County Executive and Mayor Wrap Up the Milwaukee Holiday Drive

Generous Donors Help Address the Needs of House Fire Victims

The annual Milwaukee City-County Holiday Drive concluded recently with a strong showing of generosity.

Local contributors gave more than 1,700 items to this year's Drive, and those donations will assist Milwaukee area families who experience house fires.

The local chapter of the American Red Cross accepted the donations which included everything from basic toiletries to stuffed animals.

Again this year, the Milwaukee Brewers Community Foundation supported the drive complementing the hundreds of donations made by individuals across the city and county.

"Every year I look forward to this annual holiday drive. It truly shows what we can achieve when we come together as a community," County Executive David Crowley said. "It reminds me that, in Milwaukee County, we are at our best when we look out for one another."

"The commitment behind these contributions is admirable, making sure families have the resources they need in order to regain stability following a house fire," Mayor Cavalier Johnson said.

"From the bottom of my heart, I want to thank every person who took the time and contributed to this effort."

"Behind every donation is a story: a child who will clutch a stuffed animal for comfort and security, a parent who receives a toothbrush or a bar of soap and feels dignity and a sense of normalcy amid so much loss," Catherine Rabenstine, Regional Chief Executive Officer of the American Red Cross said. "These items may seem small, but their impact is profound."

Donations of new items were collected at numerous locations over the past three weeks. The Holiday Drive began 2007, and it has affirmed this community's charitable spirit in all the years since its inception.

RACE Shadows Every Assault on the Affordable Care Act

By Stacy M. Brown
Black Press USA Senior National Correspondent

The battles over the Affordable Care Act were never only about policy or the price of insurance. They were never simply arguments about federal subsidies, individual mandates, or the markets that hold the system together.

From the moment America elected a Black president and that president dared to place the health of the poor and the marginalized at the center of national law, a deeper truth rose to the surface.

That truth has followed the country for centuries. It was waiting for its next target. The target became Barack Obama. The instrument became Obamacare.

Long before Republicans vowed to "repeal and replace," the lines were already drawn.

The same forces that spent years questioning Obama's citizenship, intellect, and legitimacy turned their fury toward the most expansive health care protections in generations.

Black lawmakers and health equity advocates understood the stakes. They had spent years shaping the Affordable Care Act so it would cut into the country's long trail of racial health disparities.

Daniel Dawes, a leading figure in that fight, stated that the ACA was "the most comprehensive minority health law" in United States history and identified sixty-two provisions that "directly address inequities in health care."

The law carried the fingerprints of the people who fought for it. For African Americans who had faced a lifetime of inequitable access, predatory pricing, and the cruel arithmetic of race and illness, the ACA was a rare affirmation.

Obama spoke about it using language palatable to a country still clinging to the mythology of a post-racial nation, but the communities that long suffered under the weight of indifferent systems knew exactly what the law meant.

The backlash knew it, too.

Republican attacks intensified the moment the bill became law, but the pursuit of its destruction began before a single vote was cast. It followed the same path as the claims that Obama was not born in the United States.

WHEDA Invests $4.7 million to Strengthen Housing Counseling and Grow Pathways to Sustainable Homeownership

MADISON, Wis. – The Wisconsin Housing and Economic Development Authority (WHEDA) announced that 14 HUD-certified housing counseling agencies will receive $4.7 million in grant funding to expand financial education, pre-purchase homeowner education, and foreclosure prevention counseling services for thousands of Wisconsin families.

"Housing counseling gives people the knowledge they need to navigate the path to homeownership and make informed decisions," said Elmer Moore Jr., CEO and Executive Director of WHEDA.

"The Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago's investment ensures current homeowners and first-time buyers have the support to secure a stable home.

"Homeownership provides working families with stability and strengthens community connections. This partnership is a game-changer, and we are so very grateful."

The Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago (FHLBank Chicago) created and funded the Housing Counseling Resource Program (HCRP) to expand capacity for housing counseling to serve low- and moderate-income and underrepresented home buyers and existing homeowners.

