“Ban Office Romances in 2024,” Say More Than 1-in-3 Wisconsinites!

While dating apps and social media have revolutionized how we find love, traditional methods of meeting partners - weddings, bars, and chance encounters at coffee shops - are still common.

The workplace, however, occupies an ambiguous space in the dating landscape.

With the shift to remote work in recent years, office romances became less visible, but as companies usher employees back to the office, these romances will likely experience a resurgence.

The question for 2024 is: What are the current attitudes toward office romances? Are they still seen as acceptable, or has the sentiment shifted?

These are questions DatingAdvice.com sought to answer. They questioned 3,000 employees, and found that gone are the days of casual flirtations and clandestine rendezvous in the copy room.

According to the survey, 37% of Wisconsinites now view office romances as a relic of a bygone era, and should be banned (compared to the national average of 52% who believe office romances are outdated).

This revelation, while not entirely unexpected, underscores a growing apprehension toward blurring the lines between professional decorum and personal affairs.

According to the survey, 37% of Wisconsinites now view office romances as a relic of a bygone era, and should be banned (compared to the national average of 52% who believe office romances are outdated). This revelation, while not entirely unexpected, underscores a growing apprehension toward blurring the lines between professional decorum and personal affairs.

Love on the clock: Notable is the skepticism surrounding the initiation of romantic pursuits within the confines of the office.

Only a quarter of those surveyed express comfort with the idea of being asked out on a date by a single colleague, hinting at a palpable reluctance to mix business with pleasure.

But it's not just about matters of the heart; it's about the ripple effects that ensue within the organizational fabric. The survey findings show that the path to workplace romance is fraught with pitfalls, as evidenced by some statistics.

Romance redefined: Beyond mere whispers at the water cooler, the call for official policies regarding office relationships resonates loud and clear.

More than half 57% of respondents advocate for official guidelines to navigate the delicate terrain of workplace romances.

In terms of the impacts that office relationships can have on staff, the biggest potential problem cited by survey respondents was that it can lead to conflicts of interest. The second biggest concern was that it could create a hostile work environment.

Moreover, 43% of Wisconsinites admit they would trust their manager less if he or she were embroiled in a romantic entanglement with a colleague, shedding light on the delicate balance of power dynamics within workplace relationships.

Major retailers are offering summer deals to entice inflation-weary shoppers!

Many retailers said their goal was to offer some relief for shoppers

Article by Associated Press via thegrio.com

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans who spend Memorial Day scouting sales online and in stores may find more reasons to celebrate the return of warmer weather.

Major retailers are stepping up discounts heading into the summer months, hoping to entice inflation-weary shoppers into opening their wallets.

Target, Walmart and other chains have rolled out price cuts — some permanent, others temporary — with the stated aim of giving their customers

One-in-three Cheeseheads say “ban office romances!”

But beyond the statistics and pie charts lies the human dimension of office romances. Nearly half (45%) of respondents said they suspect the existence of clandestine love affairs within their workplaces, underscoring the pervasive yet often concealed nature of workplace relationships.

Finally, when confronted with a hypothetical scenario of a company-wide email accidentally unveiling a covert office romance, the responses varied: 40% of respondents said they would opt for the 'none-of-my-business' route, choosing to ignore the revelation altogether.

Meanwhile, a mischievous 32% said they would find the revelation amusing, envisioning themselves eagerly sharing the gossip with colleagues.

However, a more serious 28% of respondents expressed their intention to raise concerns with others. In a workplace where transparency and accountability are key, it seems that some are not afraid to speak up, even when the subject matter is a secret office romance.

The reductions, which mostly involve groceries, are getting introduced as inflation showed its first sign of easing this year but not enough for consumers who are struggling to pay for basic necessities as well as rent and car insurance.

The latest quarterly earnings reported by Walmart, Macy's and Ralph Lauren underscored that consumers have not stopped spending. But multiple CEOs, including the heads of McDonald's, Starbucks and home improvement retailer Home Depot, have observed that people are becoming more price-conscious and choosy. They're delaying purchases, focusing on store brands compared to typically more expensive national brands, and looking for deals.

“Retailers recognize that unless they pull out some stops on pricing, they are going to have difficulty holding on to the customers they got,” Neil Saunders, managing director of consulting and data analysis firm GlobalData, said.

“The consumer really has had enough of inflation, and they’re starting to take action in terms of where they shop, how they shop, the amount they buy.”

