COMMUNITY RESIDENTS FIGHT TO KEEP LOCAL PICK 'N SAVE OPEN AMID KROGER CLOSURES!

Pick n Save pic source Google Street View

Residents of Milwaukee are rallying to keep their local Pick 'n Save grocery stores open after Kroger announced plans to shutter several locations, including the store at 35th and Meinecke slated to close on July 18.

As reported by a local news outlet, a recent community meeting at Milwaukee's Metcalfe Park Community Bridges was packed with dozens of community members voicing their concerns. "Our community deserves a grocery store," stated Melody McCurtis, lead organizer for the group, highlighting that the neighborhood requires more notice than what was given.

The grocery store's closure is part of a wider move by Kroger to close 60 stores nationwide, and the decision has left many feeling abandoned.

According to a local news report, residents only became aware of the impending closure through a Facebook post and argued the community needs more time to adapt to such a significant change.

In the wake of Kroger's decision to strategically enhance efficiency, the local community is calling for grocery chain to keep the store operational until at least December 2025, as stated in a television interview with McCurtis by a local news outlet.

Alderman Russell Stamper, who shops at the same Pick 'n Save location, expressed his disappointment in a statement to media, emphasizing the store's importance for daily necessities and pointing out the heavy reliance the community has on its accessibility.

"I'm disappointed that it's leaving and it's going to hurt us, but we're resilient," Stamper said. The importance of the store extends beyond just food, as residents also depend on the pharmacy for medications. With no immediate grocery stores or pharmacies in the vicinity, Dr. Jennifer Potts from the Center Street Business Improvement District told reporters covering the meeting, "The food, the necessities, the milk, the bread, the produce, the meat, we need that in our community."

Despite actions by Pick 'n Save to offer solutions such as free prescription delivery for the remainder of the year and a "30-day free Boost membership trial" for home grocery delivery, community members stressed these efforts are not enough to fully address the impact of the store's closing, as mentioned on local television news.

As part of their response, Pick 'n Save communicated these measures to customers, hoping to ameliorate the inconvenience caused by the closures.

Yet, as Andron Lane, a Milwaukee resident, expressed to local media, the closures will likely create a "ripple effect" impacting not only the community but other support systems such as food pantries.

Ald. Russell Stamper, II Equipped to Serve!

Ald. Stamper

By Kathy Gaillard

Alderman Russell Stamper II still recalls the poem, "Equipment" by Edgar Guest that his mother, Virginia G. Stamper (deceased) used to read to him. The first stanza is:

You've all that the greatest of men have had,
Two arms, two hands,
two legs, two eyes,
And a brain to use if you would be wise.
With this equipment,
they all began,
So start from the top and say, "I can."*

Ald. Stamper continues to embrace and live by that poem. Since 2014, he has been re-elected to the Common Council four times. He has faced his own weaknesses and overcome challenges but has never let that stop him from progressing, doing good deeds, and deciding who linguistics.

His father was a circuit court judge and later a county judge. He grew up with his siblings— younger sister, Candace, who now lives in Houston, TX, and a and what he wants to be.

A Milwaukee native, Ald. Stamper grew up in the Sherman Park neighborhood. His mother was a school principal and a UWM professor with a Ph.D. in younger brother, Rashan, a rap star and producer, who passed away at the age of 18 years old.

"My parents kept me involved in lots of activities. I never wanted for anything. When I was in the eighth grade, my parents split up and I started drifting in school. They enrolled me in several different schools before finding the right fit.

"I went from Clara Muhammad School to Brookfield Academy, Golda Meir, Morse, Riverside High School and, finally, Messmer High School.

"Truthfully, I was having so much fun during my freshman year at Riverside High School that I didn't do my work.

"You only get two appeals during the entire four years at Riverside and I used both my appeals during my freshman year.

"I was always the center of attention and enjoyed it, but when I got to Messmer High School, I finally buckled down and graduated.

Ald. Russell Stamper, II Equipped to Serve!

"I learned that you could survive (and flourish) in the right environment and with the right nurturing. Within a year, I went from a 1.8 to a 3.8 GPA at Messmer," he said.