The 2025-2027 HCRP builds on a prior three-year program that awarded $3.5 million in funds to nine HUD-certified agencies throughout Wisconsin, supporting thousands of Wisconsin households in learning important skills and accessing critical resources that set them on a path to owning a home.

"Together with WHEDA, we're expanding pathways to successful and sustainable homeownership across Wisconsin," said Katie Naftzger, Senior Vice President and Community

Newspapers have experienced a very difficult 2025. The economy, changing news gathering options, reduced outlets available for minority news, funding! Determining new strategies for reaching our readership has been a daily, nightly focus. An example is our daily digital news, today. We've moved with the demands. We remember the savvy, tenacity and vigilance of Mr Robert Thomas this Thanksgiving. Circulation was his heart. He loved meeting the readers and teaching young boys and girls how to work clean, honest jobs, that taught responsibility, integrity and punctuality. Two years from his post as Associate Publisher, we celebrate his wisdom, his knowledge of Milwaukee families and his insistence on best ways to meet your customer where they are and help them see new possibility through MCJ. In this season of thanks, hope and light, we remember Mr. T and the many youngsters who helped us saturate the inner city with the Milwaukee Community Journal. —Patricia O'Flynn Pattillo.

It echoed the same insistence that he was foreign, illegitimate, clever enough to reach the White House only through something other than talent or discipline. It came from the same places that insisted affirmative action must explain the achievements of a man who graduated from Columbia University and Harvard Law School.

Trump nurtured those claims for years, and he used them as a launchpad for his political identity. He became the chief promoter of birtherism.

As The Independent reported, Trump spent years asserting that Obama was secretly born in Kenya and that he only ended the crusade when confronted with the long-form birth certificate. But even then, he would not release his grip.

At the White House Correspondents Dinner in 2011, Obama addressed the conspiracy with biting precision, noting that Trump could "finally get back to the issues that matter."

Footage from the event captured Trump staring ahead as the audience laughed. Those close to him have said that night marked the moment he decided to run for president.

The resentment did not fade. According to Michael Cohen's memoir, Trump held "hatred and contempt" for Obama and even hired a man who resembled the 44th president so he could "ritualistically belittle the first Black president and then fired him."

Trump continued his public fixation, calling Obama "the most ignorant president in our history" and declaring that he "founded ISIS." He accused Obama of wiretapping him.

He mocked him repeatedly, even years after leaving office. The Independent documented that Trump "repeatedly called Obama a jerk" and continued to attack him at rallies.

This hostility toward Obama cannot be separated from the fury directed at the ACA. Obamacare became a symbol of something beyond policy. It became a symbol of a Black man's authorship over the nation's moral priorities.

In a country still wrestling with its stitched-in contradictions, the ACA represented a rebuke of the belief that the poor must earn their right to live. It dared to reduce disparities.

It dared to remove barriers. It dared to place humanity above profit.

Republicans answered year after year with votes to dismantle it. They drafted lawsuits aimed at wiping it from the books. They promised its end during the campaigns. Not once have they produced a plan that meets or exceeds its reach.

Politico, academic researchers, and public opinion studies have all shown that the hostility toward Obamacare has remained strongest among groups where resentment of Obama himself was strongest.

The Kaiser Family Foundation's polling showed that support for ACA tax credits drops sharply among Republican and MAGA voters, even as the same benefits remain popular when described without Obama's connection.

These conflicting responses reveal a political truth that is not accidental. It is structural.

The hatred of Obama and the hatred of Obamacare lived in the same house.

The ACA confronted the very inequalities that race created. It attempted to relieve the burden placed on Black Americans by centuries of withheld care and denied treatment.

It reduced racial gaps in health insurance coverage. It expanded Medicaid in states willing to accept it. It forced the country to look directly at disparities instead of treating them as the natural order.

Those gains came from a president who carried the weight of history and the expectations of a community often ignored until the moment it becomes politically convenient.

Obama knew the country he led. He knew the contradictions. He once noted that if he had a son, "he'd look like Trayvon," and the words drew a fiery response.