While discounts are an everyday tool in retail, Saunders said these aggressive price cuts that cover thousands of items announced by a number of retailers represent a “major shift” in recent strategy.

He noted most companies talked about price increases in the past two or three years, and the cut mark the first big “price war” since before inflation started taking hold.

Where can shoppers find lower prices?

Higher-income shoppers looking to save money have helped Walmart maintain strong sales in recent quarters. But earlier this month, the nation’s largest retailer expanded its price rollbacks — temporary discounts that can last a few months — to nearly 7,000 grocery items, a 45% increase. Items include a 28-ounce can of Bush’s baked beans marked down to $2.22, from $2.48, and a 24-pack of 12-ounce Diet Coke priced at $12.78 from $14.28.

Company executives said the Bentonville, Arkansas-based retailer is seeing more people eating at home versus eating out. Walmart believes its discounts will help the business over the remainder of the year.

“We’re going to lead on price, and we’re going to manage our (profit) margins, and we’re going to be the Walmart that we’ve always been,” CEO Doug McMillon told analysts earlier this month.

Not to be outdone by its closest competitor, Target last week cut prices on 1,500 items and said it planned to make price cuts on another 3,500 this summer.

The initiative primarily applies to food, beverage and essential household items. For example, Clorox scented wipes that previously cost $5.79 are on shelves for $4.99. Huggies Baby Wipes, which were priced at $1.19, now cost 99 cents.

Low-cost supermarket chain Aldi said earlier this month that it was cutting prices on 250 products, including favorites for barbecues and picnics, as part of a promotion set to last through Labor Day.

McDonald’s plans to introduce a limited-time $5 meal deal in the U.S. next month to counter slowing sales and customers’ frustration with high prices.

Arko Corp., a large operator of convenience stores in rural areas and small towns, is launching its most aggressive deals in terms of their depth in roughly 20 years for both members of its free loyalty program and other customers, ac-ording to Arie Kotler, the company’s chairman, president and CEO. For example, members of Arko’s free loyalty program who buy two 12-packs of Pepsi beverages get a free pizza. The promotions kicked off May 15 and are due to end Sept. 3.

Kotler said he focused on essential items that people use to feed their families after observing that the cumulative effects of higher gas prices and inflation in other areas had customers hold back compared to a year ago.

“Over the past two quarters, we have seen the trend of consumers cutting back, consumers coming less often, and consumers reducing their purchases,” he said.

In the non-food category, crafts chain Michaels last month reduced prices of frequently purchased items like paint, markers and artist canvases. The price reductions ranged from 15% to up to 40%. Michaels said the cuts are intended to be permanent.

Do these cuts bring prices back to pre-pandemic levels?

Many retailers said their goal was to offer some relief for shoppers. But Michaels said its new discounts brought prices for some things down to where they were in 2019.

“Our intention with these cuts is to ensure we’re delivering value to the customer,” The Michaels Companies said. “We see it as an investment in customer loyalty more than anything else.”

Target said it was difficult to compare what its price-reduced products cost now to a specific time frame since inflation levels are different for each item and the reductions varied by item.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which tracks consumer prices, said the average price of a two-liter bottle of soda in April was $2.27. That compares with $1.53 in the same month five years ago. A pound of white bread cost an average of $2 last month but $1.29 in April 2019. One pound of ground chuck that averaged $5.28 in April cost $3.91 five years ago.

Why are companies cutting prices on some items?

U.S. consumer confidence deteriorated for the third straight month in April as Americans continued to fret about their short-term financial futures, according to the latest report released late last month from the Conference Board, a business research group.

With shoppers focusing more on bargains, particularly online, retailers are trying to get customers back to their stores. Target this month posted its fourth consecutive quarterly decline in comparable sales — those from stores or digital channels operating at least 12 months.

In fact, the share of online sales for the cheapest items across many categories, including clothing, groceries, personal care and appliances, increased from April 2019 to the same month this year, according to Adobe Analytics, which covers more than 1 trillion visits to U.S.

People walk towards a Target store in Clifton, N.J., on December 18, 2023. retail sites.

For example, the market share for the cheapest groceries went from 38% in April 2019 to 48% last month, while the share for the most expensive groceries went down from 22% to 9% over the same time period, according to Adobe.

How are retailers funding price cuts?

