Oscar winner Lou Gossett, Jr. epitomized supreme talent, Black pride, and love for his African roots!

Lou, Lou, Lou, we gonna miss ya!

If you haven't guessed, that's 'Lou' (Louis) Gossett, Jr., who died last week at the age of 84.

I've interviewed many Black celebrities, from Harry Belafonte to Tupac Shakur. But few impressed me as much as Lou, a self-confident brother who enjoyed his Blackness and routinely exhibited his love for our African roots. This was different from his playing a key role in the award-winning chronology 'Roots' back in the 1980s. Lou epitomized calm, confidence, and control. He possessed infectious humor, and his gum-edged smile usually prelude to an affectionate laugh that belied a joy for the world that defied his place in it.

I first met Lou, at the 1990 Goodwill Games held in Seattle when I was still young and full of oats. The Goodwill Games were an invention of media mogul Ted Turner in response to the politicization of the Olympics.

It drew a 'who's who' of Black America. And me. Our first encounter was auspicious.

I stood in line to pick up my press credentials when one of the most beautiful sisters I've ever seen approached. I had no choice but to flirt (my genes come from a 'rolling stone'),--innocently, of course.

She seemed in awe of my verbiage and was 'taking notes' when a tall, dark figure touched my shoulder and asked what my intentions were.

Just as I tried to figure out if I had to stand on my toes to punch him in the face, I looked up, and I the man inquiring my intentions was--- yes --- Lou Gossett, Jr. in the flesh.

The joke---thank Yeshua---was on me. But that encounter led to our meeting later for cocktails and a morning jog/walk the next day to the Seattle pier.

Lou Gossett, Jr., a former basketball wanna-be who starred in 50 movies, was noted for his screen (and stage) presence, a role taken from his persona. He won---earned---an Oscar for his role as Gossett in his Oscar-winning role as the hard-nosed drill sergeant in 'An Officer and a Gentleman.'

“Lou was a member of a dying fraternity of Black actors who used their platforms to advance civil rights causes and exemplify Black pride. Imagine, if you can, going to school with Cicely Tyson, Maya Angelou, and James Earl Jones. Now, that's a gang of Black royalty who used their platforms for cultural awakening.”

the hard-nosed drill sergeant in 'An Officer and a Gentleman,' although that was not his most impressive role. There were movies and plays before and after that moved me more.

In fact, his last role as the father of 'Mister' in the musical adaptation of Alice Walker's anti-male narrative, 'The Color Purple,' left me with emotional scars.

He not only performed but also 'performed' as only Lou could do as the chauvinist pig who ruled with an iron 'cane.'

You believed Lou controlled the character, as was the case in every movie he appeared in, from 'Raisin in the Sun' to 'The Book of Negroes.'

Lou was a member of a dying fraternity of Black actors who used their platforms to advance civil rights causes and exemplify Black pride. Imagine, if you can, going to school with Cicely Tyson, Maya Angelou, and James Earl Jones. Now, that's a gang of Black royalty who used their platforms for cultural awakening.

Lou, in particular, took pride in his 'Africaness' and wore cultural clothes before they were fashionable or a political statement. He spoke of our rich heritage when the status quo tried to convince the world that our ancestors were savages and Tarzan was king of the jungle.

Between his 50 acting roles and acknowledging his membership in the minority-majority, a proud member of the Baobab Brotherhood, Lou stood out as a decendent of the Garden of Eden.

Unlike Barack Obama, who hid his African parentage to sway White approval (I'm not saying that negatively; what he did was based purely on political reality), Lou stood out as a proud African American---without the hyphenation.

My wife, who prayed to God that her first girl child would be darker than a berry and more beautiful than amber, thought Lou was the most beautiful man in America, (even though I would give him an eight on the looks scale). It was his mantel, his mannerisms, and his coolness that served as a halo.

Tall, dark, handsome, and cool were my wife's prerequisites for approval.

I matched Lou on three of four, with my humor and good teeth filling the void.

I missed out on the height scale. But since I was never any good at basketball, it didn't much matter to me.

And regarding that 'deficit,' 'King Lou' clarified that my being 'short' wasn't a slight, given that I was among the small but ever-growing number of cultural giants.