Every policy he touched carried the shadow of race, whether he said so publicly or not. A nation that has never resolved its fear of Black advancement reacted the only way it knows. It tried to destroy the work because it could not destroy the man.

Republicans continue their assault on the Affordable Care Act, not because the law failed but because the law succeeded. It made the country fairer. It made the poor healthier. It gave millions access to care they had long been denied.

And it stands as evidence that a Black president changed the material conditions of people who were never meant to be served.

One of the clearest explanations still comes from Daniel Dawes, who called the ACA "the most inclusive health law" in American history. He said, "It directly addresses inequities in health care."

The law did exactly what its creators set out to do. The fight against it did too.

MOST SINFUL CITIES IN AMERICA: Las Vegas isn't the only "Sin City" in America. In other cities, bad things happen and stay there, too!

(Columnist note: It's unusual to allow a guest commentary, however this report on 'sin' not only needs no rewrite or analysis. I have, however, included some commentary along the way.)

From Wallethub: From beer-loving Milwaukee to decadent New Orleans, the U.S. is filled with people, behaving illicitly. No place is innocent - we all have flaws, and at some point, we all have to pay for our vices.

Gambling addiction, for instance, leads to over $100 billion in losses for U.S. consumers every year, while smoking burns an over $600 billion hole in Uncle Sam's wallet annually.

Luckily for the saints among us—if there are any--- all American sins are not created or distributed equally.

To identify the darkest corners of America, WalletHub compared more than 180 U.S. cities across 37 key indicators of vices and illicit behavior.

Our data set ranges from violent crimes per capita to excessive drinking and adult entertainment establishments per capita.

Milwaukee was ranked a modest 75th. Our greatest sins were excessive beer drinking and gambling. Sodom and Gomorrah, Milwaukee is not.

Not surprisingly, Madison came in at 180 out of 182. Party town, drugs, rock and roll and bottle shaking between college classes.

Madison is 13th as the best cities for singles, while moderate Milwaukee is 71. That lower ranking may be linked to the fact it is almost impossible to find a Black woman without children.

Not by coincidence, Milwaukee was ranked 131 out of 180 for 'Fun Cities' study. Madison was seventh.

"Regardless of any particular religious tenets, certain activities are considered 'sinful' by society as a whole.

Sometimes, these activities are always bad, like violent crimes or identity theft. In other cases, they may be relatively harmless in moderation but incredibly destructive when not kept under control, such as alcohol use or gambling.

If Las Vegas is the king of sin cities, then 'Nawlins' must be the queen!

The most sinful cities are those where illicit activities and vices alike are the most widespread."

IN-DEPTH LOOK AT THE MOST SINFUL CITIES IN 2025

Las Vegas, NV

Las Vegas tops the list of the most sinful cities this year, unsurprisingly.

Sin City has the second-most casinos per capita, driving many people to lose their money in a failed quest for quick riches and creating the fourth-highest share of residents with gambling problems.

In addition, Las Vegas has the most adult entertainment options per capita, and residents search Google for terms relating to strip clubs, affairs and pornographic content more than people in most other cities.

Las Vegas also has the fifth-most fraud and identity theft complaints per capita, so greedy thieves are no stranger to the city.

Houston, TX

Houston is the second-most sinful place this year, featuring the third-highest number of adult entertainment establishments per capita and some of the highest Google search interest for terms relating to pornography, strip clubs and affairs.

On top of that, Houston's residents struggle with anger and hatred.

The city has the 21st-highest violent crime rate in the country and the 28th-highest number of aggravated assault offenses per capita.

It also had the fifth-highest number of mass shootings between January 2023 and June 2025.

Finally, many Houstonians have trouble with vices. For example, the city has the 29th-most drunk driving fatalities per capita, the eighth-highest share of residents with gambling problems, and some of the highest Google search interest for plastic surgery.

Los Angeles, CA

Los Angeles is the third-most sinful city in the U.S., in part due to violence committed by its residents.

Los Angeles has the third-highest share of students bullied on school property and the 14th-most hate crimes per capita.

It also had the eighth-most mass shootings between January 2023 and June 2025.