After high school Ald. Stamper attended Alabama State University in Montgomery, with dreams of becoming an electrical engineer.

"After two years there, I transferred to Auburn University because Alabama State didn't have an engineering program and Auburn, which was 156 miles away, had one of the best electrical engineer programs.

"All the math courses I took paid off though, so I ended up graduating with a degree in Computer Science," he said.

Upon returning to Milwaukee after college, Ald. Stamper worked for Trisept Solutions and worked in the family business, Grant's Soul Food Restaurants.

"Computer science was just not my forte. For three weeks I found myself in a room calculating algorithms.

"The six other colleagues in the room with me were computer geeks, so there was no conversation, no discussions about sports or politics—just computers. They had no personality, so that just did not work for me," he said.

In 2001 Ald. Stamper received an opportunity to work at New Concept Self Development Center.

"Ms. June Perry, then President/CEO of New Concept, gave me my own program. I worked there for eight years where I became certified in Anger Management, Conflict Resolution, Life Skills training, Behavior Modification, and Grant Writing. During that time, she sent me all over the country for training. I ended up securing Chapter 220 contracts for grants for all the areas for which I was certified.

"I had a staff of eight who went into schools to provide wrap-around services so teachers could focus on their classrooms," he said.

While at New Concept, Ald. Stamper attended Cardinal Stritch University where he earned a master's degree in business. For a time, he also worked at the Social Development Commission (SDC). After a time he worked for the Wisconsin Works (W-2) Program.

He also used his business acumen to invest in real estate and started a first time home buyer program on the side.

"Working at W-2 helped me understand that I needed to do more to help my people. Ninety percent of the clients were women with two or more kids.

"Seeing all the women in need, trying to get child support and jobs propelled me to look up resources to help my clients. Then, when Lee Holloway told me he was retiring, I moved into the fifth district and put my name in the hat to run for office. My goal was to help the community more at the policy level," said Ald. Stamper.

Among his many mentors, Ald. Stamper said that after he became an alderman, former Common Council Chair Marvin Pratt had the most influence on him.

"I admired his smoothness. His ability to engage with others reminded me of politicians like former Chicago Mayor Harold Washington and former Washington DC Mayor Marion Barry," said Ald. Stamper.

Malcolm X is Ald. Stamper's subliminal mentor.

"I would have loved to have met him. I admire his journey and commitment to community. The greatest book I have ever read was Malcolm X's biography. It was excellent," he said.

Before she passed, Ald. Stamper counted his mother as his biggest cheerleader, then it became his wife, Latoya Stamper, and his sister.

"My wife and sister have been replaced by my 10 year old daughter, Kendall Imani. I recently went into my office and she had taken about 300 Post-It notes that said, "I love you dad," and placed them everywhere," he said with a laugh.

While his career may seem somewhat circuitous, Ald. Stamper said that he always knew that he wanted to help the community and give back in some manner.

"I want my community to change. I want people to understand that they do not deserve to live in unclean, disrespected neighborhoods. I want them to take ownership of their neighborhood and respect, uphold and uplift where they stay," he said.

He also believes in leading by example.

"You must have discipline. It is important to know right from wrong and to do the right thing, no matter how you feel.

"You have to focus and work hard to be successful, and you do it one day at a time. You don't need to have a BIG plan. Just have a plan.

"And learn the four powers of greatness-- listening, speaking, writing and reading.

"I pride myself on respecting all young Black men and trying to imbue in them their history. If I see them not wearing a belt, I give them one or give them money to buy one or give them a necktie from my trunk. I tell them that they have to have the right mindset about themselves, their family and their community, but they can't do it without God. Everything comes from a faith-based perspective," he said.

Ald. Stamper said that aspires "to be remembered as someone who stood with his community and helped move it forward for future generations."

2025 Milwaukee police crime data; 2nd-quarter report released

On Wednesday, the Milwaukee Police Department released its mid-year crime report, providing data from the first six months of 2025.

With the mid-year review, Milwaukee police say homicides have increased 13% – up to 69 from 61 this time in 2024.