Some brothers 'commitment to the cause' and understanding our place in the universe make them giants. And to be provided with an opportunity to teach, to educate, and to entertain via this forum, makes me special.

I'll never forget our two days in Seattle, our conversations, or our kinship. He was a brother first, kind, considerate, and open. I rank him up there with Bernie Mac and Sinbad as the most genuine celebrities I have met.

Yeah, Lou, I'll miss you and feel sad that others didn't get an opportunity to enjoy that walk.

Critically acclaimed author and best seller Ayana Mathis serves as keynote speaker for the Delta Memorial

Endowment Fund, Inc.'s LITERARY LUNCHEON

Ayana Mathis, author of the New York Times Best seller The Twelve Tribes of Hattie, headlines the Delta Memorial Endowment Fund Inc.'s (DMEF, Inc.) 46th Annual Literary Luncheon on Saturday, April 20, 11 a.m. at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, 333 W. Kilbourn Avenue.

Tickets for the luncheon can be purchased online at Eventbrite.com.

Since 1978, DMEF has hosted notable authors across four decades, from Octavia Butler and Maya Angelou to Pearl Cleage and Attica Locke.

Proceeds from the event fund college scholarships to local graduating high school seniors and Milwaukee-area charities, including arts-based organizations. More than $500,000 has been awarded to date.

Mathis's Milwaukee appearance comes on the heels of her 2023 release of Unsettled, which was named a Notable Book of 2023 by the Washington Post and New York Times and an Oprah Daily Best Book of the Year.

Unsettled is an intense multi-generational novel set in a racially and politically turbulent Philadelphia about a mother fighting for her sanity and survival.

In 1985 Philadelphia, Ava becomes swept up in a charismatic movement galvanized by a radical vision to destroy systems of racial injustice and bring about a bold new way of communal living.

Kirkus called it an "affecting and carefully drawn story of a family on the brink" in their starred review, saying that "Mathis powerfully evokes the heartbreak and ways best efforts are undermined by social and legal machinery." Oprah Daily proclaimed it one of the "Best Novels of 2023."

In addition to her fiction work, Mathis's nonfiction has been published in The Atlantic, The New York Times, The New Yorker, The

Gov. Evers urges Wisconsin Supreme Court to restore absentee ballot drop boxes as a safe, secure voting option in Wisconsin elections

Governor says local election officials should have discretion to use drop boxes, reduce barriers for eligible Wisconsinites to cast their ballots

MADISON — Gov. Tony Evers has filed a brief urging the Wisconsin Supreme Court to affirm that local election clerks are able to choose ballot drop boxes as one secure option for ballot returns in their communities. The governor is seeking to intervene in Priorities USA, v. Wisconsin Election Commission, arguing Wisconsin's election laws do not prohibit drop boxes.

"All across our country, election officials have chosen to use drop boxes to ensure that all eligible voters can freely cast their ballots. And they've done so while keeping ballots safe and secure," said Gov. Evers. "At the very heart of our democracy is the fundamental freedom to vote. In Wisconsin, we must work to protect that freedom and to empower our clerks and election administrators working hard at the local level to make decisions that are right for their communities."

"Drop box voting is safe and secure, and there is nothing in Wisconsin's election laws that prohibit our local clerks from using this secure option, absent an incorrect ruling by our courts."

The governor's filing comes as the court has agreed to review a previous 2022 decision banning most drop boxes in the state—a decision Gov. Evers has urged the court to reverse.

Absentee balloting has been used in Wisconsin since the Civil War. Prior to the 2022 ruling, mailboxes and drop boxes were used as a method of delivering ballots in Wisconsin's free and fair elections. For several election cycles, local clerks throughout the state ensured the security of absentee voting through secure drop boxes and by implementing protections that track ballots and maintain a strict chain of custody to ensure every eligible vote is counted.

Gov. Evers in a new brief argues that the law empowers municipal clerks with the discretion to establish and operate drop boxes in their communities as one secure option for voting. The court's current interpretation of the law has created unnecessary confusion and constraints on local election officials, blocking them from doing what made sense for their communities. COMMON COUNCIL ASKS FOR STAMP HONORING AL JARREAU!