In addition, residents in Los Angeles may be a bit less giving than people in other cities. Only 24% of residents volunteer, the fifth-lowest percentage in the country.

Residents also give less than 4% of their adjusted gross income to charity, the 24th-lowest percentage among the more than 180 cities in our study.

To determine the most sinful cities in America, WalletHub compared 182 cities — including the 150 most populated U.S. cities, plus at least two of the most populated cities in each state — across seven key dimensions: 1) Anger & Hatred, 2) Jealousy, 3) Excesses & Vices, 4) Greed, 5) Lust, 6) Vanity and 7) Laziness.

We examined those dimensions using 37 relevant metrics listed below with their corresponding weights.

Each metric was graded on a 100-point scale, with a score of 100 representing the highest level of sinfulness.

County Executive David Crowley brings together local leaders, partners to address food insecurity during Holiday Season

During a volunteer event at the Marcia P. Coggs Health and Human Services Center, County Executive David Crowley, County Board Chairwoman Marcelia Nicholson-Bovell, and food pantry partners provided an update on Milwaukee County's efforts to provide supplemental food assistance for residents affected by the recent government shutdown and ongoing food insecurity challenges.

In October, what began as an urgent response to uncertainty around federal FoodShare benefits quickly grew into a powerful community effort. In response to the FoodShare delay, Milwaukee County and the City of Milwaukee launched a joint food drive in partnership with Feeding America Eastern Wisconsin and NourishMKE. Since launching in late October, the initiative collected more than $93,000 in monetary donations and over 9,000 pounds of food, helping stabilize families during a time of record demand at local food pantries. These contributions equate to more than 273,000 meals for the community.

"In Milwaukee County, more than 230,000 residents rely on FoodShare, including older adults, children, veterans, people with disabilities, and many more. Simply put, access to food assistance and nutrition programs is critical to the health and prosperity of Wisconsin working families," said County Executive Crowley.

"One family struggling is one too many. As the cost of food, housing, and healthcare continues to climb, there are too many Wisconsinites fighting to make ends meet. That's why we must continue working together to ensure people in Milwaukee County and across Wisconsin have basic access to the food assistance and supportive services they need."

Even with Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits restored, food pantries experienced increased demand for fresh foods that continue to persist across the community. That's why in November, Chairwoman Nicholson-Bovell and the Milwaukee County Board of Supervisors allocated $150,000 from the County's contingency fund to the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) to provide supplemental food assistance for residents and families.

"As Chairwoman, authoring this legislation was about providing the necessary $150,000 to keep families fed during these challenging times and about naming food apartheid for what it is — a public health emergency in Milwaukee County," said County Board Chairwoman Nicholson-Bovell.

"This effort recognizes that often food insecurity is rooted in decades of inequity and disinvestment. It also strengthens partnerships with trusted community organizations and drives long-term, systemic change across county departments. Together, we are moving Milwaukee County toward a future where every family has the stability, dignity, and access to healthy food they deserve."

DHHS has now partnered with 13 local food pantries to distribute nutritious, perishable foods to households most impacted by food insecurity during the holiday season.

"Feeding America Eastern Wisconsin is grateful to County Executive Crowley and Chairwoman Nicholson for their swift action as food pantries across Milwaukee County face some of the highest demand in years.

"Their investment makes it possible for us to source locally-produced eggs and dairy, which are high-needed staples for our pantry partners, that will help thousands of families through the holiday season," said Matt Stienstra, Director of Advocacy and Community Engagement, Feeding America Eastern Wisconsin.

"NourishMKE is a network of free community food centers and our team has been working tirelessly throughout the year to meet the increasing need for our services. The SNAP crisis brought the issue to light for everyone to see and the response has been overwhelming. From food drives to volunteering to donations — the people of Milwaukee have sent a clear message that it is our duty to feed our neighbors," said Valerie MacMillan, Executive Director, NourishMKE Community Food Centers.

"County Executive Crowley and our Supervisors have emerged as champions of food justice, bringing our community together over something we all share in common: the need for nourishment.