Auto thefts are down 8% – down to 2,656 from 2,898 this time in 2024. Carjackings decreased 35% – down to 154 from 237.

"The numbers that we are presenting today show a pretty good trend overall, in terms of crime continuing to drop in Milwaukee," said Mayor Cavalier Johnson.

"When you look at the numbers, this time, compared to last year, there's a 17% or so continued decline in major crime categories in the city, which is a good thing, and about 20% from two years ago." Officials noted in 2025, the homicide clearance rate is 82 percent.

"One note of exception as crime continues to drop in Milwaukee are homicide numbers, which unfortunately have ticked up in the city over the course of this quarter," said Johnson.

"As you can see from the data, overall Part 1 crime still trends in the right direction. We do acknowledge an increase in homicides," said Chief Jeffrey Norman, Milwaukee Police Department.

"The majority of our homicides stem from poor conflict resolution, petty arguments, and inter-family conflict.

We struggle to understand how interpersonal disagreements result in acts of violence, particularly involving youth."

Black voter support for Trump is sinking, polls show

By Sudiksha Kochi, article courtesy of USA Today via newsbreak.com

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump's approval rating among Black Americans is sinking, according to some of the latest polling, despite Trump making inroads with the electorate in last year's presidential race.

A June Pew Research study found that Trump won 15% of Black voters in the 2024 election, up from 8% in 2020.

The study noted that the shift mainly had to do with higher voter turnout in 2024 compared to 2020.

Trump also held an edge over former Vice President Kamala Harris, his opponent, among voters "who did not vote four years earlier – a group that was considerably more diverse" than those who voted in 2024 and in 2020, according to the study.

But Black voters have been dissatisfied with Trump's presidency, polls show.

A Decision Desk HQ average of polls found that at the start of his term, Trump had a disapproval rating of 44% and an approval rating of 35% among Black voters.

However, his disapproval rating slowly started to increase. By the beginning of March, it was at around 63%, and it has reached 71.5% as of July 7.

A survey by the The Economist/YouGov conducted between July 4 and July 7 also found a dip in support among Black voters for Trump.

It found that 15% of Black voters approve of the way Trump is handling his job as president, compared to 20% of Black voters who approved of his job handling in a June survey.

Since coming into office, Trump has unleashed a tariff war with other countries, sparking concerns among Americans over price increases back home.

More recently, he signed into law his sweeping tax and domestic policy bill, which is expected to add trillions to the national debt.

Black Americans' approval over the way Trump has handled inflation and prices has also decreased. The July YouGov/The Economist survey found that only 16% of Black voters approve of Trump's handling of these issues, compared to 19% in June.

The July survey, conducted among 1,528 U.S. adult citizens, has a margin of error of plus or minus four percentage points.

The Milwaukee County Historical Society is currently producing a television documentary about the history of Milwaukee's Black community. It will start with the arrival of Joe Oliver, who settled here in 1835 to work as a cook for fur trader Solomon Juneau, and continue through the 'Black Lives Matter' movement of today. The project is led by John Gurda, a writer and historian who has been studying his hometown since 1972, working with Black historians Clayborn Benson III, Reginald Jackson, and Dr. Robert Smith of Marquette University. The documentary will rely heavily on historical photographs from local archives, including the Wisconsin Black Historical Society and Museum, but community input is being actively sought. In order to give the film an authentic grassroots flavor, the producers are looking for both still photos and especially home movies that depict every life in the Black community in decades past. The subjects will include backyard barbecues, house parties, birthday celebrations, musical performances, amateur sporting events, graduations, weddings, anniversaries, and anything else that shows what daily life was like in the past. Movies made before 1990 are of particular interest and a modest honorarium will be paid for images actually used in the documentary. Anyone interested in helping the project can contact the producers through the Milwaukee Community Journal. Call 414-265-5300 or email MCJ: editorial@milwaukeecommunityjournal.com.

Unless we have a second civil war (don't laugh), do you really need a gun?

The use of a semi-automatic rifle in the recent assassination of Milwaukee police officer Kendall Corder by an urban terrorist has again fueled the on-going debate about the wealth of guns in the central city.

