"WE'VE TURNED THINGS AROUND!"

Milwaukee's first Black city attorney TEARMAN SPENCER has his office moving in the right direction, winning cases and staffing that reflects the diversity of the city!

By Thomas Mitchell, Jr.

Despite a well publicized tumultuous start to his tenure as Milwaukee's first Black city attorney, Tearman Spencer says he has the office moving in the right direction, winning cases that have not only brought in—but saved—millions of dollars.

"We've turned things around, Spencer said in a recent interview. "Now I deserve another four years to really clean it up."

Arguably the biggest win in the 'win column' for Spencer and his office was the JUUL Labs settlement, in which the city and Milwaukee Public Schools received millions of dollars that were part of a multi-billion dollar settlement with the electronic cigarette maker.

JUUL was alleged to have been targeting youth for its e-cigarette products.

Milwaukee was part of a multi-district lawsuit against the company.

Then there's the settlement of a 2020 lawsuit with the family of Seville Smith who, in 2016, was fatally shot by a former Milwaukee Police officer.

The incident sparked several days of civil unrest in the Sherman Park neighborhood.

According to Spencer (who the Milwaukee Community Journal endorses for reelection), the city was able to work out a settlement with the family for less than they had originally asked.

In a federal class action lawsuit settlement with automakers Kia and Hyundai that was filed by the city attorney's office in March of 2023, Milwaukee was awarded a reported $200 million in May of last year, covering eight million vehicles.

The suit claimed Hyundai and Kia failed to equip certain 2011 to 2022 models with adequate anti-theft technology.

But these accomplishments by the city attorney's office take a back seat to what Spencer points to as the biggest accomplishment since he assumed the office after beating long-time City Attorney Grant Langley: staffing his office in a way that reflects the city's diversity.

"Winning cases is part of who we are (as an office). But look-

Daughter of trailblazing judge sworn in as Milwaukee Cnty Supplemental Court Commissioner

Atty. Sheila Parrish-Spence, the daughter of the late Milwaukee County Circuit Court Judge Clarence Parrish, who was the first Black lawyer in the county to win an election, was recently sworn in as a Milwaukee County Supplemental Court Commissioner. She took the oath of office from Circuit Court Judge Ana Berrios-Schroeder. Parrish-Spence posed in the fifth floor courtroom where a picture of her father is. In attendance and watching the ceremony on Zoom were members of Parrish-Spence sorority, Alpha Kappa Alpha; the Cream City Links organization, and Top Ladies of Distinction. Members of her church, St. Mark AME and Christ the King Baptist Church, community residents and Parrish-Spence's son, Jonathan Clarence Parrish Spence and Circuit Court Judge Lena Taylor were also in attendance —Photos by Yvonne Kemp

Early one Sunday morning, as a new day dawned, two Marys pressed their way to a cemetery.

Two women bound by grief and gratitude made their way to the last place they had seen the crucified body of their teacher, Jesus the one who came in the name of the Lord.

In the Gospel according to Matthew 28, Mary Madelene and the other Mary are not carrying oils nor spices.

They are not journeying to the tomb to anoint the body of Jesus properly, an unnamed woman in Matthew 26 has already done that.

Early one Sunday morning, as a new day was dawning, Mary Madelene and the other

EARLY ONE SUNDAY MORNING...

Mary, went to see a monument to the memory of their crucified LORD.

Just before the light cracked through the darkness they found their way to the place designed to memorialize the death of what was and what was not to be.

The Bible says on their way to the place of dead things, to the tomb the earth reeled and rocked under their feet as God's angel came down from heaven, came right up to where they were standing.

He rolled back the stone and then sat on it. Matthew 28:2 In that moment the earth moved, ing like the city is the biggest accomplishment.” Spencer noted the office has also closed a large number of back-logged cases, noting that “every-one deserves a speedy trial.”

Spencer revealed (not too surprisingly) he inherited a “racist office” from his predecessor who, he said, “hired White folks to hate Black folks.”

“When I took office, I had a mass exodus of lawyers to make me look bad,” Spencer said, adding there are a few ‘anti-Spencer’ stragglers who are still with the office, individuals—he said—who have a difficult time working for a Black man.

Saying the office is no longer understaffed, Spencer pointed to several staff improvements, one of which was—believe it or not—giving the offices a fresh coat of paint. “It hadn’t been done so in years,” Spencer said.

