A different type of CAGE!

By Thomas E. Mitchell, Jr.
A Cage is meant to confine- animals or people (it's a metaphor for a jail or prison)- for either public safety, as abuse, or as punishment.

But for community activist Andre Lee Ellis, a cage is an acronym that has a whole different meaning:

- C (Community)
- A (Agricultural)
- G (Growing)
- E (Experience)

'CAGE' is the name of Ellis' new community initiative which, like his previous program, "We Got This," aims to focus exclusively on our community's Black male youth, to steer them in a positive direction, stressing hard work, education, etiquette, positive interaction with their peers and adults, self-respect and respect for others.

And like "We Got This," CAGE has created a community garden that not only grows free food, but teaches the young men (ages 12 to 16) how to help the community, not hurt it.

"It (CAGE) helps young Black men; restoring them to the community," Ellis added.

Ellis and his young charges recently put the acronym into positive action with a neighborhood clean-up and cook out at Firehouse Five of the Milwaukee Fire Department. The firehouse is located just off of Fond du Lac Avenue and Reservoir Street.

CAGE was assisted by members of the United States Army Recruiting Battalion of Wisconsin. Members of the battalion not only worked side-by-side with the youths picking-up trash in the neighborhood surrounding the firehouse, they also supplied and grilled hot dogs and hamburgers, chips and soda for the young men and members of their respective families, as well as the families of some of the participating soldiers.

U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel Oliver Karp, commander of the recruiting Battalion in Wisconsin, said the CAGE program offers them an opportunity to meet young men who might be interested in joining the military and making it a career.

"A lot of recruits we meet are in their 20s and sometimes have a record, or they have children.

"It's easier to meet and recruit them in their late teens and get them into programs within the Army that will benefit them."

Karp said the Army's programs can help potential recruits prepare for tests. There is even a 'pre-recruiting school' to get the young man or woman in academic shape so they "can be all they can be."

Such tutelage helps expand the young soldiers opportunities for advancement and promotion.

Admitting youths aren't always comfortable talking to someone in a uniform, Karp said he still met a lot of good kids during the clean-up he believes have the potential to be good soldiers.

"The biggest challenge we have is most of our recruiters aren't from Milwaukee, or outer Wisconsin.

One born and raised Milwaukee Army recruiter at the clean-up/cookout was Sargent First Class Dennis Robinson.

A 39 year Army veteran, Robinson and Ellis are long-time friends. It was Robinson who sponsored the clean-up/cookout, inviting many of the participating soldiers to be involved.

"I don't run into a lot of problems with youth who are wary of the uniform," Robinson said. "A lot of youth ask us questions about the Army."

Robinson says his ultimate goal is to bring awareness to the youth about the career possibilities in the Army. "(To me), it's not just about recruiting, but to volunteer in the community as well."

THE GREEN GREEN BOOK

THE TRAVELER'S GUIDE TO:

BLACK-OWNED HOMESTEADS, FARMS, ORCHARDS, VINEYARDS, FORAGING FORESTS, APIARIES, RANCHES, AND MARKETS

DR. LATATIA STROUD

Green Green Book author Dr. LaTatia Stroud

Black excellence in agriculture across the United States. Less than 2% of farmland is Black-owned, and the numbers have persistently dwindled.

From historic family farms passed down through generations to innovative urban gardening initiatives, from bustling farmers markets to sprawling vineyards and orchards, this groundbreaking guide highlights the breadth and depth of Black agricultural heritage and innovation.

The Green Green Book provides an opportunity to support Black farmers, ranchers, beekeepers, foragers, homesteaders, and others by visiting them to observe how they do what they do and buy what they offer.

The Green Green Book is more than just a travel guide — it is a celebration of culture, community, and connection which includes:

- A comprehensive list of Black agricultural businesses, ranches, apiaries, markets, and more in the U.S.
  - Original passionate poetry, photographs, and historical accounts and testimonies
  - Breakdown of reparations and statuses of legal cases
  - Black agricultural organizations, networks, and HBCUs
  - Black-owned seed companies
  - Black-owned retreats, excursions, and travel groups
  - Steps in applying for a farm number
  - Pages of grant and funding resources and more
- The Green Green Book pays homage to Victor Hugo Green and his humanitarian vision, The Negro Motorist Green-Book (aka The Green Book), which became a comprehensive safety manual by providing a directory of Black-friendly businesses during a time of heightened, legalized racial profiling, and violence. About the Author Dr. LaTatia Stroud, known by her Choctaw name, Rain Angeni, is an Earth steward, writer, and multi-genre artist.