GlobalData’s Saunders said he thinks companies are subsidi-dizing price cuts with a variety of methods — at the expense of profits, at the cost of suppliers and vendors, or by reducing expenses. Some retailers may be using a combination of all three, he said.

Saunders doesn’t think retailers are raising prices on other items to make up for the ones they lowered since doing that would bring a backlash from customers.

Target declined to disclose details but said its summer price promotion was incorporated into the company’s projected profit range, which falls below analysts’ expectations at the low end.

GPM Investments, LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of ARKO Corp. said its suppliers are funding the convenience store promotions.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S SUPREME COURT WILL SOON HAVE NO BLACK JUSTICES!

When a new justice is seated after next week's election, South Carolina will join 18 other states with all-white high courts, reports indicate.

Article by ASSOCIATED PRESS via thegrio.com

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — For the first time in nearly two decades, South Carolina's Supreme Court will be entirely white.

Diversity on the bench is a big topic in a state where African Americans and Hispanics make up a third of the population.

The General Assembly selects the state's judges, and it has so rarely chosen non-white jurists that Black lawmakers briefly walked out of judicial elections five years ago over diversity concerns.

When a new justice is seated after next week's election, South Carolina will join 18 other states with all-white high courts, according to the Brennan Center for Justice, which tracks diversity and other issues in court systems.

Twelve of those states have minority populations of at least 20%, the organization reported.

"It's shameful. Whether people like it or not, we have a diverse state. The people who appear before the bench are diverse. The judges they appear before should be diverse," Democratic Rep. Gilda Cobb-Hunter said.

Circuit Judge Jocelyn Newman was the lone Black candidate for the state Supreme Court seat coming open.

The only African American on the high court, Chief Justice Don Beatty, has to leave because he has reached the mandatory retirement age of 72.

But Newman dropped out of the race after candidates could begin asking lawmakers for support. That leaves a white man and a white woman as the two remaining candidates.

Candidates for judges typically don't campaign or speak publicly in South Carolina, outside of hearings in which a panel screens them to see if they are qualified and narrows the number of candidates sent to lawmakers to three.

South Carolina's Supreme Court already came under scrutiny as the nation's only all-male high court.

The justices ruled 4-1 last year to uphold the state's strict abortion ban at around six weeks after conception, before many women know they are pregnant.

That decision came after the woman who wrote the majority opinion in a 3-2 ruling had to retire because of her age, and lawmakers made minor tweaks in the law, enabling another high court review.

"Sometimes it's nice to look up on that bench and see someone that looks like unopposed in his campaign.

Kittredge told lawmakers that diversity is critical to the justice system and that only the General Assembly, where 118 of the 170 members are Republican, can assure that.

"We have a great system. But if it does not reflect the people of South Carolina, we are going to lose the respect and integrity of the public that we serve," Kittredge said.

With Republicans dominating the state's politics, it is going to require leadership from the governor, General Assembly leaders and business and community leaders to start getting more diversity into the court system again, said Cobb-Hunter, a Black woman who is the state's longest serving representative at 32 years.

Cobb-Hunter points out there is only one Black judge on the nine-member Court of Appeals, which is often a springboard to the high court, and lawmakers chose a white man over a Black woman for the last open seat in April. There has never been a Black you," Associate Justice Kaye Hearn lamented in an interview with South Carolina ETV after she left the court.

Beatty's replacement on the bench this summer will be John Kittredge, who was woman on the South Carolina Supreme Court.

"When they talk about women not being elected, I know nine times out of 10 they are talking about white women and not women of color," Cobb-Hunter said.

THE HOP INTRODUCING NEW "FESTIVALS LINE" FOR SUMMERFEST!

Combined route will operate until 1 a.m. and provide more frequent service to the Lakefront while eliminating the need for transfers

The Hop, presented by Potawatomi Casino Hotel, will pilot a new service during this year's Summerfest. The "Festivals Line" is a combination of the existing M-Line and L-Line, with all vehicles serving the full route and making it even easier for passengers along the entire route – regardless of where they board – to reach the Lakefront stop and its convenient access to the festival grounds without the need to transfer.

The "Festivals Line" will also reduce headways in reaching the Lakefront from the existing 20 minutes of the L-Line to approximately 15 minutes.

The Once and Future King: Josh Gibson is Number One After Negro League Stats Join Major League Baseball!