Staff birthdays and work anniversaries are being recognized every month. Attorneys in the office were also encouraged to share ideas and concerns.

“We have CLE (Continuing Legal Education) presentations or speakers once a month for our attorneys and administrative staff. Little things mean a lot,” said Spencer.

Spencer was also able to get his staff salary increases after years of stagnant wages.

“This was done before the city did its current wage increases,” Spencer noted, adding he will continue to seek pay increase for his staff.

“We have great people and we hired good,” Spencer said. “We have a diverse staff, which is something the city encourages. We’ve changed the culture of the office. We’ve made it reflect where the community and the city is as it relates to diversity. But we’re just getting started.

“However, we realize some people come to our office to gain experience to move to private practice or other city departments that require a legal background.

“Our department, like other city departments, is subject to staff turnover.”

A recent article in the city’s daily reported Spencer was using only the first letter of his first name on the April 2 election ballot (T. Spencer).

The article even suggested Spencer was doing so to confuse voters and make them think the ‘Spencer’ on his lawn signs strewn across the Black community was referring to Spencer Coggs, who is the city’s treasurer and also running for reelection.

“Milwaukee voters are smart and can see my name is under the ‘city attorney’ section. (There’s) nothing misleading going on,” Spencer said.

MPS Referendum

Spencer Coggs

The Milwaukee Community says you should vote 'NO' on a referendum to increase the city's property tax to support the district asking for an additional $252 million in funding. But many experts, educators, political experts...and concerned parents believe the property tax alone won't fix the problems with MPS which has the some of the worst numbers as it relates to reading and math test scores.

Here are three reasons why African American residents of Milwaukee might consider voting for the Milwaukee Public School Referendum on April 2...

1. Investment in Education Equity:

Voting for the referendum can support efforts to address disparities in education and provide resources to schools that serve predominantly African American communities. The funds allocated through the referendum can be used to improve infrastructure, enhance educational programs, and provide additional support services to ensure that all students have equal access to quality education.

2. Community Empowerment:

Supporting the referendum can be seen as a way to empower the African American community in Milwaukee by advocating for better educational opportunities for its children. By voting in favor of the referendum, residents can have a direct impact on shaping the future of public education in their community and advocating for policies that prioritize the needs of African American students.

3. Closing the Achievement Gap:

The referendum funds can be used to implement initiatives aimed at closing the achievement gap between African American students and their peers.

This could involve investing in programs focused on early childhood education, hiring more diverse and culturally competent educators, providing targeted support for struggling students, and expanding access to advanced coursework and extracurricular activities.

These reasons highlight the potential benefits of supporting the Milwaukee Public School

Referendum for African American residents, emphasizing the importance of investing in education equity, community empowerment, and addressing systemic disparities in the education system. —Milwaukee Branch NAACP and everything they thought they knew about the things of this world shook, shifting their outlook on life and death forever.

EARLY ONE SUNDAY MORNING...

The angel rolled away the stone, the thing set in place to keep them out, the obstacle created to keep them from the knowledge that could change their lives, and sat on it.

The moment the angel made the soul-saving, life-changing, curse-breaking announcement, Do not be afraid; I know that you are looking for Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; for he has been raised, as he said. Matthew 28:5-6a. In that moment new possibilities became available.

A Sunday morning girl's trip to sit at the feet of a monument to the memory of dead hopes, dead dreams, and dead possibilities turned into receiving the announcement that what was dead is ALIVE.

A visit to where they last saw the person who saw them and believed in them, is transformed into an encounter with the Divine and an invitation to live. Live despite all that has died.

Live not among the graveyards, crypts, and mausoleums of this world, but live free from the shame and guilt of sin. Live not in the darkness of disappointment and despair, but in the light of a Resurrected Jesus.

Live in the possibilities birth out of hope in knowing the love of God for you made real in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus, the crucified Savior and Resurrected King.

This Resurrection Sunday, I pray that you will come to know and to accept the redeeming love of God made available in Christ Jesus. I pray that the dawn of a new day will take hold of your life.

I pray that a new season in God will open your heart, your mind, and your spirit to new possibilities, and new life knowing that the God of all creation has defeated death, and has made all things new, beginning with Jesus, and continuing with you. Amen.