Rain is the founder and CEO of BLACK TRIBE, a thriving community of over 167,000 members who unite to support each other on the journey to self-sufficiency through land, home, and business ownership. Additionally, she established the popular Black Women Homesteading Facebook group.

Rain has earned a bachelor's in behavioral science, a master's in human services administration, a second master's in special education (supervisory and teaching), and a doctorate in curriculum design & educational leadership.

In 2010, Rain founded International Online High School, which focuses instruction on social justice and advocacy while providing a rigorous college prep curriculum.

Her school now services students from PreK through adult education. Since its opening, over 6,200 students have successfully completed classes and have gone on to excel in colleges and universities abroad.

On Sunday, June 23, "Nasty Newport" will be laid to rest as part of a symbolic ceremony at Mason Temple Church of God in Christ, 6098 N. 35th St., in Milwaukee.

The Menthol Funeral is part of a nationwide movement to raise awareness about the harms of menthol tobacco and remember the lives of the estimated 45,000 African Americans who die each year from tobacco-related illnesses.

Also participating in the event is Reid's New Golden Gate Funeral Home, 5665 N. Teutonia Ave. The mock funeral was organized by Mason Temple COGIC and a member of the Wisconsin African American Tobacco Prevention Network.

Special guests that day will include Carol McGruder, founder and co-chair of the African American Tobacco Leadership Council.

Menthol funerals, which have been held in Detroit, Buffalo, Washington D.C., and elsewhere, are modeled after traditional funerals, with symbolic speeches from faith leaders and others who have been impacted by tobacco and by laying to rest a product that is the primary cause of tobacco-related illness and death in the Black community—menthol cigarettes.

The event comes two months after a delay by the federal government in removing menthol and other flavored tobacco from the market, as was proposed by the FDA.

According to the FDA, the changes would have made smoking less appealing to young adults and youth and make it easier for people to quit smoking.

Estimates of the potential impact that removing menthol cigarettes from the market included: A 15 percent reduction in smoking within 40 years of removing menthol cigarettes from the market, and the prevention of between 324,000 to 654,000 smoking attributable deaths overall (92,000 to 238,000 among African Americans) over that same time period.

Menthol, the only flavor allowed in cigarettes, makes smoking easier to start and harder to quit.

The product has been historically targeted to Black and other communities.

Nine in 10 Black smokers in Wisconsin use menthols, according to a report by the UW-Milwaukee Center for Urban Population and Health. Wisconsin has the second worst tobacco disparity between Blacks and whites in the nation, behind Oregon.

In addition to the Menthol Funeral, residents can also learn more about the impact of menthol and the troubling history between the tobacco industry and Black America by visiting the national Same Game Different Smokers Exhibition at Washington Park Branch Library, 2121 N. Sherman Blvd., from now through June 29th.

The funeral, which will be held at 4 p.m., will be followed by a repast at 5 p.m. For free help to quit smoking call 1-800-QUIT-NOW.

Milwaukee Democratic Leaders Slam Trump for Trashing Wisconsin's Most Diverse City

Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley speaking at the press conference

Recently, State Representative Kalan Haywood and Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley held a press conference slamming Donald Trump for insulting Milwaukee and highlighting the RNC's abandoned outreach to minority communities.

The press conference was held at a local brewery that is now selling their "(not so) Horrible City" IPA after Trump disparaged Milwaukee.

The press conference follows reports that Donald Trump called Milwaukee "horrible" in a closed-door meeting last week and then planned to avoid spending time in Wisconsin's most diverse city by staying at Trump Tower in Chicago during the Republican National Convention.

"Here's the truth: Donald Trump looks down on Milwaukee, on Wisconsin, on anyone who isn't one of his billionaire donors.