"The collective response from our fellow Milwaukeeans demonstrates that when we work together we can do something as powerful as nourishing every person in our community. We urge you to continue supporting your neighborhood food pantry in any way that you can. Your small actions today build resilient communities for generations."

WE HAVE BLACK MILWAUKEE'S ATTENTION!

Surprised by the Headlines About White Men and College? Time for a Reality Check!

By Ben Jealous

(TriceEdneyWire.com) - The headlines this month about White men, college admissions, and the fallout from ending affirmative action startled a lot of people.

Stories of declining enrollment and shrinking opportunity for young White men were treated as if they had materialized out of nowhere.

Many found it surprising. I didn't.

It reminded me of a conversation I had a little over a decade ago on a Delta Airlines flight from Atlanta to Memphis—one of those brief moments in transit that stays with you because it tells the truth long before the data catches up.

A White man in a bright red shirt with a Confederate flag over his heart sat down next to me.

He stuck out his hand and said, "Hi, I'm Bill." As he introduced himself, I looked more closely at his shirt and realized that under the flag it said, "Ole Miss Football."

It was a booster shirt. We chatted. He asked what I did. I told him I led the NAACP. He blinked, then leaned in with a sincerity I recognized.

"Ben," he asked, "what's the purpose of affirmative action?"

I told him the truth: its purpose is to help dismantle nepotism as the operating system of this country.

He slapped his knee. "Sign me up for that. But tell me this—what good does that do for the boys in my family?"

Then he told me what he meant. The men in his family had been, as he put it, "in and out of prison since we came here on the wrong side of the Georgia penal colony."

He was the lone exception—a gifted high school football player who earned a scholarship to Ole Miss.

A coach introduced him to business leaders in Memphis. That was his way out. The booster shirt wasn't a provocation. It was a keepsake from the only open door his family ever had.

Bill's story is not the one America tells about White men. But it is the story millions are living. And it mirrors something larger happening across this country.

Every major leap forward in opportunity in this country has depended on multiracial coalitions.

Progress comes when we face the full truth—not when we ignore parts of it. Which brings us to the conversation we are actually having. Or rather, not having. It's time to readjust our thinking about White men, college admissions, and DEI. The left and the right have both turned this into a culture war when what we really need is a reality check.

On the right, the headlines became a grievance weapon—proof, some claim, that diversity efforts were out to "replace" White men.

On the left, the reaction was defensive, as if acknowledging hardship among White families would somehow undermine the fight for racial justice.

Neither response had much to do with the truth. And if we're wondering why we can't seem to have a real conversation about opportunity, we should start where political scientist Martin Gilens warned us decades ago.

By portraying poverty disproportionately with Black faces, American media helped make the white poor—and much of the working class—invisible.

That distortion robbed us of the ability to see the full picture of suffering and the full map of shared struggle.

When entire communities are invisible, their pain doesn't get counted.

Their boys don't get counted. Their decline doesn't make the front page until it shows up as a political shock.

That invisibility hurts everyone. It hurts White families like Bill's.

It hurts Black and brown families navigating the same broken ladders. It hurts the communities trying to build stable futures for their children.

Before we talk solutions, we need full visibility—a willingness to see all who are struggling, not just the ones who fit our old narratives.

And yes, part of that conversation may involve something like affirmative action for working-class families—including White men.

Not the caricatured version people argue about on cable news, but the real kind colleges have long used: giving a boost to students from low-income families, high-poverty neighborhoods, under-resourced schools, and overlooked rural counties—from Appalachia to the Mississippi Delta to remote parts of Alaska.

Race-based affirmative action sat alongside these class- and place-based efforts; it never replaced them.

And even after the Supreme Court's decision, colleges can still use class-based affirmative action because it recognizes a basic truth: A child's chances in life are shaped powerfully by zip code, wealth, and opportunity.

The headlines surprised many because they showed only one part of the story. It's time we tell the whole one.

Only then can we rebuild opportunity—for Bill, for the boys in his family, and for every family fighting for a fair shot.

Ben Jealous is a professor of practice at the University of Pennsylvania and a former national president and CEO of the NAACP. His latest book is Never Forget Our People Were Always Free.