By Lauren Victoria Burke, NNPA Newswire Contributor
Just a few months before Jackie Robinson would make history and break the color barrier preventing Black players from competing in Major League Baseball, Josh Gibson passed away at 35 years old.

In the early 1940s he was diagnosed with a brain tumor and died on January 20, 1947 of a stroke.

But Josh Gibson lives in his statistical achievements which place him at the top of all baseball players of all time.

The MLB announced on May 29, that it has added the statistics of over 2,300 Negro Leagues players from 1920 to 1948. The update in records now means that Josh Gibson is now Major League Baseball's all-time career leader in batting average at .372. Gibson overtakes Ty Cobb who is at .367. Gibson also surpasses baseball legend Babe Ruth in career slugging percentage.

Gibson's legendary career in the Negro Leagues was showcased during the many years he played for Pittsburgh Crawfords and the Homestead Grays. He was commonly referred to as the "Black Babe Ruth," and hit nearly 800 home runs during his career. Gibson, who was a catcher, played in numerous East-West All-Star Games and helped lead his teams to multiple league championships.

Gibson's legacy has been recognized and celebrated in the years following his untimely death. In 1972, he was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame. This induction helped to solidify his place in baseball history and brought renewed attention to the contributions of Negro Leagues players.

Gibson's story continues to inspire and his career is a reminder of the racial barriers in professional sports.

Pitcher Satchel Paige, whom many consider one of the best pitchers to play the game, is also a big winner on the updated stat sheet. In 1948, at the age of 42, Paige broke into 1930-31 Homestead Grays. Authorities on the Negro Leagues have made them the consensus pick as the best team ever. Standing: Cumberland Posey*, Bill Evans, Jap Washington, Red Reed, Smokey Joe Williams*, Josh Gibson*, George "Tubby" Scales, Oscar Charleston*, Charlie Walker, Jr. Kneeling: Chippy Britt, Lefty Williams, Jud Wilson*, Vic Harris, Ted "Double Duty" Radcliffe, Ambrose Reed, Ted Page. in a single day. The incorporation of the stats of Negro Leagues players has been pushed for by many Negro Leagues historians for years. Now that the moment has arrived, the full history of professional baseball moves a bit closer to being valid. Lauren Victoria Burke is an independent investigative journalist and the publisher of Black Virginia News. She is a

"While The Hop has always been a wonderful option for accessing events along the Lakefront, with our new Transit Concourse at the Couture making that connection even easier we are anticipating wonderful ridership during this year's Summerfest," Milwaukee Commissioner of Public Works Jerrel Kruschke said. "We are eager to pilot this new combined line, which will both simplify and enhance our service as residents and visitors make their way to the festival grounds this summer."

The "Festivals Line" will replace The Hop's existing operations during each of the nine days of Summerfest (June 20-22, June 27-29 and July 4-6), with service still beginning at 5 a.m. on weekdays and 7 a.m. on Saturdays and operations extended until 1 a.m. each night of the festival. Rather than having three streetcars on the M-Line and one on the L-Line, the "Festivals Line" will see all four in-service vehicles serving the entire route. Northbound vehicles will deviate from the traditional M-Line route to include the loop east on Michigan, through the Couture Transit Concourse and back west on Clybourn before resuming north towards Burns Commons, while southbound vehicles from Burns Commons will proceed along the regular M-Line route. Headways for all stations along the route will be approximately 15 minutes during peak hours. Since all vehicles will serve all stations, passengers can board at any stop along the route and reach the Lakefront station without needing to transfer.

With the "Festivals Line," passengers boarding at Intermodal will reach the Lakefront stop in just 12 minutes, a trip from the Historic Third Ward will take eight minutes and reaching the festival grounds from Burns Commons will take approximately 36 minutes. For riders not looking to access the festival grounds, southbound travel times will remain unchanged, while a northbound trip from Intermodal to Burns Commons will be approximately 10 minutes longer than the usual M-Line schedule. Lakefront/Summerfest passengers wanting to return to the Downtown Business District, Historic Third Ward or Intermodal station can transfer at Cathedral Square to the next southbound streetcar rather than traveling up to Burns Commons.

From ramps and surface lots to metered (and in some cases free) street parking, there are countless options for parking once downtown and using The Hop to navigate the City or reach the festival grounds. For more information on parking along the route, visit www.thehopmke.com/parking. For more information on the new "Festival Line," visit www.thehopmke.com/festivals.