That deliberation was at the center of a back and forth between myself and a young relative who was eyeing a similar AR-15 style weapon following our hour-long shooting session at a south side gun range. My concern centered on his 'need' for that type of weapon. His response was it was for target shooting (not hunting as is the most common response). His secondary reason: its usefulness in the upcoming civil war.

Yeah, you heard that right---civil war. I must admit I uttered similar contentions---however, seemingly implausible---prior to the last presidential election.

My fear was that had wanna-be King Donald Trump lost, a White 'black-lash' would have shaken the foundation of this country.

And even though the 'emperor' won, the remote possibility of a rebellion by immigrants, neo-socialists and political malcontents is still in play, my nephew believes, particularly if the current direction of the country leads to the era before Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was fitted for his mountain climbing shoes.

Whether the flood of Black and White Americans who sent guns (including semi-automatic rifles) sales soaring over the last two decades can be linked to race/political concerns or fear of crime, is disputable. But it speaks volumes that there are now 466 million 'legal' guns in homes, glove compartments and on the hips of John Wayne wanna-be's---aka so-called 'good' American citizens.

Think about that...there are approximately 120 firearms for every 100 people. We are the most 'armed' nation on the planet, and yet, the British are not coming. Nor are the Russians, Vietnamese or Chinese. More likely, it's White Supremists, urban terrorists or zombies. And while you're trying to figure out if I'm overstating my trepidation, consider 32 people are killed by a firearm each day.

According to the Pew Research Center, there were 13.7 gun deaths per 100,000 people in 2023.

Not all of those deaths were linked to domestic violence, homicides or police assaults. Many were linked to suicides and accidental deaths; a percentage of which were children. Over 3,500 children die in gun related deaths each year!

Gun purchases peaked during the pandemic. Not by coincidence, the election of Democratic presidents---specifically Barack Obama and Joe Biden---saw (legal) gun sales soar. The rationale was those liberal presidents would disarm America and rescind the 2nd Amendment.

“Whether the flood of Black and White Americans who sent guns (including semi-automatic rifles) sales soaring over the last two decades can be linked to race/political concerns or fear of crime, is disputable. But it speaks volumes that there are now 466 million ‘legal’ guns in homes, glove compartments and on the hips of John Wayne wanna-be’s---aka so-called ‘good’ American citizens.”

Which takes me to the primary reason for this column, (and my concerns expressed to my young relative). And it's directed specifically toward the men buying handguns with extended clips and the sisters who purchase pink handled.380s (as if the pink on the gun helps them shoot straighter): I hate to burst your bubble, but the possibility of you being caught up in a gun fight at high noon (and emerging unscathed), is similar to your odds of winning the lottery, or Trump going a whole week without lying.

I can understand your fears given the tsunami of urban terrorism, mass shootings (fortunately most thugs and gangsters can't shoot straight) and the murder rate. But what's needed more than a bazooka is a regular check before assuming it will ever be used.

I have heard of incidents in which merely displaying a weapon has thwarted a shooting, but that is rare.

I mentioned in a column last year of a scenario involving my barber who was threatened with a gun (it was displayed, but not pointed) over a car accident. Fortunately (and that's an inappropriate word), the barber's grandson was in his car, and displayed his weapon as a retort, defusing (equally inappropriate verb) the scenario. But that situation could have gone sideways with a quickness!

The standing rule is don't pull a weapon unless you plan to use it. And if you do, shoot to kill!

We question, if not criticize, police for emptying an entire clip, sometimes 'inappropriately' shooting a subject on the ground---seemly overkill (no pun intended). But they are trained to continue shooting until the 'threat' is in route to heaven, or hell.

If a citizen, even in a case of self-defense, used that

Two points come to mind as I reminisce about that tragedy: The brother was improperly trained, if at all. No properly trained armed security guard would have allowed the thugs to get behind him.

Secondly, the thugs/terrorists/gangstas knew what they were doing.

That horrific lesson should be absorbed by all of you ego tripping; walking around displaying your weapon. Even John Wick didn't show his weapons.