The Milwaukee Common Council has asked President Joe Biden to consider featuring the late Milwaukee native and jazz and R&B singer Al Jarreau on a United States Postal Service stamp.

"Alwin Lopez (Al) Jarreau is one of Milwaukee's native sons, and we have recently sought to honor his legacy and contributions in various ways, including the renaming of Cawker Park for him at 2929 N. 30th St.," read a joint statement from the full council.

"Whether or not Mr. Jarreau is worthy of such an honor is not the question," the statement continued. "He was a brilliant and extremely influential artist in the genres of jazz and R&B, and his body of work included 17 albums (including multiple #1 albums), Grammy awards, and much more, both in music and in society."

"As such we hope the president and those in the USPS strongly consider cementing Al Jarreau's likeness into the pantheon of influential artists."

Thousands of Wisconsinites risk muscle mass loss with new weight loss drugs, warns expert!

Thousands of Wisconsinites risk muscle mass loss when taking the new generation of weight loss drugs. That is, according to experts at Feast-Good.com.

A concerning issue with some new generation rapid weight loss treatments which have made headlines recently is their tendency to strip away not just fat, but also precious muscle mass.

This isn't just about losing strength; when muscle mass diminishes quickly, it can disrupt your metabolism, weaken your body's support system, and potentially lead to a decline in overall health.

Muscles play a vital role in everything from maintaining metabolic rates to ensuring mobility and stability. Therefore, the pronounced muscle loss that can accompany these drugs isn't a side effect to take lightly, as it can have profound and lasting impacts on your physical wellbeing.

These muscle mass effects are likely to impact thousands of Wisconsinites – an analysis by Feast-Good.com, utilizing Google Trends data, reveals a surge in curiosity across the state.

Here's the ranking of top states by their search interest scores:

1. Delaware: 100
2. North Dakota: 96
3. West Virginia: 95
4. Mississippi: 92
5. Rhode Island: 90
6. Arkansas: 90

7. Alabama: 85
8. Missouri: 82
9. Michigan: 81
10. New Jersey: 79

Despite the buzz, obtaining these medications can be challenging. Stories from those seeking the drugs often highlight a series of obstacles—from high demand sparked by social media and celebrity endorsements to the practicalities of supply and cost.

Limited manufacturing capabilities mean that these injectable drugs, which are more complex to produce than pills, are in short supply.

Manufacturers are working to produce various dosages to meet demand, but the limited number of facilities equipped for production is a bottleneck.

The cost is another significant barrier. With many insurance plans, including Medicare, not covering obesity medications, patients are frequently required to cover the full cost out-of-pocket, which can be prohibitively expensive.

Furthermore, the drugs are not commonly stocked in pharmacies. Patients prescribed weight loss treatments often have to contact numerous pharmacies before finding one that can order the medication for them.

For pharmacists, the financial risk of unsold inventory outweighs the potential benefits of stocking these drugs regularly.

Even when insurance coverage is available, accessing the medications remains difficult. Insurers may be persuaded by evidence suggesting the drugs can prevent costly health issues, yet they often implement strict usage restrictions.

Obtaining approval can be a tedious process involving extensive paperwork and participation in educational programs, causing further delays.

In summary, for those eager to start using these new weight loss drugs, it may take several months before they can begin treatment.

FeastGood.com has come up with 7 tips on how best to prepare your body and retain muscle when taking weight loss drugs:

aligns food intake with your metabolism.

Human research also suggests that ETRF is more beneficial for weight loss than traditional caloric restriction.

2. Pair Thermogenic Foods

Capsaicin (primarily found in different types of peppers), catechins (commonly found in black grapes, strawberries, and green tea leaves), and protein (found in many foods, such as meat, fish, and egg whites) all have one thing in common: They are linked to fat loss thanks to their ability to boost metabolic rate or support the process of breaking down fat.

Combining them can help prime your body for weight loss.

3. Eat Polyphenol-Rich Foods

Polyphenols are a diverse group of plant compounds linked to better health outcomes. Recent research also explores their potential benefits for reducing the risk of obesity.

Specifically, these compounds are involved in metabolic functions and fat breakdown, and their regular consumption can support weight loss and prevent weight regain.

