the Education Department’s Default Resolution Group online, by phone, or by mail, and ask the group to take the loans out of default via the Fresh Start policy. In four to six weeks, any record of default will be removed from your credit report, and the loans will be placed with a loan servicer. This will also give you access to income-driven repayment plans and Public Service Loan Forgiveness, if applicable.

WHAT IF I WAS BEHIND ON PAYMENTS OR DELINQUENT BEFORE MARCH 2020?

The Fresh Start program also applies to borrowers who were delinquent prior to the payment pause. Those accounts will be considered current, and borrowers will have the option to enroll in income-driven repayment plans that can lower bills to as little as $0, or to apply for deferment, forbearance or bankruptcy.

Men and Families Health Walk Returns to MKE

MKE5K23, a community-driven initiative, announces the annual men and family wellness walk/run on Saturday, July 8, at Fiserv Forum Deer District. This year's event promises to be bigger and better than ever, with the run added to the mix headed up by international marathon runner Gaulien "Gee" Smith.

"MKE5K23 continues the critical process of addressing the disparities experienced by men of color. It is imperative we recognize and address the needs and issues of this long-overlooked population," says Eric Conley, president of Froedtert Hospital and executive vice president, of Froedtert Health.

The MKE5K23 Wellness Walk/Run aims to promote healthy lifestyles and encourage families to spend quality time together. The event is open to all ages and abilities, and participants are encouraged to bring their families and friends to join in the fun.

Registration for the MKE5K23 is now open. Participants can register online at <https://race-roster.com/75294> or in person on the day of the event.