Yet, every other day I see some Bass Reeves wanna-be at a public venue either openly showing his weapon (steel penis) or wearing inappropriate attire which shows the outline of their weapon.

Maybe a better question (beyond an obvious display of machismo) is what's the purpose of carrying at all? Truth of the matter is if you're approached during a robbery, and have a gun pointed at you, you're not going to get an opportunity to retaliate, unless it's after the fact.

And if you shoot a fleeing thug, you're going to jail, just as you would be if you shot a fleeing burglar in your home.

There are rare circumstances of a 'justifiable' shooting during a home invasion, but even then you better be able to afford an attorney like noted defense attorney Dan Adams. I'm not saying there is no circumstance under which carrying a gun is appropriate.

I have been known to carry myself. But only in certain neighborhoods and under specific circumstances.

And I guarantee you I know how to use a weapon and when. Additionally, I've taught martial arts and self-defense for four decades. Plus, I'm a Vietnam and civil rights veteran. Moreover, I learned the hard way to look both ways before crossing a busy intersection, not to throw up my middle finger at a reckless driver, or to date a married woman.

I advise folks to purchase a shotgun for home defense, and if you are committed to carrying a weapon, take a concealed carry class first. Better yet, carry pepper spray and wear track shoes.

For the record, I convinced my nephew not to waste $1,000 on a weapon he will most likely only use for target shooting.

I told him to dismiss the idea of a civil war. At least for now.

Hotep.

In The Line of Duty!

By Greg Thompson

This is extremely hard for me to write about as this keeps happening too many times. As many of you know we had two Milwaukee Police Officers shot on June 26 in the area of 25 th and Garfield St.

The officers were sent to a shot fired call and were ambushed in the alley as they were approaching the scene.

A suspect hiding in the bushes opened fire hitting both officers. They were both taken to the hospital with one being in critical condition.

The suspect, a 22-year-old male, was taken into custody 5 hours later, at a home on the north side.

The officers were from District Two on the south side but were sent to District Three because assignments were backed up. Officer Corder squad is on the front of the district two lawn and people are leaving cards, flowers, and other items to honor him.

Numerous people are also leaving food and other items for the officers at the station. MPD released a video of Officer Corder talking about how he really loved being an officer.

He did this for a friend whose daughter was doing a class project. Officer Corder went to Cudahy High School and was on the football team.

Many knew him as a gentle giant as he was six feet three inches tall.

A teammate on the football team, Dylan Dooley, discussed their relationship. Dylan said:” he was a mentor to me. Pure leadership and passion. He went out of his way to protect those that were being bullied.”

He continued: “he was a hero before he was on the police department. He protected those who could not protect themselves.”

The suspect has been charged and has a $500,000 bail. The funeral for officer Corder is Friday, July 11. It will be at Elmbrook Church with a visit from 11am to 2pm, and the funeral starting at 2:30pm. The burial will follow at Wisconsin Memorial Park. Attend if you can or say a prayer to our officers who protect us each and every day.

In Memory of Officer Kendall Corder

By Larry G. Johnson, Milwaukee's Peace Poet
The Milwaukee Police Department is a great crime fighting crew trying to protect all citizens in these days of tough times.

So to all you criminals, look out, because without a doubt (messing with) the Milwaukee Police is something you should think twice about if you're thinking of committing a crime. They will protect what's yours and mine.