"If he bothered to come to Milwaukee and actually listen to or respect voters here, he'd learn that we are fed up with his efforts to strip away reproductive rights from women, to raise health care costs for working families, to cut the Social Security and Medicare our moms and dads rely on," said Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley.

"President Biden would never disparage this city. He loves us, he respects us, and more than that, he's a decent man. A person of character, who wants to be a president for all Americans – including Wisconsinites. So, to Trump, I say, 'You

The media is responsible for the racist rhetoric around women's basketball!

OPINION: The divisive narrative that frames Caitlin Clark as a white damsel in distress who is under attack by Black women in the WNBA has gotten out of hand.

By MONIQUE JUDGE, article courtesy of thegrio.com

I studied mass communication and media studies in college, and I have been obsessed with watching how the media operates and controls society — especially in the United States.

Journalists are supposed to be the “watchdogs” of society. We are here to monitor what is happening and disseminate that information to the public, and, for the most part, that is what journalists have done in this country.

A lot has changed in the age of the 24/7 news cycle, however, and in the race for clicks, eyes and engagement, the line between real journalism and yellow journalism has been so muddled that I sometimes wonder how much longer all of this can last.

Studying media is my kink, and I watch how journalists and media organizations alike play the “media game” and use their platforms for both good and evil.

I have always been particularly fascinated with the way agenda setting, status conferral, narrative and framing play out in modern society. In school, our case examples were the different points of view from which war and conflicts the United States involved itself were reported.

Years from now, journalism students are going to study the way the white male-dominated sports media has used agenda setting, status conferral, and framing to craft a narrative that paints Caitlin Clark as a victim of constant antagonism at the hands of the Black women in the WNBA.

I don't think I need to give a play-by-play of what has happened so far.

Caitlin Clark finished her time at Iowa and was drafted No. 1 into the WNBA by the Indiana Fever.

She's not the only rookie who was drafted, and she isn't even the best rookie in the league right now, but through status conferral, she has been put on a pedestal and elevated to the position of being “the best thing to ever happen to the WNBA,” which is completely unfair to the other women who have worked hard in the league before she got there and continue to work hard in the league now that she's here.

Status conferral is when the media decides that one person or one thing is more important than everything and everyone else. They will keep beating us over the head with news and stories about that person or thing until we are all tired of hearing it.

I'm tired of hearing about Caitlin Clark.

I'm tired of hearing about Caitlin Clark, and it has nothing to do with the fact that she's white, but the framing of the narrative around her — a narrative created by white, male-dominated sports media that is being swallowed whole and regurgitated by legacy media on a daily basis — is that everyone is against her because she's a white girl who came into the W and “took over,” and all the

It is recommended, but not required that you have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not demand a copy of the Petition within 40 days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Petition, and you may lose your right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Petition.

A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

Commissioner.

(2) Upon the request of a party to an action affecting the family, including a revision of judgment or order under sec.
767.59 or 767.451:

- (a) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall, with or without charge, provide the party with written information on the following, as appropriate to the action commenced:
1. The procedure for obtaining a judgment or order in the action.
2. The major issues usually addressed in such an action.
3. Community resources and family court counseling services available to assist the parties.
4. The procedure for setting, modifying, and enforcing child support awards, or modifying and enforcing legal custody or physical placement judgments or orders.
(b) The Circuit Court Commissioner shall provide a party, for inspection or purchase, with a copy of the statutory provisions in this chapter generally pertinent to the action.

The media is responsible for the racist rhetoric around women's basketball!

Black women are jealous of her. Please. BFFR. It doesn't take much to work the white racists in this country into a lather. All you have to do is put "Black" and "white" in a sentence together, and they are all foaming at the mouths to yell at Black people, call us racist, and tell us everything is our fault. Agenda setting is the idea that the media controls not only what people pay attention to, but how they think about it as well. Sensationalizing a story, giving the most salacious details about something, or constantly talking about the same thing over and over again confers status on that person or thing and guides the way the general public views and perceives it.

White media is doing that with

When we say we are tired of hearing about her, we know it has nothing to do with her being white and everything to do with the fact that she's being shoved down our throats in such an aggressive way, it's a wonder we aren't all walking around constantly gagging.