Polyphenol-rich foods include berries (most varieties), plums, apples, cherries, dark chocolate (70+ % cocoa), pecans, hazelnuts, and black olives.

4. Get Eight Hours of Sleep

Getting eight hours of sleep is a great way to prime your body for weight loss because it helps regulate

Tennessee State University Board Disbanded by MAGA Loyalists as Assault on DE&I Continues

By Stacy M. Brown, NNPA Newswire Senior National Correspondent @StacyBrownMedia

Tennessee State University (TSU), the state's only public historically Black college and university (HBCU), faces a tumultuous future as Gov. Bill Lee dissolved its board, a move supported by racist conservatives and MAGA Republicans in the Tennessee General Assembly, who follow the lead of the twice-impeached, four-times indicted, alleged sexual predator former President Donald Trump.

Educators and others have denounced the move as an attack on diversity, equity, and inclusion (DE&I) and a grave setback for higher education.

Critics argue that TSU's purported financial mismanagement is a manufactured crisis rooted in decades of underinvestment by the state government.

They've noted that it continues a trend by conservatives and the racist MAGA movement to eliminate opportunities for Blacks in education, corporate America, and the public sector.

Gevin Reynolds, a former speechwriter for Vice President Kamala Harris, emphasizes in an op-ed that TSU's financial difficulties are not the result of university leadership because a recent audit found no evidence of fraud or malfeasance.

Reynolds noted that the disbanding of TSU's board is not an isolated incident but part of a broader assault on DE&I initiatives nationwide.

Ten states, including Tennessee, have enacted laws banning DE&I policies on college campuses, while governors appointing MAGA loyalists to university trustee positions further undermine efforts to promote inclusivity and equality.

Moreover, recent legislative actions in Tennessee, such as repealing police reform measures enacted after the killing of Tyre Nichols, underscore a troubling trend of undermining local control and perpetuating racist agendas.

The new law preventing local governments from restricting police officers' authority disregards community efforts to address systemic issues of police violence and racial profiling.

The actions echo historical efforts to suppress Black progress, reminiscent of the violent backlash against gains made during the Reconstruction era.

President Joe Biden warned during an appearance in New York last month that Trump desires to bring the nation back to the 18th and 19th centuries – in other words, to see, among other things, African Americans back in the chains of slavery, women subservient to men without any say over their bodies, and all voting rights restricted to white men.

The parallels are stark, with white supremacist ideologies used to justify attacks on Black institutions and disenfranchise marginalized communities, Reynolds argued.

In response to these challenges, advocates stress the urgency of collective action to defend democracy and combat systemic racism.

Understanding that attacks on institutions like TSU are symptomatic of broader threats to democratic norms, they call for increased civic engagement and voting at all levels of government.

The actions of people dedicated to upholding the principles of inclusivity, equity, and justice for all will determine the outcome of the ongoing fight for democracy, Reynolds said.

"We are in a war for our democracy, one whose outcome will be determined by every line on every ballot at every precinct," he stated.

Rep. Ron Reynolds

Embracing Black Men's Voices: Rebuilding Trust and Unity in the Democratic Party

By Texas state Rep. Ron Reynolds

As a Black man deeply committed to the values of equality, justice, and progress, I find myself reflecting on a concerning trend within our political landscape: the departure of Black men from the Democratic Party.

This phenomenon is not merely a statistical anomaly but represents a rupture in the relationship between the party and a significant segment of its base.

As we navigate this pivotal moment in history, it is imperative that we explore the underlying causes of this departure and chart a path toward reconciliation and renewal.

The decision of many Black men to disengage from the Democratic Party is rooted in a complex interplay of historical disenchantment, unmet promises, and a sense of disillusionment with the political establishment.

For too long, the voices and concerns of Black men have been marginalized and overlooked within the Democratic Party, leaving many feeling unheard and undervalued.

As a result, a growing number of Black men have begun to seek alternatives, searching for political homes where their perspectives are acknowledged and their interests are prioritized.

To address this rift and revitalize the Democratic Party's relationship with Black men, we must embark on a journey of introspection and transformation.

This journey begins with acknowledging and confronting our society's systemic injustices and inequalities.