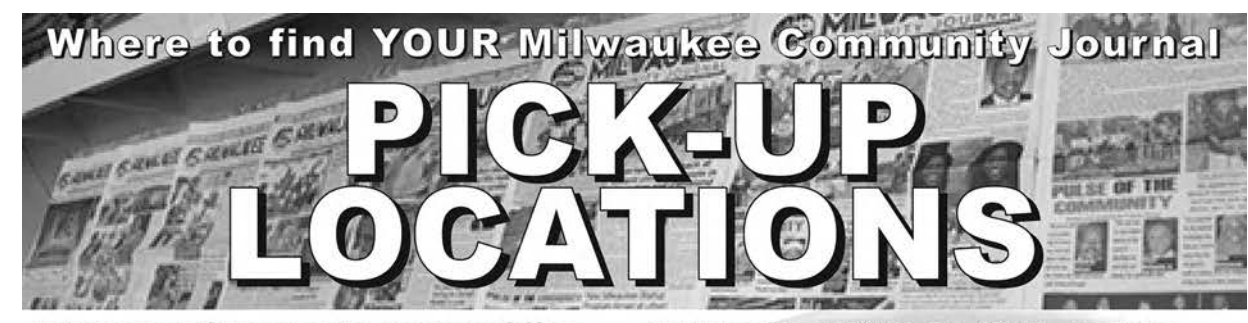

So, if you don't want to do the time, please don't do the crime. And to all communities, let's get involved and show these officers that we care, because officers working a beat can't be everywhere!

So the next time you pass an officer working his or her beat, greet them with a smile.

They are working to keep all of us safe as they drive mile after mile.

Some would say that police officers are bad, but we have the finest we have ever had.

Rest in Peace Officer Kendall Corder!

WE HAVE BLACK MILWAUKEE'S ATTENTION!

Trump's 'Big Beautiful Bill' Is The Latest Chapter In America's War On Black Ed!

In this op-ed, Dr. Stacey Patton explains how provisions in Trump's "Big Beautiful Bill" limit educational opportunities for Black Americans.

Attacking Black education is an unbroken American tradition.

During slavery, it was illegal for Black people to read and write. Then, during Jim Crow segregation, Black schools were starved of funding and resources to keep us uneducated, subservient, and cheap to exploit. After Brown v. Board, America fought desegregation with "school choice" and white flight to keep our schools separate and unequal. Fast-forward to the Bush years, and we got No Child Left Behind, a high-stakes testing scam that penalized Black and brown schools for being under-resourced while threatening them with closure. Then Obama's Race to the Top incentivized teacher firings, charter schools, and test prep factories instead of actual investment. And let's not forget the explosion of charter schools themselves—privatizing education while gutting public systems that Black families rely on.

Then America came for affirmative action, stripping away one of the few tools meant to open doors to higher education for us. And if you've managed to survive all that and still claw your way into college, that's when they really tighten the noose. They'll gladly hand you a degree so long as you sign away your future and bind yourself to a lifetime of endless debt. Because debt is one of America's oldest weapons of social control. And Donald Trump's "Big Beautiful Bill" is nothing but sharecropping for student loans. They no longer need to chain your body to a field; they just chain your paycheck to a monthly bill you'll never finish paying off before you kick the bucket. Just as Black enrollment in college and graduate programs more than doubled over the past few decades, tuition costs skyrocketed, and the student loan system exploded, turning higher education from a promise of mobility into a machine for generational debt. In 1976, Black students made up about 9% of undergraduates in the U.S. By the mid-2010s, that share had climbed to around 14–15%, with raw numbers rising from roughly 900,000 to over 2 million. Graduate enrollment tells a similar story. Between the 1980s and 2010s, the number of Black students pursuing advanced degrees more than doubled as well. Even with slight declines in the late 2010s, the long arc is undeniable: more Black students were getting in the door. But at the very moment our access was expanding, those doors got dramatically more expensive to walk through. Inflation-adjusted tuition at public four-year colleges tripled between 1980 and 2020, from about $2,000 to over $7,000 per year in 2020 dollars. Private nonprofit four-year tuition roughly doubled in that same window, surging from around $11,000 to over $28,000 annually. Even community colleges, often marketed as "affordable," saw real costs rise. To bridge that gap, students borrowed heavily. The federal student loan portfolio ballooned from under $250 billion in the early 2000s to over $1.7 trillion by the early 2020s. Policy changes like expanding Parent

