Mayor Cavalier Johnson INAUGURAL REMARKS

Tuesday, April 16, 2024

To all Milwaukeeans, my friends, my colleagues, thank you so much. I am gratified by your encouragement, your belief in Milwaukee, and your belief in our leadership.

I made a pledge moments ago to uphold the constitution and faithfully discharge the duties of my office. As I stand before you today, I offer another commitment. I pledge to lead this city to be more responsive to our residents, to solve the challenges before us, and to be forward-thinking about Milwaukee's needs and ambitions.

We can define our future. Our ideas, actions, and hard work ahead will make a significant difference in Milwaukee in the years to come. By partnering with more individuals and more groups, we will amplify and improve our efforts, assuring equitable and inclusive outcomes.

Looking forward, we will continue to build our economy, to grow our city, to continue our upward trend toward greater safety, and to improve educational outcomes for all our young people.

Yes, I am very intentionally citing education. I intend to break from decades of disconnection between City Hall and our schools. Education is far too important to me – too important to our community – to sit by casually.

I intend to engage with the Milwaukee Public School's leadership and with private and parochial schools. I intend to work collaboratively to improve student achievement.

Too often I hear people are leaving Milwaukee because of our schools. I want people to come to Milwaukee because of our schools.

I am a frequent visitor to local classrooms, and I will continue that. What I intend to add is greater attention to policy, priorities, and resource deployment. I will join the strategic discussions about what is best for our city's students.

That type of approach has worked to improve safety in Milwaukee. We have thoughtfully implemented traffic safety strategies, encompassing both accountability and prevention, to deter reckless driving. We will do more in the months ahead.

Violent crime and serious property crime are trending in the right direction. Earlier this morning we shared the latest quarterly crime numbers. In every major category we see improvement.

Through the first quarter of this year, homicides are down more than 30-percent, non-fatal shootings down 25-percent, and overall serious crime is down 10-percent when compared to the first quarter of last year. And these results build on the significant success we have seen over the past two years. Milwaukee is, without question, a safer city. Yet, this is no time to rest. Too frequently we hear reminders of crime's detrimental effects on the people we serve. It is no consolation to someone whose car was targeted to be told that about one-thousand fewer vehicles have been stolen in 2024 than at this same time two years ago. A safer city requires wide-ranging participation from government, neighborhood organizations, companies, churches, and individuals.

"My duties for the people of this city encompass more than addressing problems and meeting service expectations. It is my job to set direction, establish budgets, appoint department leaders. As I take on those tasks, I always think about the future. "

We are engaging young people. We will reprise Peace Week next month. We are revisiting public safety plans. And we will continue to measure our success. The goals I've set are clear. Crime must be rare; neighborhoods must be safe. And public safety concerns must not affect the choices people and businesses make to locate in Milwaukee. My duties for the people of this city encompass more than addressing problems and meeting service expectations. It is my job to set direction, establish budgets, appoint department leaders. As I take on those tasks, I always think about the future. Going forward you will see more positive additions to our infrastructure, increased housing opportunities, and more economic activity. I am working with developers, and not against developers, to grow our city. I will support affordable and workforce housing so every Milwaukeean can afford to live here, and every future Milwaukeean can find a home in our city. And, where it is appropriate, we will try new approaches. We will soon announce an effort to focus resources, intensely, on specific neighborhoods. We will work with existing local organizations and measure outcomes to see whether different strategies can improve lives and add value. To test this proposition, we will start with one neighborhood on the south side, and one on the north side. As opportunities arise, we are advancing positive outcomes.

Take, for example, the old Northridge property. As the site is cleared, we will engage neighbors, developers and other interested parties to determine what's best for that vital section of our northwest side.

I support reconfiguration of Interstate 794 in downtown.

The project offers a chance to maximize growth and investment while keeping transportation connectivity. The key is not simply thinking about our commutes today, but, instead, what our city can be tomorrow.

At my direction, we are moving forward with additional outreach to new Milwaukee residents, especially those from other countries who are choosing to make our city their home. We will be ready to provide information, connections, and municipal services at a location that is both convenient and accessible.

For nearly 200 years, Milwaukee has welcomed new people from near and far.

Often, they faced big challenges, but, consistently, they have contributed so much to our culture and our economy. I want their adjustment to Milwaukee to be as smooth as possible.

Good things are happening. We are expanding the hospitality sector of our economy – physically growing and drawing in new visitors with prominent events.

In less than three months, we will be highlighting Milwaukee for the entire world as the Republican National Convention gets underway.

I know, when people come to our city, they leave with good feelings about Milwaukee.

That starts a virtuous cycle, an excellent word-of-mouth marketing campaign, that attracts more visitors.

Companies are choosing Milwaukee. Employment is available to a greater extent than most of us have seen in our lifetimes. And success in our economy is something I work to sustain.

Milwaukee is a welcoming city – welcoming to visitors and welcoming to new residents who want to build their lives here.

We are also welcoming to new ideas and approaches that set us ahead and set us apart. I embrace innovation and I expect innovative ideas from my team.

We will continue to show Milwaukee is a cutting-edge city – meeting and exceeding the accolades we receive.

Make no mistake, I am optimistic. The elements for success are in place. The work we are undertaking - together - will pay huge dividends. It is Milwaukee's time to shine.

A new term. New challenges. Let's get to work.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED:

NEW YORK (AP) — If you purchased some weighted groceries or bagged fruit at Walmart in recent years, you may be eligible for a cash payment from a class action settlement with the retailer.