A Time For Reassessing Dollars And Priorities

By Dr. John E. Warren, Publisher San Diego Voice & Viewpoint Newspaper, Chairman of the Board of Directors, NNPA

While the President wrestles with understanding what "Affordability" means the rest of us clearly see the reality every time we open our wallets for a purchase from food, to gas, to what used to be the purchase of things we liked or wanted but did not need.

Sometimes, pain is good because it helps us take another look at what we consider important in our lives.

This can be important information for the marginalized members of our communities who too often appear to seem unimportant to those who have had the big bucks and really did need our dollars.

But now as prices are going up on everything while the quantity of what we are purchasing is getting smaller and smaller, those dollars that once seemed so unnecessary are now becoming more and more important.

African Americans spend in excess of 4 trillion dollars a year in America and yet we demand very little in return.

It is fascinating each year when we see the nation gearing up for Good Friday and yet, year after year, 99 percent of the merchants do not do business with our media outlets.

We complain about how people treat us while we continue to do business with them. While the nation begins to wrestle with "affordability," we the people of color have lived with and continue to live with the reality of never having enough.

"We the people" have a real opportunity to change the dynamics of all that's happening in America.

The reason for the healthcare scare is due to the racism of those White members of Congress who have already drunk the Koolaid of Donald Trump's hatred and racism while ignoring the Oath of Office; each of them swore to "Protect and Defend" the Constitution.

As we pray as intercessors, let us not forget to hold accountable those who are in office thinking about re-election and those who are thinking about seeking office.

For peoples of color, let us first start with ourselves with more conversation and less ego. Let's help each other make wise financial decisions; let's spend less time on fast food outlets with rising prices for less; let's reconsider those cigarette purchases, sodas, chips, candy and liquor.

Let's substitute Jesus for Coca Cola's Santa and give Corporate America an opportunity to rethink "affordability" and whether they can really afford to do business without our dollars.

Remember, our wallets represent a vote each and every time we open them. Let's help a lot of people think about "affordability" as we have had to do all along.

WHEDA Invests $4.7 million to Strengthen Housing Counseling and Grow Pathways to Sustainable Homeownership

Investment Officer at FHLBank Chicago.

"Housing counseling provides families with the knowledge and confidence to make informed decisions and create stability that lasts."

HCRP grantee agencies serve communities across the state, providing in-person and virtual education, counseling, and access to supportive resources that equip residents with the practical tools to:

- Build credit readiness and financial literacy
- Access down payment assistance and affordable mortgage programs
- Understand property taxes and insurance, and gather helpful tips on home maintenance
- Protect homes through foreclosure prevention counseling

This grant enables awarded agencies to build capacity and increase their impact by expanding staffing, implementing new engagement and outreach strategies, upgrading critical technologies, and expanding program offerings.

"The Housing Counseling Resource Program has helped the United Community Center build capacity to provide critical support and services that have served as a lifeline for first-time buyers trying to enter the housing market," said Fernando Campos, Director of Neighborhood Development, United Community Center serving Milwaukee and Racine.

"In addition to HCRP, with support from Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago's Downpayment Plus® Program and our network of participating lenders, nearly two hundred households received the critical $10,000 boost that made homeownership possible.

Help they simply could not have secured on their own. In total, 278 families have crossed the threshold into their first home, a milestone that strengthens not only their financial futures but the stability and vitality of the neighborhoods they now call home."

"La Casa de Esperanza's homebuyer program helped me understand what I needed to do to buy a home," said Kathryn H., a homebuyer and client of La Casa de Esperanza.

"The grant I secured through the Downpayment Plus® Program was extremely helpful, and I didn't need to spend all my savings on the down payment. I had been saving for years, and I finally did it.

Now I can afford to update my home and make it my own. Being a homeowner makes me feel free, and it's relaxing to know I have my own place and my payments are controlled."

Wisconsin residents seeking to purchase a home or struggling with their mortgage payments should contact a HCRP grantee to receive assistance today. Contact information for each organization is available at www.wheda.com/hcrp.