The white media is obsessed with her, however, because she is their "great white hope," and in order to keep her name in the headlines, they have to create a narrative (or storyline) that they can keep going for as long as they have to so she can be the daily topic.

In a post-George Floyd America, that narrative is one that is divisive and racist.

Caitlin Clark isn't being handled any differently than any and waiting for the opportunity to attack any Black person who dares to mention her.

We get Fox News calling Caitlin Clark the "Jackie Robinson of the WNBA" because she was fouled by her college basketball rival, Angel Reese.

To be fair, it isn't just white media doing this. We watched Shannon Sharpe and Stephen A. Smith — two Black men who should know better — spend the better part of two weeks talking over Black women who play basketball and know their sport inside and out, all so they could cape for Caitlin Clark.

It's disgusting. One of the basic ethical tenets of journalism is to "do no harm." This media narrative about Caitlin Clark is harmful. It's harmful to the WNBA. It's harmful to Black women like Angel Reese and Chennedy CaKrtter and any other Black woman who has to guard Clark or play against her in a game.

The media has a responsibility to the public, and that responsibility is being shirked in deference to uplifting a white woman and pretending she is the greatest thing since sliced bread.

Caitlin Clark is doing well for a rookie, but she's not the best rookie. She's not even the best white rookie. Kate Martin would like a word.

In its ranking of WNBA rookies in the first month of the 2024 season, ESPN has Caitlin Clark ranked as No. 6. Cameron Brink is No. 1, followed by Angel Reese at No. 2. Kate Martin is No. 3.

I don't mention this to discredit Caitlin Clark; I share it to prove a point. Caitlin Clark is good, but she's not the best, and the idea that she is "intimidating" the Black women in the league is a Stretch Armstrong-level reach.

This narrative has been in the slow cooker since Angel Reese and Caitlin Clark faced each other in the NCAA championship.

White people have been waiting to get their lick back for that loss, and they view this as their golden opportunity.

White journalists and racist white people have made it so incredibly unbearable to be on social media in any space where basketball is being discussed.

They don't even care about the sport; they only care about having a way to dunk on Black women — pun fully intended.

The energy is frenetic and frantic at this point, and it's completely out of hand.

White racists find any and every opportunity to attack Angel Reese, Chennedy Carter, and every other Black woman in the W who they view as a threat to their white princess, and it doesn't stop there.

You can't be a Black person who mentions Caitlin Clark online without getting attacked for it, especially if you are a Black woman. Ask me how I know.

I recently tweeted "I am very tired of hearing that girl's name." I didn't even specify who I was talking about, but you can click through the tweet and see the responses I got.

Similarly, when I questioned the idea that Clark has "pretty privilege," the racists came out in full force to attack me. I didn't call her ugly. I didn't say anything negative about her. I simply questioned the use of the phrase "pretty privilege" in reference to her, and white people lost it.

I'm just a writer talking on Twitter.

Imagine what the Black women in the WNBA are facing during this timeline.

The media narrative around Caitlin Clark is dangerous to Angel Reese and every other Black woman in the WNBA, and at the rate it's going, someone is going to end up hurt, and the media will be entirely complicit in that.

Caitlin Clark recently denounced the use of her name in the obvious race-baiting media storm that's happening right now, and my personal opinion is that her statement was weak AF, and she only did it after being called out by Dijonai Carrington.

Caitlin Clark is the epitome of white privilege — specifically the privilege of being a white woman in America.

She can easily overlook everything that is happening because it doesn't negatively impact her; she benefits from it, and she has the level of privilege to not have to openly acknowledge it because no matter what, they racist white people are going to defend their "queen."

If Caitlin is not going to speak up, someone else white needs to. A lot of white people need to speak out and call this b.s. out for what it is.

This week, the white people are foaming at the mouth because Angel fouled Caitlin during their matchup last Sunday.

The media is playing its part by hyping it up into something it really isn't, and if you look at the Angel Reese trending topic on Twitter, you get a very concerning view of what that type of narrative and framing does to an unintelligent, rabidly racist "fan-base."

We can't even really call them fans because they don't care about basketball; they just care about belittling and disrespecting Black women in the name of a white girl.