PLUS and Grad PLUS loans specifically pushed borrowing for families and graduate students, hitting Black borrowers especially hard. A 2016 Brookings study found Black graduates owed, on average, $7,400 more than white peers at graduation, and held 11–13% more debt even 12 years later. In other words, just as Black students finally started to enter higher education in greater numbers, the system shifted to make sure that access came with a lifetime price tag. We were told we could get our degrees, but we'd have to pay tribute for the privilege for decades to come. It's the old plantation logic dressed up in tuition bills and promissory notes: work the land, pay the master most of what you earn, and be grateful for the chance. And let's not ignore what was happening inside those institutions at the same time. This shift also coincided with the rise of the low-paid adjunct instructor workforce, now the majority of college faculty. Most of them are white women, mirroring the racial and gender makeup of the K–12 teaching force. Why does this matter for Black education? Because even as our enrollment surged, we were more likely to be taught by instructors underpaid, overworked, and with little institutional power or investment in us. It reproduced the same old dynamic: Black students funneled into under-resourced classrooms while paying ever-higher prices for the privilege. At the same time that more Black, Latinx, and other historically excluded students were fighting their way in, often the first in their families to attend college, white undergraduate and graduate enrollments flattened or declined. And so colleges needed new paying customers. But instead of truly opening the doors with investment, states cut funding. Schools jacked up tuition. The federal government expanded loans. In other words, they didn't mind letting us in, but they refused to pay for us to succeed. They shifted the cost burden onto us precisely as our numbers grew. That's not an accident. It's a business model. So when I call this a modern form of sharecropping, I'm saying that the system adapted to extract as much as possible from new Black and brown students, knowing full well that structural racism would make repayment harder. Meanwhile, state legislatures were busy gutting public universities, slashing funding, attacking humanities disciplines, and treating education as mere job training. As states disinvested, they hired cheaper, overworked instructors, and they cut programs. They made school worse and more expensive at the same time. And who bore the brunt? The same students who'd finally broken through decades of legal barriers, segregation, and underfunded K–12 systems to even get there. Too many students emerged with expensive, narrow, or even worthless degrees that employers didn't respect. Combined with crushing debt, this is a formula for permanent precarity. We get told to chase education as the ticket out, only to discover the ticket is invalid and the debt is forever. It's not opportunity, it's entrapment. Trump's Big Beautiful Bill is just the latest hustle to keep us in economic bondage. It tears up the current income-driven repayment plans, like SAVE and PAYE, that many Black borrowers rely on. Those plans cap payments as a share of income and offer forgiveness after 20–25 years. Under Trump's bill, borrowers get two stripped-down options, one with forgiveness only after 30 years, the other just a standard plan stretched out to 25. He's scrapping deferment for hardship and unemployment. If you can't pay, then too bad. Interest piles up. Default explodes. Garnishments come for your wages, your tax refund, and your Social Security. That matters because Black borrowers already owe more than their white peers on average, both at graduation and years later. We're also more likely to have used federal PLUS loans, Parent and Grad, which Trump's plan caps or eliminates.

Many of us turn to these loans because our families have less generational wealth to draw on. His plan means pushing us out of federal protections and into private lenders who charge more and forgive nothing. They know exactly what they're doing. This isn't just about individual debt; it's about engineering collective immobility via our educational and economic aspirations. It's about ensuring that Black people remain a labor pool with fewer choices. When your credit is ruined, you can't buy a house. When your wages are garnished, you can't save or invest. When your degree is shackled to debt you can't pay off, it's not freedom, it's another contract with the plantation. Debt is social control. It tells you where you can live, what jobs you can take, and what risks you can afford. And for Black borrowers, the risk of default is higher because of structural racism in hiring, wages, and wealth. Even with the same credit profiles, Black borrowers are more likely to face debt-collection judgments. This bill is a gift to that industry. So when they say this is about "simplifying repayment," know the truth. It's about extracting wealth from Black graduates and their families for another generation. About keeping us just solvent enough to work, but too indebted to build real power or stability. It's sharecropping by another name. They criminalized our literacy once. They segregated our schools. They privatized them. Now they want to trap us in lifelong debt for daring to get the education they once tried to deny us entirely. This bill ain't "beautiful." It's America doing what it's always done to make sure Black freedom comes at a price we can never quite pay off. —Dr. Stacey Patton is an award-winning journalist and author of "Spare The Kids: Why Whipping Children Won't Save Black America" and the forthcoming "Strung Up: The Lyching of Black Children In Jim Crow America."