The class action lawsuit, first filed in October 2022, alleges that Walmart shoppers across the U.S. and Puerto Rico who purchased certain sold-by-weight meat and seafood as well as select citrus sold in bulk bags paid more than the lowest price advertised in stores.

Walmart has denied any wrongdoing — but agreed to pay $45 million to settle the litigation.

That means that impacted consumers can now submit claims for cash payments. “We will continue providing our customers everyday low prices to help them save money on the products they want and need,” a spokesperson for the Bentonville, Arkansas, company stated.

“We still deny the allegations, however we believe a settlement is in the best interest of both parties.”

Consumers can learn more about submitting a claim and the products that are covered on the settlement administrator’s website.

Cash payments are available for anyone who purchased these certain weighted meat, seafood and bagged citrus products — which includes select oranges, grapefruit and tangerines — at Walmart in the U.S. and Puerto Rico between October 19, 2018 and January 19, 2024.

Payments will range in amount depending on each claim.

It’s possible to get some money even if you don’t have a purchase receipt anymore.

Consumers without a proof of purchase can receive between $10 and $25, depending on how many eligible products they attest to buying during the settlement class period.

Meanwhile, those with receipts or other documentation could be entitled to get 2% of the total cost for each product they purchased — at up to $500.

Approved claimants will receive their payments electronically through Venmo, Zelle, ACH or a virtual pre-paid MasterCard — but paper checks can also be requested those unable to receive payments electronically.

The deadline to submit a claim is June 5, with a final approval hearing set for June 12. Objections and other comments to the settlement can be made through May 22.

Beginning next year, freelancers and small businesses will need to report third-party app payments totaling $5,000 to tax authorities

NEW YORK (AP) — Workers across different industries are increasingly receiving some or all of their income via apps.

They include tutors, graphic designers, hair stylists, and all kinds of independent and self-employed workers, along with merchants who sell products online through Etsy, eBay, Amazon and other sites. But tax law is still catching up when it comes to how best to report this income.

If you’re a freelancer or gig worker who receives payments via apps like Venmo, Zelle, Cash App or PayPal, your tax reporting requirements will change for the 2024 tax year.

The law will not affect the amount of taxes owed, but it will change how you report income with 1099-K forms.

The changes were supposed to take effect for the 2023 tax year, but they have been delayed. The tax filing deadline is April 15.

For the current tax year, freelancers and small business owners still only need to use 1099-K forms to report third-party app payments totaling $20,000, and any number of payments above 200. But beginning next year, that threshold will be just $5,000, which will eventually be lowered to $600.

The changes were supposed to take effect for the 2023 tax year, but they have been delayed.

Some in the space say the new law will benefit both freelancers and the IRS by improving information gathering, especially for people who are self-employed and merchants who sell online.

Freelancers, gig workers and online sellers owe taxes on their income regardless of whether they meet the reporting threshold to use 1099-K forms, but it can be difficult to keep track of every payment, especially across sites and apps. This can lead to confusion and underpayment, experts say.

The eventual change will affect platforms, businesses, and individuals, and it's good to begin preparing now. Here's what you need to know:

What should I do to get ready for the new 1099-K reporting threshold?

If you're already keeping accurate track of your income from freelancing as paid via Venmo, Zelle, Cash App, PayPal, and other sites, you're in good shape. The main difference will be that these platforms will issue you additional forms for every transaction. This should make correct reporting to the IRS even easier, though there will be more paperwork.

Currently, if someone paying a freelancer via Venmo, Zelle, or CashApp sends a form to the IRS reporting that pay, but the freelancer doesn't report the income with the same form, that creates a "matching error" for the agency. The change will ensure both that taxpayers receive proper refunds and that the IRS receives proper payment.

What if I mistakenly receive a 1099-K form?

In some cases, in part due to the changing guidance, platforms may send taxpayers 1099-K Forms in error this year — such as for transactions between family and friends or for expense sharing between roommates, according to the IRS.

The first thing to do is try to get an updated form by contacting the company that issued the form incorrectly. If you can't get one in a timely manner, the IRS says to zero out the income on your tax return with the description "Form 1099-K Received in Error." The line appears on Form 1040 — Additional Income and Adjustments to Income. There, you should write, as follows: "Part I — Line 8z — Other Income — Form 1099-K Received in Error."

Why did the IRS delay implementing the change for a second year in a row?

The change, which had been set to take effect this year, was delayed again in November. The IRS decided to give taxpayers another year to adjust to the new reporting requirements.

"Taking this phased-in approach is the right thing to do for the purposes of tax administration, and it prevents unnecessary confusion," IRS Commissioner Danny Werfel said in November.

"It's clear that an additional delay for tax year 2023 will avoid problems for taxpayers, tax professionals and others in this area."

What advice and guidance does the IRS have for freelancers?

The IRS has an online Gig Economy Tax Center that focuses specifically on the tax questions and needs of freelancers and other workers in the informal economy. The site addresses common concerns and pitfalls.

What if I make a mistake reporting income on 1099-K forms?

The IRS will be in touch if they see discrepancies between income reported on 1099-K forms by taxpayers and companies issuing the forms, both this year and next. It's important to keep in mind that income from all platforms, including things like YouTube ads and Patreon subscriptions, must be reported in this way.

One way to make sure all income is accurately captured is to be sure to transfer all payments from your PayPal, Venmo, and Cash App accounts to a traditional bank account, rather than keeping it on third-party platforms.