It's a tale as old as time. White fragility leads to white violence.

Let's pray none of the Black women who have been unwillingly thrust into this situation end up hurt.

Wisconsin Families Spending 14% More Time Together Compared to 2018, According to Study!

Families in the Badger State spend 4 hours and 55 minutes of quality time together.

5% of families ban cell phones at the table.

Spending time with family is universally cherished as one of life's profound yet fundamental joys. Indeed, a Pew Research Center survey found that for many Americans, family time is a paramount priority.

Backyard Oasis, a company that offers premium backyard furniture & gear, recently conducted a survey of 3,000 families to determine how much quality time they spend together each week.

The survey revealed that the average Wisconsin family spends just 4 hours and 55 minutes of quality time together each week (compared to a national average of 6 hours and 17 minutes).

While that might sound like just enough time to binge-watch a couple of episodes of your favorite show, the good news is that, compared to a similar study in 2018, families are spending almost half an hour more per week together. This is a 14% increase compared to six years ago.

There were notable geographical variations. North Dakota families, for example, spend 8 hours and 30 minutes together each week, an increase of almost 100%.

On the other hand, families in West Virginia spend the least amount of time together, averaging just 4 hours and 30 minutes of quality time each week.

Backyard Oasis delved further into the topic of quality family time. They asked Wisconsin respondents how many times they sit together for meals each week, with the average being four times.

When it comes to activities, families have varied preferences. The survey found that the most favored activity for families to do together is watching TV or movies, with 41% of respondents choosing this option.

Other popular activities include:

- Playing board games or video games: 17%
- Traveling or taking day trips: 15%
- Engaging in outdoor activities (e.g., hiking, biking): 13%
- Cooking or baking together: 13%

Of course, organizing these activities can sometimes be a bit tricky. Almost half of the families (49%) said planning family trips is the toughest challenge. Fifteen percent find coordinating a simple family meal to be a Herculean task, while 14% said getting everyone together for sports is the hardest.

And then there's the question of technology. When asked about the use of electronic devices during family time, 12% of families admitted that phones are always welcome at the dinner table. A more laid-back 67% said devices are sometimes allowed, while a strict 5% said they're banned altogether.

"Family time is a cornerstone of happiness and well-being," says Andy Wu of Backyard Oasis. "Despite modern day challenges, the good news is that families are spending nearly two hours more together each week compared to a few years ago, which is a positive trend. We hope these insights encourage more families to prioritize and cherish their time together, creating lasting memories and stronger bonds."

Milwaukee Dem Leaders Slam Trump for Trashing Wisconsin's Most Diverse City

think our city is so horrible? This November, we're going to send you packing – just like we did in 2020."

"Our Black and Latino communities are what make us strong – and this November, it will be us who decide the presidential election here in Wisconsin, and likely in the country as a whole. So, when Trump called our city 'horrible' in a closed-door meeting with MAGA Republicans last week, we knew what that was. Yet another racist dog whistle," said State Representative Kalan Haywood. "Trump ignoring our communities was already insulting – and then he went and actually insulted our city. I'll be voting for President Biden, and I know I'm not the only one who's fed up with Trump's racist attacks."

"When I heard about Donald Trump calling my city 'horrible' last week, I was not just surprised, but truly shocked and angered by this. It's enough that he is so terrible on all the issues that matter to me – protecting Social Security and Medicare, creating good jobs and strengthening the economy, safeguarding our democracy. But to also disrespect us? It's just adding insult to injury," said Sabrina Jordan, Biden-Harris 2024 volunteer. "I think he fears the coalition we formed in 2020 – the one that roundly rejected him and is the reason he lost that year. He recognizes the strength of the city he dismisses as 'horrible,' and is deeply afraid of it."

While Trump tries to get away with spending as little time as possible in Wisconsin, the Biden-Harris campaign, Democrats, and the DNC are building the infrastructure to win with over 100 staff on the ground and 47 coordinated campaign offices across the state. Unlike Trump, Team Biden-Harris loves Milwaukee – for the first time in 20 years, the Democratic Coordinated HQ is based in Milwaukee, underscoring the importance of key constituencies in the city, including minority voters.