It requires a commitment to dismantling institutional barriers and creating opportunities for economic empowerment, educational advancement, and social mobility for the Black community.

Moreover, it necessitates a fundamental shift in how the Democratic Party engages with Black men. We must foster genuine connections and meaningful dialogue instead of token gestures and superficial outreach efforts.

We must create spaces where Black men feel valued, respected, and empowered to contribute their insights and experiences to the political process.

Central to this endeavor is recognizing that Black men are not a monolithic group but a diverse and multifaceted community with a wide range of perspectives and priorities. As such, our approach must be intersectional, considering the intersecting identities and experiences that shape the lives of Black men, including race, gender, sexuality, and class.

Furthermore, we must actively work to address the unique challenges and vulnerabilities faced by Black men, including the disproportionate impact of mass incarceration, police violence, economic inequality, and lack of access to healthcare. By centering the needs and concerns of Black men in our policy agendas and advocacy efforts, we can begin to rebuild trust and unity within the Democratic Party.

In conclusion, the exodus of Black men from the Democratic Party represents a wake-up call for all committed to justice and equality. It is a reminder that political loyalty cannot be taken for granted but must be earned through genuine engagement, meaningful action, and tangible results. As we confront this challenge, let us seize the opportunity to create a more inclusive and equitable political landscape where every voice is heard and every individual is valued.

It is time for the Democratic Party to embrace Black men's voices and reclaim its legacy as a champion of progress and social justice. It starts with prioritizing federal voting rights legislation, including the Freedom to Vote Act and John Lewis Voting Rights Advancement Act, passing the George Floyd Policing Act, and raising the minimum wage to a livable wage.

The path forward may be challenging, but it is also filled with promise and potential. Let us rise to the occasion together and build a brighter future for all.

Bucks break even against Thunder and Lakers on their home court!

Recently the Milwaukee Bucks played back-to-back home games at the Fiserv Forum. First the good news: The Bucks beat the Oklahoma Thunder, 118 to 93. The Thunder at the time of their game with the Bucks, were 50-21 and in second place in the NBA Western Conference. Giannis had 30 points, and Bobby Portis, Jr. scored 15 points. Chris Middleton scored 11 points. And now, the bad news: The Bucks blew a 19 point lead against the Los Angeles Lakers, who were playing without its mega-star, LeBron James beat the Bucks 128-124. To many observers, the Bucks had a defensive melt down and despite Pulling out every trick from his coaching bag, Bucks Coach Doc Rivers couldn't plug the leak. Hopefully since that game against the Lakers, Doc has come up with a 'prescription' that will cure the team's defensive inconsistency.—Photo by Kim Robinson

Wisconsinites risk muscle mass loss with new weight loss drugs

ghrelin and leptin—hormones involved in metabolic rate and hunger. Good sleep reduces the risk of excessive hunger or cravings (which are typically directed toward high-calorie, processed foods). It also makes you better at controlling impulses (the desire for instant gratification) and can directly improve your body's ability to burn fat instead of muscle for energy.

5. Eat a Diverse Range of Foods
Eating diverse foods (e.g., fruits, veggies, grains, nuts, seeds, fish, meat, dairy, fermented foods, avocado, and olive oil) contributes to a healthier and more diverse gut microbiota.

Research suggests that a more diverse gut microbiota supports metabolic health and weight loss in overweight individuals. In contrast, a less diverse microbiota is linked to obesity.

6. Optimize Your Environment
Your surroundings influence your behaviors even if you don't realize it. By creating an environment that supports healthier behaviors and makes bad habits more challenging, you prime your body for weight loss and reduce the need to rely on willpower.

Some environmental changes you could make include stocking healthier foods, getting rid of processed junk, and clearing some room for exercise at home.

7. Habit Stack For Success
Stacking weight-loss-friendly behaviors with established habits is an effective strategy for making lasting changes and priming your body for a transformation. Let's review some examples of habit ⇒ new behavior:

- Brushing teeth ⇒ Immediately drink a glass of water
- Morning coffee ⇒ Low-calorie, high-protein breakfast (e.g., two hard-boiled eggs)
- While heating your lunch ⇒ Prepare a quick salad
- When packing lunch ⇒ Prepare a container of chopped veggies
